He might have been less elated had he heard Julie's comment when his message was conveyed to her.

"Schofield? Who on earth—? Don't know the man."

Julie was half asleep still; her head was splitting, and there was a queer dread in her heart.

She felt as if someone had told her she was about to start suffering all over again a pain which she had but recently succeeded in deadening, a pain which had not yet quite reawakened to life, but of which she was faintly subconscious.

The unexpected meeting last night with Chittenham had been a knife turning in that scarcely closed wound; she had spoken truly in Switzerland when she had said to him:

"I'm rather afraid of loving. I go in for things so thoroughly when I tackle them at all—much too thoroughly for my peace of mind."

It had been so with her brief episode with Chittenham. In all the weeks that had passed since they first met, he had never been out of her mind for a moment. Even when she was at her gayest and noisiest, something in her heart seemed to be always groping like a blind man, seeking him despairingly.

Now the suffering had come back again at its most acute, and Julie was afraid.

She had slept very little all night in spite of too much champagne and a splitting headache; and she was irritated when Bim came into her room with Schofield's message.

"Don't know the man—send him away," she said.

"He was here last night. He brought you home," Bim said patiently. "He wants you to lunch with him."

"Oh!" Julie rolled over on her back with a stifled groan. "Lunch! Perish the thought!" She sat up reluctantly. "Give me some tea, Bim, there's a saint."

"In a minute. Mr. Schofield is waiting on the 'phone."

"Oh, well, say what you like—anything."

Bim went away without answering, and when she returned Julie was still sitting up in bed, her hands clasped round her knees, and a little frown pain between her eyes.

"What did you say?"

"I said you would be delighted to lunch with him, and he is calling for you at half-past one."

Julie scowled.

"I told you to send him away."

"You didn't. You told me to say what I liked, so I said you would be delighted. I like that man."

"Go with him yourself, then."

"I would have gone if he had asked me."

Julie lay back on her pillows.

"Where's the tea?"

"Just coming. Is your head very bad?"

"The very devil." Julie followed Bim to the door with envious eyes. "How on earth do you manage to look so fresh at this ungodly hour?" she grumbled.

Bim turned round with a faint smile. "I don't drink too much for one thing," she said lightly.

Presently she came back with tea. She put the tray down on a bedside table and looked at Julie with her kind, frank eyes.

"Why don't you give it up?" she asked casually. "If you go on at this rate you'll be dead, or an old woman, in another twelve months. You haven't got the constitution to stand it. Think how much happier you were six months ago!"

"Think what a good little girl I was!" Julie scoffed. "Early to bed and early to rise— Hurry up with that tea!"

Bim shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, you must go your own way," she said.

"I seem to be going your way this morning," Julie said crossly. "Sending me out to lunch with a dull dog whose face I can't even remember."

"He said you told him he might ring up."

"Did I?" Julie laughed mirthlessly. "Then I must have been more drunk than I thought I was."

"Julie, don't say such things."

"Why not? They're true, and I thought you believed in speaking the truth and shaming the devil."

"I don't believe in cutting off one's nose to spite one's face."

"Well, don't preach!" Julie swallowed her tea at a gulp "What sort of a morning is it?"

"Heavenly. I was awake at six and the sparrows were chirping as if they were in the heart of the country."

"How poetical!"

Bim sat down on the side of the bed and laid her hand on Julie's.

"Let's chuck this flat and go down to the cottage," she said earnestly. "You know how you used to love it. The daffodils will be out, and the woods—"

"The woods will be sodden and we shall get rheumatism and colds in our heads," Julie said ruthlessly. "No, thank you! There are daffodils in London, too, if that's all you want. I'll buy some for you when I go out—or, at least, I'll make Lawrence Schofield buy some. Where are you going?"

"To finish dressing."

There was a great sadness in Bim's face as she went back to her own room. She knew that nothing she could say or do would be of any use. There was a surprising streak of obstinate recklessness in Julie which she had only just discovered.

"And the more I say, the worse she will be," Bim told herself sadly. "Perhaps if I let her go her own way she'll tire herself to a standstill."

"I won't forget the daffodils," Julie said when some time later she poked into Bim's room to say goodbye. "And I shall be back at three or thereabouts, barring accidents."

"Has Mr. Schofield come?" Bim asked.

"Yes," Julie chuckled. "He's all got up regardless," she said flippantly, and he brought me a bunch of orchids as big as a haystack! If only he knew how I hate orchids, poor man! Never mind, I've no doubt it was kindly meant."

She looked quite cheerful and smiling, but Bim was not deceived. She knew that the careful touch of color on Julie's cheeks and on her lips covered a great weariness.

"Well, have a good time!" she said.

"You bet." Julie went away, closing the door, but in a moment she was back again. "I believe he means business!" she said in a stage whisper. "He hasn't come in an ordinary common or garden taxi; he's hired a huge car! We do see life, don't we?"

She made a little grimace and disappeared, and a moment later Bim saw the big car glide smoothly away.

"It's awfully good of you to come," Schofield said nervously.

There was a little mirror on the opposite side of the car, and he kept looking into it at Julie's reflection.

In all his life he had never driven with such an attractive woman; he thought she was perfection; it gave him a warm glow about his heart to see his orchids fastened into her coat.

"It's awfully good of you to ask me," Julie said. She looked at him and was touched by the genuine pleasure in his eyes.

"Are you living in town?" she asked.

"I am only staying in an hotel at the moment," Schofield answered, and then added: "I think I told you last night."

Julie had forgotten everything about last night except those little cameos of pain in which Giles Chittenham had featured.

"Of course you did," she said hurriedly, and racked her brains to remember what else he had told her.

"I shall get a house—at least I hope to get a house some day, if things plan out as I—as I want them to," he said.

"How nice!" Julie tried to be enthusiastic. "It's very expensive living in London," she added.

Schofield colored; this was the opportunity he had wanted.

"Fortunately I am quite well off," he said almost with embarrassment.

"How nice!" Julie said again. "Is this your car?" she asked, knowing quite well it was not.

"No—I hired it for today. Most of the taxis are so uncomfortable," he explained. "Later on I shall buy a car if—"

He hesitated, and Julie added for him kindly:

"If things plan out as you hope they will."

"Yes, that is what I was going to say."

SALVAGE PARTY FAIL AT WRECK

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press.)— The problem of salvaging the $750,000 general cargo of the Cairn Line steamer Cairntorr was solved in a dramatic manner early yesterday when the big freighter suddenly collapsed and disappeared beneath the surface on Outer Island rocks, on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where she crashed late Tuesday afternoon while on voyage from Montreal to British ports.

A telegram received yesterday from Captain C. J. Stuart, Marine Surveyor, who had proceeded to the scene in the interests of the cargo underwriters, stated that he had gone out to the reef yesterday morning to make a survey of the wreck, only to find that the remains of the Cairntorr had dropped out of sight before daybreak.

Captain Stuart had travelled to Wolfe Bay from Quebec, which is some 600 miles south, on board the wrecking tug Strathcona, which, on finding that there was no possibility of moving the wrecked freighter, left to return to port. Captain Baker of the Cairntorr and twenty-one members of the crew were still at Wolfe Bay, where they had taken shelter after leaving the ship in a lifeboat within an hour after the stranding. It was not known by what means they would be returned to their homes.

MAN KILLED IN TUNNEL

Four Others Escape Death By Leaping To Safety In Windsor.

ONE INJURED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 31 (Canadian Press).—One man was killed, one was critically injured and four others escaped death or serious injury by leaping to safety, when several tons of clay poured into a tunnel six workmen were digging beneath the M.C.R. tracks on Sandwich Street, in Amherstburg.

Isaac Ujanen, 35, died almost instantly from injury, and when two large lumps of clay, each weighing 300 or 400 pounds, fell upon his stomach. His left left was also broken in two places. He was dead when his companions removed the clay and earth surrounding him.

Ernest Mulder, 45, sustained a broken leg, two fractured ribs, shock and possible internal injuries. He was rushed at once to Grace Hospital, Windsor, where surgeons said early this afternoon that he would probably recover.

An inquest will be held probably today.

The decorations were elaborate and very pretty. A tall black witch, with conventional garments, hooked nose and pointed hat, was at the door. The pillars of the large hall were wound with black and orange streamers which also formed an overhead decoration, and were based with stalks of wheat. Black and orange paper encircled the standards of the serving tables which were draped with cloths of Hallowe'en style, with colored designs appropriate to the season The stage was also decorated with streamers in two colors of Hallowe'en, centred by a large black cat face. Borders which were very effective were contrived of pumpkins lit by candles. The large tea table was arranged with a central witch in black and orange paper, and silver candelabra holding lighted orange candles. Tea was poured by Miss Agnes Grant and Miss Norah Shevlin, assisted by the Misses Gladys Costello, Gene O'Brien Madeline Whaley, Jean Duffus, Margaret Carroll, Hilda Sullivan, Noreen MacPherson, Adele Picard, Helen Archambault, Marion Fitzpatrick, Marcelle Tobin, Mildred McDonald, Doreen Sheehy, Veronica Scollard, Mary Torpey and Clare MacPherson. Those in charge of the decorations were Miss Annie Simons and Miss Lottie Hogan, assisted by the Misses Marguerite Conners and Bernardine MacPherson. Miss Kay Doyle officiated at the door. During the tea hour, a delightful musical program was given, including selections by St. Peter's High School Orchestra, a trio composed of Miss Hilda Sullivan at the piano and Noreen MacPherson and Joseph Nolan, playing violins, Veronica Scollard and Mary Reynolds in a piano duett and Margaret Carroll, Mary Reynolds and Bernardine MacPherson, in solo piano numbers. During the afternoon, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and Rev. Father Costello came in for a short time.

SIFTED FLOUR

When baking powder or soda are used, they should always be sifted with the flour. A level teaspoonful of soda to one quart of flour should be used when sour milk or cream is the moistener.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Nightgown and scarf set are made in flesh-colored silk crepe trimmed with lace.

It is not a mere fad to provide matching scarfs to go with your nightgowns. They are not merely pretty and amusing, these squares, triangles or oblongs of crepe de chine edged with lace—they are useful and comfortable as well.

Drawn about the shoulders or round the neck when one lies abed for breakfast they provide just the little protection needed—a service they also do when one indulges in the luxury of reading by the light of a bedside lmap. With the last word of the last chapter of that amazing new novel, off slips the scarf and snap goes the light. It is really much easier than getting one's arms out of a bed jacket, and the lace-trimmed scarf looks quite attractive hanging onone's bedpost.

If you want to give some school or college girl a Christmas present that will have that characteristic of trickiness that is sure to please her, if you are planning your contribution to some engaged girl's bridal shower, then by all means buy or make a lace-trimmed crepe de chine nightgown with a scarf to match. If you make the little set you will need no pattern for the scarf. A square of the material edged with lace makes one of the sort that can be folded diagonally to form a triangle. If you are making two nightgowns of the same material then you might make triangular scarfs, since one square of the material will provide the two. If your material is wide and the nightgown narrow you may have a strip of material left after cutting that will be wide enough for one of the oblong sort.

After all is said concerning fashionable lingerie colors, flesh color or a very light pink is most generally admired and becoming. The new note is given by lace trimming of a pronounced cream or ecru; Sometimes black lace is used with flesh-colored crepe de chine. Orchid is dainty and pretty but less likely to be becoming. Pure white trimmed with ecru has an air of good breeding and as a departure from the usual light blue with cream-colored lace is a good selection.

WHITE'S AUTHENTICITY

In spite of lovely and gorgeous colors for evening, white gowns this season win the praise of many smart women. One with square neck and long, full skirt that dipped in square points is of white georgette embossed in a silver and white coin dot design.

FUR AND VELVET

A lovely formal daytime ensemble has a soft blonde velvet frock with a long jacket of blonde caracul with scarf collar and puff sleeves.

BERRY BRUSH

A small vegetable brush is invaluable in helping to force berries, grapes and other small fruits through a sieve.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

DID any of you mothers ever try to write a letter or plan a dress for Ethel out of the old suit that Aunt Edith sent while the family was passing the time in the same room? Perhaps Mary was washing the dishes, Jean and Bessie "p'tending" some game that required such a lot of plans that "he should be a robber" and "she should be the lady! What did you do? Did you stamp your foot and say that this had to stop? If it was the hour after supper and the kitchen was the warm spot, hadn't they a right there as well as yourself?

Perhaps the thing to do would be to give the youngsters a while to play and then suggest that they get books and settle down and give mother a chance as she had given them their turn, and it was now up to them to play fair.

Some one said to me the other day that she was glad to have the colder weather for the sake of being able to prepare a variety of dishes for her family. I asked if she had discovered any new recipes as her remark seemed to indicate that she had found something different to the usual cool weather food.

She told me of a supper dish of sliced smoked beef, creamed and served with buttered toast. These may be old to some of you, but I had never eaten the dish and it sounded good to me. Back when I was small my dad, who is a Jack-of-all-trades, used to prepare his own smoked beef, and I suppose that is why I was taken with the thought of the concoction.

Another dish, a pudding this time, very quickly prepared, is made of a sauce of ½ cup of sugar, two cups of water and a handful of raisins, with a little butter. This is boiled and a mixture of one cup of flour and two teaspoons of baking powder and a little salt dropped in the sauce just as the family begins the meal, or twenty minutes before required.

A lady of Peterborough whom I had the good fortune to visit on baking day gave me a slice of orange bread that was, I thought, delicious. She said that she had had a number of requests for this recipe, but had not yet written them out for her friends, so that if any of those friends see this they may know that it is the desired recipe.

Cut the rind of three small or two large oranges into thin strips. Cook in salt water until soft, usually one-half hour. Drain and cook in one cup of sugar and one-third cup of water until syrup is very thick. While warm, add one egg, one cup of milk, three cups of flour, four tablespoons of baking powder and a little salt. Bake in a slow oven for one hour.

Those of us who were not able to attend the different musical competitions at the Kiwanis Fair were given a chance to hear the winners in a very fine concert on Monday. It was inspiring to hear so many beautiful selections both vocal and instrumental, and to realize the degrees of efficiency to which these contestants have attained. It seemed to bring home to me the fact that these people had been studying for years when I saw the younger performers doing their part, which was no small one, I assure you.

I saw the other day that Galli Curci advises that children be started on their musical careers at eight years of age, and some who may have a more musical feeling even before that. I know of one small boy in Peterborough who was started at the age of five who is progressing famously. He is now at the age recommended by Galli Curci as that at which to begin. In his case he belongs to a very musical family, so that may be one reason that he has done so well.

Do not let the lack of a rented costume or an elaborate one prevent you from attending the Hallowe'en party given by The Examiner tonight. Last year I saw a very fetching lady arrayed in a befrilled and beflounced white gown of the vintage of 1908. I know personally that the lady in question had to hold her breath even longer and tighter than did her sister who originally wore the gown, but she managed when once "done up" to stay that way, with the exception of the odd hook or eye that gave way.

If there are not any ancient dresses in the family, take that old pair of drapes and make a Chinese outfit from it. Your pigtail will be quite convincing if made of strips of old black stockings braided. A rain hat to protect the pigtail can be fashioned from a large circle of quite stiff paper with four tucks tapering to nothing at the centre to make a wide-spreading cone.

• • • • • • •

I have seen pirates who wore old trousers cut to tatters at the knee, a patch over one eye and a very dangerous wooden or cardboard dagger slipped into a sash made of big sister's three-cornered handkerchief tie; there have been dear girls who are the tiresome brothers of the family in every-day life; there have been handsome boys who are charming daughters the rest of the year, and I could go on and tell you of dozens of other costumes if I didn't think that you all have a streak of ingenuity that will help you dress for this wonderful party.

Don't forget to ask those friends who are driving down-town in the car to see the parade to conform with the request of The Examiner and the instructions of the police as to areas for parking. It is a dangerous thing as well as being awkward for those in the parade to have cars crowding on the line of march. Small children are apt to lag, and if caught by some vehicle in the parade and a car, are in danger of injury.

GLOVE SECRET

The French know how to launder washable gloves perfectly. Their secret lies in the fact that they use tepid soap suds for washing, tepid soap suds for rinsing and for the last tepid suds they rinse in, they add a tablespoon of glycerine.

EASILY BEATEN

Add a pinch of salt or sugar, either one, to egg whites that you are beating. Itaids in quick beating.

GILT FRAMES

Gilt frames can be cleaned with onion water. Use a soft cloth dipped in water in which onions were boiled. Polish with white of egg.

DEVILLED EGGS

Devilled eggs served with canapes as an appetizer before dinners, are twice as attractive if you put the mixed yolks through the pastry tube in fancy patterns.

PRETTY DESSERT

Candy pears, using a few old fashioned cinnamon drops to color them, and serve either with mousse or with soft custard and whipped cream.

UNBROKEN STALKS

If you open canned asparagus from the top, the stalks will slip out without breaking. It is much more attractive unbroken, whether used in salad or creamed.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SHOOTING PIGS.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily stood on the edge of the cranberry bog, looking all around with his bright eyes, trying to see who it was that had been throwing the red bullets at him, hitting him on the nose and ears. For the rabbit gentleman had gathered a tall, silk hat full of cranberries so Nurse Jane could make a pie.

Then he had gone to the edge of the bog to see if there were enough berries so Mr. Stubtail, the bear gentleman, might have some. And when, after finding a lot of berries, Uncle Wiggily went back where he had left his hat, lo and behold! it was gone!

But right away he felt himself being pelted with cranberry bullets. For the dark red, hard fruit, as large as small marbles, seemed to hit like bullets when landing on Uncle Wiggily's nose.

"Who can be shooting at me?" thought Uncle Wiggily and as he looked around another cranberry went kerbunk on the back of his neck.

Down he ducked behind the stump and the next cranberry bullet that was shot at him hit the bark with a "ping!" and broke so that the juice splattered all over.

"That is no way to treat cranberries!" thought the rabbit. "If any of the Bad Chaps are throwing them at me I wish they'd stop!"

But more berries pelted through the air and then Uncle Wiggily heard a voice shout:

"There! I hit you that time!" "Yes, but this time I'm going to make a hit!" called another voice.

"Dear me! Th re are two of them!" said Mr. Longears. "I wish I had the Police Dog here to help me!"

Uncle Wiggily looked around the corner of the stump behind which he was hiding and, as he did so, he saw Floppy Twistytail, one of the fat little pig boys, run out of the bushes. Floppy had a pop gun in his paws.

"Look out, Floppy!" called Uncle Wiggily. "There are Bad Chaps in the bog. They have been shooting cranberries at me. Maybe they'll shoot you!"

Floppy seemed surprised at seeing Uncle Wiggily, but the little pig did not answer, running on towar danother clump of bushes. And, all of a sudden, out of these bushes jumped Curly Twistytail, who was a brother pig to Floppy.

Curly also had a pop gun and Uncle Wiggily called to him:

"Watch out for the Bad Chaps, Curly! They may shoot you with cranberry bullets as they shot at me!"

But Curly, though he seemed surprised to see Uncle Wiggily, did not answer. Then he and Floppy ran toward each other, shooting their popguns and shouting:

Bing! Bang! Bung."

Out of the popguns of the shooting pigs flew hard, red cranberries. Those that Floppy shot hit his brother Curly, and those that Curly shot hit his brother Floppy And some of the cranberries shot by both little piggie boys, went "ker-bang!" and "ker-bunk!" on Uncle Wiggily's pink, twinkling nose.

"Hold on there, boys! Stop it!" cried the rabbit gentleman. "Those are my cranberries you are shooting away. Stop it!"

Then Floppy and Curly stopped shooting their popguns, for they were empty of cranberries now and, laughing and shouting at the fun they had had, the pigs went to where Uncle Wiggily sat on the stump.

"What's the game?" asked the rabbit.

"Why," grunted Floppy, "Curly and I were walking along with our popguns, wishing we had something to shoot in them, and right here we found a tall silk hat full of the red things. So we took some and loaded our guns and we were playing Indian, shooting the berries. They don't hurt much if they hit you."

"Well, some hurt my nose," said Uncle Wiggily with a laugh as he rubbed it. "But I'll forgive you. So you didn't know I had gathered those berries for Nurse Jane to make a pie?"

"No," said Curly, "we didn't." They gave back Uncle Wiggily's hat and helped him gather more berries for the pie and then the two little pigs went home with Uncle Wiggily pretending they were soldiers to guard him from the Bad Chaps. And no Bad Chaps came.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects dominate today, according to astrology, and conditions are promising for most activities on the planet Earth.

It is pre-eminently a sway under which to look after one's financial affairs and should be favorable for the collection of money.

Newspapers should benefit greatly from this configuration which seems to presage extraordinary feats in journalism and many sensations.

Writers are well directed at this time which seems to be fortunate for dramatists and poets.

Neptune is in a place supposed to encourage clearness of vision and quick comprehension of public questions.

Much fogginess may be experienced, however, in the American mind, which will be affected by too much oratory of a contradictory character.

Under this direction of the stars men who are leaders should be stimulated and inspired, for the horoscope contains much of promise for the United States.

American diplomats come under aspects that indicate much important work in the next few weeks.

Much wisdom will be required in the settlement of certain international questions, among which are several that will be suddenly presented.

The young are subject to a planetary government that is most favorable to their intellectual development and super men and super women may be looked for within a decade, it is foretold.

Owing to strong reaction in favor of brain associated with beauty girls may find men rather indifferent to average feminine charm.

This is read as an auspicious day for beginning at once training and girls should seek p.. ical symmetry.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in which it is wise to avoid publicity. Changes may be unlucky.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with bright minds and ability to succeed. Many writers are subjects of this sign of Scorpio which is believed to impart eloquence of pen and voice. They usually have great tac and often are first-rate story-tellers. Girls are generally robust and many brunettes belong to Scorpio.

FLAPPER DESIGN DUE TO CHEMIST

By NEA Service.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Oct. 31.—Synthetic clothing—to say nothing of synthetic something else—is responsible for the design of the modern flapper.

And the chemist, according to the American Chemical Society, also made the clothing possible. He it is who has produced the processes for making "swell" materials, such as silks and satins at moderate cost.

For all of which the flapper is, no doubt, all to the whoopee.

War pensioners in England number about one million.

LYRICS OF LIFE

LET US PRAY

Let us pray, not only when
A broken reed the help of men,
Not alone when terrors sweep
O'er the bosom of the deep.
Let us pray, but not alone
In the sorrows we have known.
Every hour and every day
Let us pray.

Let us pray, when joy is ours,
We shall pick no poisoned flow'rs,
That the paths we frolic in
Shall not lead us into sin.
Let us pray, for danger rides
Even on the fairest tides.
All the time and all the way
Let us pray.

Let us pray for some success
That shall bring us happiness,
Not alone for gold to spend
But to serve some better end.
Let us pray the wealth we gain
Shall not make us mean or vain;
More than ever let us say,
"Let us pray."

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HATE TO MAKE MISTAKES

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Every mistake osts something. We hate to make mistakes because we don't want to give something for nothing. Every mistake exacts a penalty. It is chalked up on the wrong side of the ledger of life. Just as we are anxious to increase our bank account we hate to make mistakes which decrease our credit—in terms of money, prestige, time, energy, self respect, pride and the rest of the coinage of our human existence.

A mistake is costly and embarrassing. It signifies that the one who made the mistake is guilty of one or more of a number of uncomplimentary traits and human failings. A mistake involves stupidity, forgetfulness, ignorance, awkwardness, sluggishness, poor judgment, everything that is undesirable and for which we reproach and demote men.

We all make mistakes and gladly admit this as an abstract principle, but we do not care to be caught in any specific mistake and do our best to shift the blame in case we find ourselves in bad.

It is not expected of mortals to get along without making mistakes. But the fewer we make the more self confidence and self respect we have for ourselves and the greater is our prestige in the eyes of others. The loss of prestige is the main objection to making mistakes. No one will trust you with an important mission if you are known to be a bungler. And the man who makes too many mistakes soon comes to distrust himself.

The story is told of a party of hunters who were lost in the woods and were in great danger of freezing to death. Finally they found some sort of shelter and made preparation to spend the night there. They gathered some wood for a fire which was to serve the purpose of keeping off the wild beasts of the forest and to keep from freezing. They had only one match between them and death. It was a matter of gravest importance as to who was to strike the match. A vote was taken and the match was entrusted to the man who had the respect and confidence of the group. No bungler would get the vote under those conditions.

We hate to make a mistake because we have everything to lose and nothing to gain by it.

NEVER SAW HIM, BUT—

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Oct. 31.—Emily Waterhouse never saw her Uncle Albert, but she learned that he died intestate in 1926. She filed claim for a share of the estate. This was granted and redistribution of the estate ordered among the known heirs. Miss Waterhouse was born four months after her father's death, which checked with report of her uncle's estate to the effect that George Waterhouse, a brother, had no children when he died in 1893.

While H.M.S. Durban was visiting Santa Barbara, Cal., the other day, Lieut. Windsor—better known to the world as Prince George, youngest son of the King—obtained shore-leave to attend a house-party at Montecito. After leaving the warship, however, he changed his plans and motored to Hollywood. There he encountered Lili Damita, a film actress whom he had previously met in Paris and who is seen in picture No. 1. In Los Angeles he was photographed with June Collyer, another screer star. The Prince met most of the other prominent folk in movieland while at Beverly Hills as the guest of Douglas Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford. Toronto's most widely known daughter. Since the Prince's naval plans did not sanction any visit to the film colony, the Prince was technically absent without leave while there. Whether his commanding officer, Capt. G. L. Coleridge, took any action to discipline the Prince was not revealed before the Durban sailed from California for Bermuda. The Prince and Coleridge are seen in picture 3. Prince George who passed across Canada some time ago on his way to Vancouver to join his ship—on which in addition to the regular pay of his rank he draws 36 cents a day as interpreter of French—resembles the Prince of Wales much more than he does either of his other two brothers, the Duke of York and the Duke of Gloucester

NEW GOAL-TENDER FOR LONDON CLUB

JOE IRONSTONE TO GUARD NETS

Corbeau Gets Smart Netminder From New York Americans.

HAS GOOD RECORD.

LONDON, Ont., October 31. — Joe Ironstone will guard the nets for the London Panthers in the Canpro race this winter. Ironstone, who ranked as second to only "Dolly" Dolson, while playing for the Toronto Falcons last season, has been purchased outright from the New York Americans of the National Hockey League, and is expected to be signed to a contract without any difficulty by Manager Bert Corbeau, under whom he worked on the now defunct Falcons.

Corbeau refused to wait any longer for the tardy Kearney of Fort William, and lost no time in spending the profit the club made on the sale of "Mickey" Roach. He paid a big league price to get a goalie who is rated as big league goods. Ironstone had a record of thirteen shut-outs last season, 12 while with the Falcons and one against the Boston Bruins while taking the place of John Ross Roach for the Toronto Maple Leafs. He was drafted from the Falcons by the New York Americans at the end of the winter.

The hockey career of Ironstone started in Sudbury with the Wolves, and he was paid the highest salary an amateur netminder ever got to turn pro. by Tommy Gorman, who was then piloting the Ottawa club. That was the year the Montreal Maroons team started out in the N.H.L. He got no "break" from Ottawa in making his major league debut, as Connell, an Ottawa home boy, received the preference and Ironstone went to the New York Americans. Again he got no chance to show his wares in a long campaign, the flashy Vernon (Jakey) Forbes pleasing the sensation seeking Gotham fans more and getting the call over the Jewish boy from Sudbury. He was farmed to the Toronto Falcons and has been the property of the star-spangled Americans ever since.

Falcons' Fort Last Year.

His remarkable work against London while holding the fort for Corbeau and his Toronto youngsters here last winter is still fresh in the memories of local fans, and, with his signature on a contract in Bert Corbeau's pocket, the Panthers defensive worries will be all over and the offensive worries of the other clubs around the loop will be just that much increased. Ironstone is expected to

It is rapidly becoming evident that come here at once for training. this season's Panthers will be a high-grade combination of the stars of last year's Toronto and London clubs. Of the Falcons who got into the league play-offs, their defence of Corbeau and Carl Voss, with Ironstone in goal, is now secured intact. Another forward is to come from the Leafs, and since Joe Primeau and Jerry Lowrey, both former Falcons, are among the Leafs' reserves, it is a safe guess that Corbeau will want one of them to round out the front line strength.

Following Monday's work-out of the Panthers at the Arena, Manager Corbeau went to Hamilton to deal off some of the surplus material of the club to the Hamilton team, which is just in the process of being assembled. McIntyre and Lever, the Iroquois Falls forwards, again failed to report yesterday. Teddy Graham, former London amateur, now owned by the Tulsa Club of the American Association, worked out with the Panthers yesterday, and will get in another drill or two before reporting to the Oklahoma Oil Gushers.

COX WILL GOAL FOR BORDER TEAM

No Disagreement Over His Contract With Windsor Club.

WINDSOR, Oct. 30.—Herb Mitchell manager of the Windsor hockey team formerly the Hornets, but soon to be something different, has solved the problem of a goaltender quite handily, having been assured that Abby Cox will shortly be on hand to take the place.

Mitchell was worried over his goaltending problem. Last Thursday he sent Cox a final offer, and transportation, ordering him to report at once. He did not hear from the player whose home is in Springfield, on Friday or Saturday. So he came to the conclusion that Cox was holding out, and opened negotiations with Montreal to get "Flat" Walsh.

Mitchell put through a long-distance call to Springfield. Cox, instead of having an argument about salary, merely wanted to know what happened to his ticket. The transportation had apparently gone astray. Mitchell ordered him to board a train and Cox agreed.

One of the Ottawa Senator players punched Referee Hal DeGruchy in the nose when he attempted to stop a rough and tumble on the field. Of the two famous DeGruchy brothers Hal and Reg. to hit, the Ottawa player picked the right one, Hal. If it had been Reg. the offending player would have received bodily injuries in great portions. The writer has seen said Reg. treat 'em rough for much, much less than what occurred to Hal. The DeGruchy brothers are two of the best referees in Canadian rugby and the Ottawa player should be barred from further play.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

That Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium, back in 1922, when Queen's University's great team defeated the Argonauts for the Dominion championship 12 points to 11, the students' backfield quartet uncovered a running attack of versatility.

Quarterback Evans, using the Minnesota shift, juggled his team into the above formation. No. 1, John McKelvey, came out of the line and turned with the snap of the ball. Evans, No. 2, faked a pass to 'Red,' then tossed the ball to No. 3, Leadley, who relayed it to No. 4, Batstone, thence to Harding.

During the fourth period with the score standing 11 to 9 for the Argos Leadley was given the ball for a run around the right side of the Argos' line. Leadley started wide, saw an opening between middle and outside wing, quick as a flash he was through and was tackled on the Argos' 25-yard line, 40 yards from where he started. A moment later he kicked a beautiful field goal, winning the game 12 to 11 and giving Queen's her first Canadian football championship title.

The teams were:

Tomorrow—Gordon Southam's $10,000 drop kick.

FRANCHISE SOLD TO TORONTO MEN

Hamilton Sure To Have Entry In Canpro League This Winter.

HAMILTON, Oct. 31.— When it was intimated Monday that Toronto interests were likely to assume control of the Hamilton franchise, and operate a team in the Canpro league here this winter, there was considerable hope raised among hockey fans. Now there is cause for real jubilation, for Percy Thompson stated yesterday that the conference with the prospective owners Monday was so ssuccessful that the Toronto men had agreed to purchase the franchise at the price asked, and a start has been made already on the formation of a team.

Names and prices, and other details regarding the formation of the club will be announced until today or Thursday, when the principals have had an oportunity to see just where they're at but the project is assured. Two players have been secured and arrangements have been made with the arena management for rental of the rink.

Hamilton, it is assured, will be represented by a powerful team. Percy Thompson was swamped with letters and wires from clubs and individuals everywhere, offering players or the services of such, but he has turned all these over to the new owners and they are losing no time in sorting the wheat from the chaff.

It has not been announced whether the training of the team will be held here, although this is likely.

The complete schedule for the Canpro circuit has been released and it shows Hamilton included to the finish so in spite of the doubt that has existed about this city being represented, it appears that there was an ace in the hole all the time.

Roach Sold

Mickey Roach has been sold by the London Hockey club to Windsor, Manager Bert Corbeau has announced. It was a straight cash transaction, with no player figuring in the deal. Roach was the property of the London club for approximately 24 hours. He was obtained from the New York Americans in a trade for Bill Holmes, center player with London during the latter part of last season.

Roach is in business in Windsor and expressed a desire to play in that city. Corbeau received a good offer from Manager Mitchell and the deal was completed.

Manager Corbeau is in search of a high-class goaltender for the London club and expects to sign one before long. The London leader is not alarmed about defense men or forwards. McCormick, who played here last season, is to be disposed of through a sale and Hamilton will likely be his future hockey home.

INTERNATIONAL PRO LEAGUE LOSES FIGHTING LEADERS

Death of Jack Dunn and Illness of Stallings Severe Blows.

ASSETS TO LOOP.

Baltimore Magnate Staunch Scrapper On Field and in Committee Room.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 31.— It seemed only yesterday the twentieth floor of the Commodore in New York reverberated with argument, high pitched voices trying to drown each other out, names called which were not soothing to the listeners.

It was only another meeting of the International league. Jack Dunn, Oriole owner and manager, was there. George Stallings was there too, else Dunn would not be so sore. Sam Robertson, Buffalo president, managed to edge into the argument now and then, or if denied by Dunn and Stallings he directed a salvo at the head of the league, John Conway Toole.

That's all over now. Jack Dunn died last week—died in his boots as he wanted to die; thrilled with another win—this time a win of his champion dogs.

Jack Dunn always was a winner. He was a poor loser. That is as he likes it, no matter where his spirit to-day hovers.

Down near Macon, Ga., on a large plantation a sick man was denied news of his death. It was an old enemy of Dunn, George Stallings, the miracle man. He was too sick to stand such a shock. He has been sick since last spring. He, too, had a heart attack like that of Dunn's. But Stallings lingers on. He may be permanently out of the game— permanently ill.

Dunn and Stallings admired each other. Their fights were in the open. They flew at each other's throats. But it was over after a while. They bore no ill feeling toward each other.

For years these two were the life of the party, so to speak. They fussed and fought and the fans turned out to perhaps get a little extra thrill in the clash of these two great leaders.

Dunn had been in the league at Baltimore, since 1907. Stallings returned in 1921, taking the Rochester club. At the same time Sam Robertson became president of the Buffalo club and John Conway Toole was elected president of the league.

While Dunn and Stallings fought Robertson and Toole put on a side-show at times. Later Dunn and Robertson clashed. And so on and so on.

The survivor of this warfare is President Toole. He is still in office. Stallings is in a sick bed. Dunn is in his grave. Robertson a short time back sold his interests and retired at Buffalo.

It is freely rumored that Robertson is a candidate for Toole's job. The late Jack Dunn was the originator of the movement.

But Toole and Robertson attended the funeral at Baltimore and rode in the same car and shared their griefs. They were both pretty well broken up at the death of Dunn.

Jack Dunn sent many a player out into the baseball world to fame and fortune. He did not please all of them, however. There were some he sold or traded who bore malice. They figured they were not given a square deal.

But when Dunn was buried several of these players were on hand, their eyes red and voices husky.

Perhaps no one in baseball has ever had as great a funeral. There were flowers from every prominent man in baseball as well as from the lowly. Two thousand attended the funeral. Only a part of the crowd could get into the church. They flocked to him in life and they flocked to him in death.

When the last bit of earth covered the coffin there were audible sobs from many a stout hearted man present.

Lost Its Greatest Developer.

Baseball had lost its greatest developer of diamond talent.

The loss to the International League was even greater. It took away the last of the three fighters — Dunn, Stallings and Robertson.

Death took a huge stone from the foundation of the league. It was Dunn who steered the ship through many storms. It was Dunn who had loaned money and men to help some other fellow come through.

Baltimore lost the man who had been head of the ball club since a score of years back. Jack Dunn was better known than the mayor of the city or the governor of the state.

The club will be in the hands of Dunn's friends, Charles H. Knapp, attorney, and William Ashton, at the head of Newark and Reading in season's past.

What eventually may happen no one can say. The present announcement is that the club is not on the market and that it will be operated by these friends of Dunn's widow with Dunn's policies and wishes carried out.

Kempen-Kodak Team Leads In Bike Race

CHICAGO, Oct. 31 (Canadian Press).—Out in front by two laps, the team of Pete Van Kempen and Mike Rodak was showing the way to the six-day bicycle riders at the end of the 49th hour at the Broadway Armory.

Van Kempen, the veteran Holland star, and his 19-year-old teammate, Rodak, shot into the lead on the first night of the race and had travelled 696 miles at the end of 40 hours of riding.

Two laps behind the leaders trailed the Winter-Coburn combination.

TIGERS DETERMINED TO BEAT MONTREAL

Deedway Only Absentee at Practice Because of Sore Shoulder.

HAMILTON, Ont., 31 (Canadian Press).—By the manner in which Tigers are working during their nightly practises, one would imagine they were preparing for a Dominion final. They are, to a certain extent, for they realise that a victory over Montreal on Saturday will make them sure of the final with the winners of the Intercollegiate O.R.F.U. series, and they are determined to go into Saturday's test with their best foot forward.

There was only one absentee from the heavy workout last night, Broadway being at the grounds but unable to participate because of his sore shoulder and side. He was given a thorough rubbing and is optimistic about being able to play against the Wheelers. He is the only casualty on the squad; the rest of the team being in perfect condition.

NORTH BAY OBJECTS SUDDEN-DEATH TILT

Rinkey-Dinks Hot After Home Game in Intermediate Finals.

TORONTO, October 31. — From North Bay comes an objection to the delay in deciding the women's intermediate softball championship. The Rinkey Dinks are taking the stand that the fans who have loyally supported them all summer in their quest for supremacy should be given an opportunity of seeing them in a final game. The North Bayites object strenuously to the sudden death game idea.

The intermediate softball play-off has taken a long time and North Bay has been sitting on the side lines waiting for a winner from down here to meet them in the finals. North Bay has played two games—both with Oshawa—and they did not play through any league games to arrive at the point where they could get in the play-offs. With the Seibeling Nationals it has been a horse of another color entirely. This team has played through the Sunnyside League, thirteen games, and then has met and defeated Kodaks, Populars, Owen Sound, and Galt, making a grand total in all of twenty-three games that the Toronto team has played to date in their quest for Ontario honors. Their expenses have been heavy and the team has willingly played in all kinds of weather in order that the play-offs for the title may be rushed through. It is unfortunate that it has taken such a long time to get through to the finals in this series, and both teams should be willing to give and take a little.

From all appearances to date, the Toronto Nationals appear to be the team that has the biggest kick coming. The idea of a sudden death game somewhere on neutral ground is the only logical solution to the problem, and both teams should be glad of the opportunity of having the Ontario title decided quickly under the uncertain weather conditions prevailing at this time of the year.

TWO LEAFS FROM THE WEST

Connie Smythe has been searching far and wide over the Canadian sport horizon for new hockey material and by the advance notices he has made some real finds. For recently it was announced that the Canadian west had contributed one of her finest athletes to the pro ranks of the Toronto Maple Leafs—Andy Blair.

Andy has the reputation of being the Canadian west's most versatile athlete. For he has records that very few athletes can equal. At the old gridiron game of push and shove, he knows no superiors in the halfline, and also holds the Western Canada golf title by consistently turning in a card of under 80. He is also the sprint champion of St. John's College, doing to 100 yards in 10 1-5 and 200 yards in 22 seconds flat. In the Allan Cup games last March he played a dazzling brand of hockey and showed his ability as a smart poke-checker in these games.

If there is one department in which the Leafs need a smart player, it is in centre, and according to Hoyle it looks as if Conn Smythe has found his man. Andy was the idol of the fans at Winnipeg and probably will be one of the most popular players on the team this year. Andy's arrival with the Leafs in Toronto has been received with as much enthusiasm as in Winnipeg.

Danny Cox is also a middle west man. In Danny's first year he finished among the first 30 players out of 150 players in the National League. He might possibly have done better only he met with an accident and was forced out of the game. He received his first pro training with th Hamilton pro team after he came from Port Arthur, and from there he graduated to the Leafs.

SUDDEN COLD SPELL AIDS GARAGEMEN

Anti-Freeze is in Demand at Service Stations in the City.

The sudden cold spell has precipitated a big run on radiator anti-freeze, according to Peterborough garagemen who this morning told The Examiner that already, the sale this week has been far ahead of the two cold days at the end of last week.

More and more, Peterborough motorists are realizing the wisdom of early usage of the non-freezing radiator filling rather than water while the sight of several cars with the "coffee boiling" merrily on Monday and Tuesday morning tended to emphasize this wisdom.

Bowling Alley Gossip

By Pin Boy

C.G.E. Shop League—Group No. 1. With Watkins hammering the pins for a high three score of 642, the Induction Motor Winding team forged ahead to a 2 to 1 win over Machine Shop No. 2 last night. The high single score for this set of games went to Watkins also, who rolled 243.

Induction Motors put the right foot forward in their fracas with Fitters No. 3 by winning two games out of three, although the Fitters' crew put up a tough battle in the last game, losing out by only two pins. J. Wade bumped the bottles in he-man style for a total of 624, while Bob Hunt's score of 253 on the Motors team went for high single.

Machine Shop No. 1 had the tables turned on them this week by Fitters No. 2, who marched off the alleys with two games out of three. An exceptionally nice piece of consistent bowling was done by A. McPhate, who made 198, 206 and 208 for a total of 610, which was high three. Bill Mantell of the Machine Shop team was high for a single game with 226.

In a steady rather than spectacular three-game bowling duel the Punch Press team won two from the Armature Assembly. Among the winners only one topped the 200 mark in a single game, but each player bunched his scores around 190. W. Miller chalked down a trio of games that totalled 574, while O. Taylor of the Assemblers made high single with 226.

Machine No. 3 defaulted to Fitters No. 1, who would have been a hard team to beat at any rate, judging from the way they biffed the pins while rolling by their lonesome. Jim Fay and F. Granger were going nice with 561 and 562, respectively, for high three, while Granger had a high solo score of 226.

K. of C. Alleys.

Jim Fay's gang of pin topplers are certainly determined to maintain their position at the top of the Monday Night League, as they blanked the Bogue outfit last night in three games, adding 6 more points to the already high total. Bill Thomas kept up the good work, being high for the second time in two weeks, with a total of 670 pins, while Dave Ahern retained his good bowling form with a high solo score of 256.

The LeBarr quintette were no match for the sharp shooting Duffus aggregation, who hugged the centre of the alleys to the tune of 3,204 pins which netted them six of the eight points. This score was the high total pinnage score for the night. L. Anthony and U. Brioux had over 200 in every game, but failed to reach H Fitzgerald's total of 283, which was high for single. L. Anthony ran up a tidy little pile of pins that amounted to 725 for high triple.

Handicapped by two dummy scores throughout the three games, Clancy and his bowlers suffered a heavy defeat at the hands of the Ryanites who were 700 pins to the good on the total pinnage score. Doris, on the winning team, was the slugger of this war, administering a whacking to the pins that resulted in both high scores, 272 and 702.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"MADEMOISELLE FROM ARMENTIERES" — "THE BIG PARADE" OF THE BRITISH ARMY —COMING TO THE CAPITOL, THURSDAY, FRIDAY, AND SATURDAY — MR. HAROLD SNELGROVE WILL SING "ROSE," THE THEME SONG OF THE PIECE, AT THE EVENING PERFORMANCES.

"Mademoiselle from Armentieres" is a magnetic title for a film one wonders why nobody thought of it before. After all, no name was more often on the doughboy's tongue, no legendary character has ever achieved a more considerable notoriety or renown—which you will—in their generation. Other legendary characters have achieved fame in song and fiction, and whether she be myth or mystery woman, Mademoiselle deserves her place.

She has been brought to life in delightful fashion by Estelle Brody in the spectacular Gaumont British film "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

She was an intriguing character, and still is. Her character developed according to the imaginative tastes of the soldiers who ofttimes invented her history and set it to music as they marched along. Everyone of them will be interested to see if the film presents Mademoiselle as he imagined her. On the other hand, wives and sweethearts will be more than curious to probe the mystery on which their soldier boys have been consistently evasive or reticent.

An Interesting Rumor.

There was a constant rumor, of course, that Mademoiselle was a living person who kept an estaminet and acted as a spy, but, like many other rumors, its origin was wrapt in mystery. As a film heroine, Mademoiselle appears as a patriot whose activities might very easily have led to the scandalous rumors about her character, but the author's solution of delicate problem is both ingenious and inoffensive.

The film is described as a soldier's story of the war, which no doubt it is, for the war to the men in the trenches was essentially a personal adventure, and it is appropriate that for the purpose of entertainment with the quality of reminiscence, the film should be a picture of intimate drama and comedy of the war told with convincing realism.

Apart from the romance of the story the film's strongest asset is that it is accurate in its details of the fighting and life (especially in the billets) at the front. Nothing like the amazing realism of these war scenes has ever been seen in a film before—a highly commendable effect which may be largely ascribed to the fact that every man engaged on the film, from producer, author, and players to electricians, is an ex-service man.

Miss Brody in the title role is delightful. John Stuart is a manly and sympathetic hero; Alf. Goddard contributes excellent comedy, and last but not least, Humberston Wright and John Hamilton play in inspired episode to the rhythm of "Old Soldiers Never Die."

Mr. Harold Snelgrove will sing "Rose," the theme song, at the evening performances.

AT THE REGENT.

"HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME" STILL CLASSED BY ITSELF

The audience at the Regent Theatre last night viewing the local showing of the Universal super-movie, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," was even more enthusiastic, if such a thing is possible, than the crowds that have witnessed any of its former local presentations.

The lasting quality of the mammoth picture production seems to bear out the general opinion expressed at the time of its first memorable showing, when many critics and savants had the foresight to predict that here was a movie that would live forever, and grow better with every showing.

It is, indeed, a motion picture classic—a work of true art, that has actually endeared itself to the hearts of theatre-goers to such a degree that they want to see it over and over.

The remarkable characterization of Lon Chaney as "Quasimodo," the bell ringer of the cathedral, is as startling as it was the first time we saw it. Alan Dale, of The New York American, was not far wrong—if wrong at all—when he said of this performance of Chaney's "It is a bit of art that can never die."

The splendid cast of 75 principals, including many names beloved in moviedom, is as fine as ever, in fact it appears that some of them had reached their zenith in this great production.

The great mob scene, before the Cathedral of Notre Dame, in which 3,500 extras take part, is, in our estimation, the most stirring mob effect ever accomplished in the screen art. The "Hunchback" still stands all by itself as a movie classic.

YOUNG LAD SHOT WHILE HUNTING

First Fatality of Season Occurs in North Bay District.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 31.—The first fatality of the hunting season occurred Sunday, it was learned yesterday, when an employee of a lumbering concern located in Charlton Township came to the city and procured a casket in which to transport the body to North Bay. The victim was Delards Grondin, age 16, of Smoky Falls. He met instant death when the gun was accidentally discharged while he was attempting to reload it. At the inquest held yesterday afternoon a verdict of accidental death was returned.

HERE IS A REAL GOLFING FAMILY

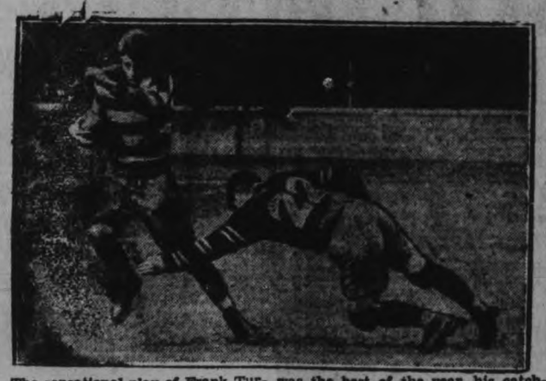
PUEBLO, Col., October 31 —Five brothers made a family affair of a municipal golf tournament here recently. And what's more, there are three brothers coming along who will be out for blood in golf tournaments of this section in a few years.

Bill Marsalis, youngest of the five in the tournament, won the championship by defeating his brother Mac. Three of the Marsalis boys were in the finals.

Bill is 18, Mac 20, Louis 22, Pete and John 24. Yes, Pete and John are twins. They learned their golf, first on a home-built course when they were children, and then as caddies.

The three youngest Marsalis boys are now playing golf on a vacant lot near their home and intend mixing it up with the older boys in a few years.

TURVILLE PLAYS WELL



The sensational play of Frank Turville featured the Argonaut 20-3 victory over Ottawa Senators recently at Toronto. This Port Arthur boy gave one of the finest back-field performances of the season. His punting was the best of the year, his catching faultless and his running and dodging high-class. The photograph shows how he carries a ball in a broken field. He is seen evading a tackle by Irwin, No. 22, of the Ottawa team, on his way to a touch-down.

Pittsburgh Club In American League Have Chiropractor As Kink Breaker

Fans may marvel at the skill of ball players, become thrilled with their antics on the diamond, and acclaim them as models of physical perfection. What they see is what draws their attention, but there is work behind the scenes that makes all this possible.

Athletes who extend themselves on the sport field require expert care. Their physical welfare must be looked after and kept in condition to do their best work at all times. The ball club with a competent trainer is the one that suffers less from physical ills than others.

The Pirates spent the first part of 1928 season combating various ailments—kinked arm muscles, warped legs, aching backs, and the like. The situation became desperate, and finally President Barney Dreyfuss was prevailed upon to add a real trainer to his staff.

He secured Dr. William Humphrey, local chiropractor, and since then his players have been practically free of ailments that afflicted them earlier in the season. A squad of crippled athletes was placed in his care, and in a short time he put them on the field in their best playing condition.

In fact, it was a few days before the Pirates began their drive to the first division that he did his first work on members of the team. He has been at it since, and the fine record of the Buccaneers since the first part of July is a tribute to his skill as a manipulator of ailing muscles.

Dr. Humphrey is a Pittsburgher, has offices in the Lyceum Building, and besides treating Pittsburgh players while they perform at home, accompanies them on their road jaunts. Many of the older players regard him as the best trainer they have ever come in contact with, and credit him with the fine physical condition of the team at this time.

Schalk Rejects $30,000 Offer From New York

DETROIT, Oct. 31.—The Detroit News yesterday says that Ray Schalk, veteran catcher, and former manager of the Chicago White Sox, has informed Stanley Harris, new manager of the Detroit Tigers, that he is ready to sign a contract to play with Detroit next season.

The newspaper says it learned that Schalk, after considering an offer from John J. McGraw of a three-year contract with the New York Giants at $10,000 a year, decided he would prefer to remain in the American League, and a few days ago told Harris that if he wanted him he was ready to sign.

If Schalk joins the Tigers, the newspaper says, he probably will coach pitchers and catchers.

OSHAWA WILL PLAY LONDON SATURDAY

Fixture Will Decide Leadership of O.R.F.U. Intermediate Group.

LONDON, Ont. Oct. 31.—The leadership of the O.R.F.U. intermediate group is at stake when Oshawa General Motors meet the London intermediates here on Saturday afternoon. Each team has won four games without a defeat. It will be the locals' final group game at home.

London has a powerful line, and Coach Jerry Goodman is confident that this department will carry the Londoners to victory. The Gillespie brothers are playing well. Ellyatt, the husky line plunger, has recovered from injuries and will be back into the game. The locals have a youthful backfield in Tom Bonk, Bill Wanless and Rus Ardiel. Cliff and Heaman are also available for the back division.

Oshawa have many experienced players. Oshawa and London have two remaining games, the Automobile team visiting London on Saturday, while the locals will return one week later.

STREET LIGHTING BEING IMPROVED

Aylmer and Park Street District is Part of Local Improvements in Lighting.

Several weeks ago, the City Council and the Utilities Commission completed arrangements for a better system of street lighting to be installed in certain parts of the city and since that time, the commission has been busy placing the new lights, particularly on Park and Aylmer streets.

Where possible, the lights have been hung in the centre of the streets in order that they may be clear of the houses on either side while on Aylmer street, there is a decidedly pronounced improvement in the lighting.

The new lights will be quite as numerous as the old, and in addition will be of greater power, yet there is to be very little change in consumption owing to the fact that they will be on a separate control by which they may be shut off in the daytime, whereas, the old ones had to be left on throughout the day.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Newbec was the word on every traders mouth yesterday and rumors of Noranda taking over control of the property were heard. It will be seen that owing to the presence of several directors of Noranda on the Newbec board that the rumor was easily given credence. A. B. Gordon, president of the Newbec, informs the Financial News Bureau, however, that there is nothing in the talk and such steps have not been considered. Engineer Len Smith was in town this morning and some official word on progress should be issued shortly.

It is reported that Conisurum realized a profit from operations during the month of September, this despite the fact that considerable development work was carried out during the period.

The electrical survey which was started a couple of weeks ago by the United Verde Extension Mining Company on their recently acquired Mount Nickel option, is now said to have been completed and consideration is being given to a plan of further exploration of the property. This will most likely take the form of a diamond drilling campaign. All the work done to the present time on the Mount Nickel, with the exception of the electrical survey, has been by the open pit method. This is said to have been successful in opening up an ore shoot about 150 feet long and from 25 to 75 feet wide.

It is reported that the new shaft at the Noranda is being sunk at a much greater speed than was the case at the No. 3 shaft. The collar is said to have been poured and the next month should see the erection of the headframe. The present depth of the shaft is given as 75 feet. It is understood that president J. Y. Murdoch and several of the company's officials are now on the property consulting with the Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Mines for Quebec and his Deputy Minister.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Star Lake Gold Mines is called for October 31st in Winnipeg for the purpose of considering a recommendation by the directors to change the capitalization of the company from $1,000,000 in dollar shares to 3,000,000 shares of no par value.

Following an examination of the Montcalm-Tine property in the Rice Lake area of the Central Manitoba field, the company's engineer, G. A. Packard, has recommended the sinking of a shaft on a zone known as the Tine break. Three veins are said to have been developed in this break running parallel within a width of 130 feet. The shaft will be sunk near these and crosscuts will be run to tap all three at depth.

It is stated that Charles Spearman, who is consulting engineer of the Selkirk (Canadian) Mines will not be able to make his examination of the property until after the freeze-up. It is said that Mr. Spearman has left for Cuba where he will spend a month in recuperating from his recent illness.

Earning Possibilities of International-Mond Consolidation.

Some interests who have followed the career of International Nickel and Mond Nickel closely are already forecasting what may happen to the market if, as and when the stock of the new consolidation appears for trading. On the basis of to-day's price for International the new stock would come out at around 30, but it is considered probable that when terms of the amalgamation are announced, the present stock will sell much higher before it is replaced by the new. Predictions are being made that the stock of the new company will rise in a reasonably short time to perhaps 80, or the equivalent of 500 for the present stock.

Last year Mond Nickel earned approximately $1,231,000 for the common stock and International Nickel $5,529,798, or combined earnings of $6,750,000. Estimates are that Mond this year will earn $2,500,000 and International Nickel $12,800,000, or a total of $15,300,000.

If forecasts are correct and the new company will have 12,548,000 shares outstanding, earnings indicated per share would be $1.22.

Previous to the announcement of merger proposals both Mond and International Nickel had plans under way to increase production facilities by at least 50%. Now one huge copper smelter will take care of the output of the two Frood properties and having regard to the economies that will be effected as a result of the merger profits may be expected to rise abruptly.

A much greater increase in profits than 50% may be looked for because actual copper output will probably be trebled, from 40,000,000 pounds to 150,000,000 pounds per annum. Additional profits from copper alone should aggregate close to $8,000,000. This is based on 110,000,000 pounds additional at 16 cents per pound, with costs at 8 cents per pound.

In view of the swelling demand for nickel and its alloys, no difficulty is expected in finding a market for all the metal the increasing facilities can turn out.

It appears within reason to expect that on the 12,548 shares the new company to be issued profits will work at close to $3.00 per share, when present expansion plans are completed.

New Records Set As Holders Unload

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Selling pressure increased in to-day's stock market as speculators, large and small began to dispose of at least part of their holdings. Fears of a general "shake out" either just before or just after election day were reflected in the increasing number of cautionary advices by leading commission houses. The reaction on which followed an early outburst of buying in which a dozen or more issues were lifted to new high records. The bulk of the day's trade news continued favorable. United States Steel Common and General Motors both yielded to selling pressure after initial outbursts of strength despite the unexpectedly favorable character of the Steel third quarter report and optimistic comment on the earnings and dividend action by president Sloan of the General Motors Credit conditions continued favorable with call money holding steady at seven and a half per cent. Fresh import of $2,500,000 in gold was announced from Great Britain, bringing total on current movement to about $17,500,000.

Radio, which advanced four points to 239¾ in early trading fell back to 229, International Nickel dropped from 189½ to 183½ and Western Union from 194 to 188.

Sudbury Basin Leads Slow Selling Market

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Prices tended to lower levels on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day. Sales showed a noticeable slowing up after yesterday's heavy session. Sudbury Basin continued to lead the market and with a heavy turnover advanced 5 to $8.15; Sherritt Gordon was strong again and at noon was unchanged at $7.25. Noranda was easier to-day and suffered considerable amount of selling. Price dropped $1.50 to $52.75. Hollinger was down 15 at $9.00 and Teck Hughes 5 at $8.65 Abana was lower dropping three to 3.75 and Amulet advanced four to $3.19. Hudson Bay was up ten at $16.60. Heavy selling met Jackson Manion again and price dropped 5 to 62. Malartic was down two at $1.15 and Newbec four at 30.

TORONTO, Oct. 31 (Canadian Press).—Oils were again early leaders on the Toronto Stock Exchange with British American Oil opening at 50½, but dropping back to yesterday's close at 49¾ at noon to-day. International Petroleum was up one point to 46¾, while other stocks slipped back after a gain over last night's closing quotations. Abitibi dropped 1¾ to 38¾. International Nickel gained 5 to 188 after opening at 185. Massey Harris lost a half to 51, while Photo Engravers was up ¾ to 34½. Seagrams advanced a half to 23, while Hiram Walkers went up 1¼ to 83¾, although the number of sales was down. Carlings remained unchanged and Canada Malting was up ¾ to 35¾. Beacon Oil dropped ¼ to 22½, while Service Station common and preferred were unchanged. Imperial Oil was up a half to 85½.

CHICAGO, October 31 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices turned upward early to-day, notwithstanding declines at the outset. Talk of likelihood of crop damage by rust in Argentina acted as a bullish factor. Opening unchanged to 3-8 off, wheat sagged a little all around and then scored general gains. Corn also advanced, starting 1-8 to ¼ down to 1-8 up, and subsequently showing a rise for all future deliveries. Oats were steady.

Wheat, October 115¾; March 120½. Corn, Dec. 81 1-8; March 83½. Oats, Dec. 43¾; March 44.

Hockey Meeting On Thursday Night

A meeting of the officers of the Peterborough Intermediate hockey club, all players who are anxious for a try-out, and any fans interested in promoting the game locally will be held in the offices of the Albion Knitting Company, on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. An invitation has been sent to a large number of players, but any player who has been over-looked is asked to be on hand at this meeting, at which training arrangements will be discussed.

MAKES MOVIE TOUR.

J. G. Rutherford, Ontario government cameraman, who is home after a world tour of 30,000 miles in seven months, took his machine to places where movie men have never before worked. The Moors at Gibraltar were indignant, because it was against their religion to be photographed. Attempts were made to record the wives of the sultan of Bima, but the ruler's objection were found too strenuous, while the Dutch government would not permit the photographer to "shoot" the giant lizards there. It is reported that the provincial government will use Rutherford's unique movie to aid in the teaching of geography in schools of the province.

IN POLICE COURT

After Tuesday morning's clear slate, Police Court re-opened this morning with Magistrate O. A. Langley having brought to his attention, and disposing of, no less than six cases, while a seventh, begun as the noon hour was approaching, was continued over this afternoon, being that of George Ward of Millbrook, charged with failure to stop following an accident in which Mrs. Nellie Davis and her daughter, 33 Fairyette Avenue, were struck.

An adjournment was granted in the case of A. H. Jeffery, charged with failure to stop following an accident on Charlotte Street on October 17 last. The case will come in at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, November 7.

G. R. Langley had driven his car north on Water Street and south on George Street one night not long ago, and in so doing, had failed to show proper lights. $5.00, and costs, seemed to be a popular decision, for not only was that the penalty imposed upon Langley, but J. Killenbeck contributed in a like manner for having cut a corner while turning on to Aylmer Street from Hunter Street. An accident had resulted and Killenbeck had agreed to pay all damages.

The third person to pay a $5.00 fine was Neil White, charged with speeding. He had driven through the C.P.R. gates on George Street soon after a train had cleared. It was the boy's first offence, and he had paid for the gates broken.

M. Gishman fared a little better. He had been charged with failure to stop following an accident, but had paid the damages and the prosecution did not offer any evidence. The case was dismissed.

J. P. Pulkinghorn pleaded not guilty to driving on Water Street without his car being properly lighted, and since the prosecution was not prepared to go on with the case, it was adourned until Wednesday, November 7, at 10 a.m.

On Monday next, Annie Anderson, whose married name is Annie Lavigne, will again appear before the Magistrate, she having been charged with the theft of a watch, chain, and ring, and also some dresses and materials. Her husband and children are in North Bay, and she has been in Peterborough several years. She pleaded guilty to the two charges.

When the Alarm Clock Rings

It is bad enough to turn out of a comfortable bed on these frosty mornings, but it is much worse if your liver is sluggish.

A lazy liver deprives you of the energy necessary to arise and start the day's work with zest and enthusiasm. It renders you less than fifty per cent. efficient and more than fifty per cent. miserable.

THE CAUSE

is at the spine. A deranged vertebra between the shoulders can reduce the nerve supply to the liver and cause it to function imperfectly. If this is corrected by Chiropractic spinal adjustments your efficiency and temperament will both show improvement.

BACON SHOW BIG SUCCESS

Durham County Holds Its First Bacon Hog Fair in Orono."

PRIZE LIST

MILLBROOK, Oct. 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—The first county bacon hog show for Durham county was held at Orono, on Friday, October 26, with a very fair attendance and a goodly number of exhibits, despite unfavorable weather conditions. There were not as many entries in the market classes as what the promoters had hoped, this being due chiefly to the falling prices for hogs. The exhibitors who did take part, however, were very well pleased with the results and are hoping that future similar shows may be held in the county. It is to be regretted that more farmers did not show in the market classes, because the prize money was not all taken up, and a very high price was received by those who did market their hogs that day. The chief value of the fair, however, was the educational features. It was clearly demonstrated to the farmers that if they are raising good type of swine that they should demand a grading when they are sold, instead of selling on a flat basis as they are at present. It is also in the interests of the shippers and packers that this method be adopted as nothing else will raise the standard of hogs produced as quickly. The fair was held under the capable auspices of Mr. L. Pearsall, chief Dominion graders; Mr. I. B. Martin, of the livestock branch, Toronto; Mr. D. McKinnon, hog grader of Peterborough; and Mr. H. Maybee, hog grader, Toronto, and Mr. J. Y. Kellought agricultural representative, Port Hope. The following is a list of the prize winners in the various classes:—

Large Bull Moose Charges Light Canoe

SUDBURY, Oct. 31.—There is no doubt in the mind of L. C. James, general land agent of the New York Central Railway, as to whether or not moose will attack human beings. Decisive testimony was afforded Monday in the experience of Mr. James in the Metagama district in Northern Ontario, who reports that his canoe was chased by an enraged bull moose, discovered unawares feeding in shallow water by the shore of the Spanish River. Only by dint of hard paddling by Pete Commanda, the Indian guide, were they able to escape the charge of the animal, and another canoe following in rear was similarly attacked.

Graf Zeppelin Has Reached Ho

Big Ship Completes First Return Voyage Over Atlantic Ocean

Flight of 4,003 Miles Made in 69 Hours From Take-off in the United States—Crowds Wait All Night To Greet Fliers.

POPULACE OF FRIEDRICHSHAFEN SWOLLEN BY SIGHTSEERS WHO RUSH AIRDROME

Firing of Cannon and Ringing of Bells Welcome Airship On First Commercial Round Trip Over Ocean For Lighter-Than-Air Craft.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Completing the first round-trip commercial trans-Atlantic flight, the Graf Zeppelin landed at the aerodrome here at 7.06 a.m. today (1.06 a.m., Eastern standard time) with passengers and mail from America.

The airship, which left Lakehurst, N.J., at 1.54 a.m., Eastern standard time, on Monday, made the fastest crossing of the Atlantic by a lighter-than-air machine, covering a distance of 4,003 miles.

She reached her home port 69 hours and 56 minutes after starting from Lakehurst, and touched the ground after 71 hours and 12 minutes had elapsed. The British dirigible R.34, which made the fastest previous crossing, was in the air 75 hours before being landed at her hangar in England, completing a flight which began at Roosevelt Field, N.Y., in July, 1919.

With the approach of the dirigible the population of the town, swelled many times its normal size, was aroused by volleys of saluting shots. The people rushed pell-mell to the aerodrome, where the crews of the Zeppelin Works were already assembled at the hangar.

The airship, after allowing the cheering thousands a brief glimpse of her great form, rapidly passed out of sight and then reappeared a little later over Lake Constance. Throughout the town the church bells were ringing frantically and a cannonade of saluting shots was being fired constantly.

Numerous searchlights played upon the silvery sides of the dirigible as it passed over the town.

Cruised About Town

The airship, however, did not go directly to the field, but cruised about over the town. It was raining, but there was no wind. The ship was expected to land at about 11.30 p.m., Eastern standard time.

Not all of the thousands who had gathered to welcome the dirigible needed the salvos of guns to tell them that the ship had successfully completed her voyage. Despite the rain, which had been falling all night, many persons had sacrificed sleep in order to make an early pilgrimage to the aerodrome, where a huge crescent of humanity had formed as early as 4 a.m. local time.

Large details of police and several companies of soldiers held the crowd in check when the Graf Zeppelin suddenly hove in sight. It was flying very low and fast from the northwest, with bright lights shining from its cabin windows.

Big Crowd Present

Never before has this town witnessed such excitment and such a crush of humanity as it did yesterday.

Like a village in a gold rush the main streets were ammed with crowds of people, automobiles and vehicles of every description. These frequently were only able to crawl along, being held up by the crowds blocking the thoroughfare before the bulletin boards, giving the progress of the great dirigible on its homeward journey.

Hotel lobbies were teeming with men and women of many nationalities. The confused babel of voices in German, French and causing such a turmoil and noise as to drown out all ordinary conversations. The Bavarian Automobile Club descended on the town with 100 cars and approximately 400 persons. The Wurtemburg Motor Club with fifty cars materially added to the congestion. All available rooms were requisitioned not only in Friedrichshafen but along the North Shore of Lake Constance as far as Neersburg on one side and Lindau on the other.

The outer entrance to the Zeppelin aerodrome was besieged by dense crowds of local sightseers and country folk gazing enraptured in the dusk of the evening on the brilliant spectacle of searchlights playing on the decorated hangar, the fields and the distant houses on the lake.

News Scarce

In the Administration building of the Zeppelin works intense conjecturing proceeded over the scarcity of news about the location of the dirigible; until finally Constructor Duer last night decided to make a final attempt to establish wireless communication with the ship.

Meanwhile Director Coleman ordered several hundred workmen, who had been waiting the Zeppelin's arrival, to go home for the night, but to hold themselves in readiness for the possible emergency of the airship's landing about or after mid-

UPSET FROM CANOE.

Companion Loses Life—Body is Recovered After Short Search.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 1—The presence of mind of three of his fellow employees and the first aid rendered by one of them was instrumental in saving the life of William Hamilton, extra gang laborer at Nemegos, on the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it was learned here to-day in connection with the drowning of John McDonald, a Scottish emigrant.

Hamilton and McDonald had upset in a canoe when their cries for help were heard by Brakemen C. Beacker and A. Dupluois, who were on a nearby siding waiting for another train to pass. Rushing to the shore they saw Hamilton struggling in the water, and securing a canoe succeeded in getting him to shore unconscious There was no sign of the second man. Section Foreman H. Hare, who is one of the many C. P. R. men who are qualified in First Aid, assisted by Mrs. Henderson, wife of the station agent, applied artificial respiration and after an hour and a half's incessant work Hamilton showed signs of recovering. Later he was removed to the hospital at Chapleau. The water was dragged by the section gang, in charge of Constable Anderson of the Provincial Police and Constable Arbuthnott of the C. P. R. Police, and McDonald's body was recovered the following day. Beacker and Dupluois and Hare have each been congratulated and rewarded by their superior officers.

YOUTH IS SHOT CLEANING GUN

Younger Brother Points Gun Which Accidentally Discharges.

DIES IN HOSPITAL.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 1.—James Henley, 15 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henley of Millbridge was accidentally shot when a gun which he and his brother aged 12 was cleaning last night discharged. The boy passed away at the Belleville General Hospital to-day. He was brought to the institution last night and an operation was performed in an effort to save the boy's life. An inquest will be held late to-day, Coroner Dr. R. W. Tennent presiding. The two boys were cleaning the guns and as it sometimes went off at half cock they were unduly careful. The gun being loaded Harry had it pointed towards his brother and in some accidental way the trigger was pulled. A large number of pellets entered the boy's abdomen.

TORONTO MAN IS SHOT WHILE DUCK HUNTING

Gun Accidentally Discharges When Being Removed From Canoe.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

Hunting Ducks Near Campbellford—Leaves Wife and One Child.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Human skill and medical knowledge lost after a seventeen-hour struggle to save the life of Jack Allison, 28, a Toronto citizen, who with three friends was enjoying a few days' duck shooting in the region of Percy Boom about five miles south of here. As nearly as can be learned, Allison was unloading his canoe after returning from the morning shooting and his gun accidentally discharged and the charge entered his abdomen. Medical aid was summoned from Campbellford and the unfortunate man was later taken to the Belleville hospital. There an operation was performed and the foreign matter removed from the wound. A blood transfusion was considered advisable and during the afternoon, Allison's brother who, with his mother, had hurried from Toronto by motor, gave his blood to help his brother in distress. Until half past one this morning, the battle for life continued.

BEACHED CANOE LOST

It appears that the four men had been at the Boom for several days and had enjoyed considerable luck. Reports are that sevety-eight ducks have fallen before the guns of the party. Yesterday Allison bagged two Whistlers and he and his partner were returning to their camp about eight o'clock. Allison was the second to beach his canoe, his partner having landed first and gone a few yards up the shore. Just how the accident occurred is not known, but it is that that while he was unloading his canoe, Allison attempted to drag his gun forward by the muzzle. The sound of the report brought his partner back with a start. He asked Allison if he was hit and Allison replied that he was.

"Are you hit bad?" was the next question of the other.

"I'm done for," Allison replied.

Fearing to move him in case of increasing the hemorrhage, Allison was left lying flat in the canoe while medical aid was rushed from Campbellford. The doctor had him removed to the camp and administered stimulants. The best chance lay in immediate removal to a hospital and Bennett's invalid coach was called, and Allison taken to the Belleville hospital.

Although little hope was entertained from the beginning, the doctors in attendance would not say that there was no hope. The shot entered the body from the right side just under the ribs, puncturing the plural and peritoneal cavities. The major portion of the charge remained in the abdomen and did not pass through the body. There was also some shot in the liver.

The mother and brother, of the injured man motored from Toronto as soon as they received the word. The operation was completed when they arrived and later in the afternoon the brother gave some of his blood in an endeavor to save the life of hts injured brother. But all that could be done did not suffice to save the life of Jack Allison.

Allison was a married man with one child. His wife was in Belleville as soon as she was able to arrive after receiving the word and spent the afternoon at the hospital. It is believed here, from reports circulated, that Allison was an overseas man during the Great War.

City Loses Appeal In William Henry Case

Judge Huycke's Judgment Is Upheld

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 1 (Special to The Examiner).—The Second Divisional Court to-day dismissed an appeal by the City of Peterborough from a judgment in which Judge Huycke on June 27 awarded damages of $2,654 to William Henry for injuries sustained through falling on an icy sidewalk. The plaintiff suffered a fractured hip.

In dismissing the appeal, Chief Justice Latchford referred to the difficulty confronting a municipality in avoiding such liability:

"The trial judge has found gross negligence on the part of the city," His Lordship said.

"Speaking for myself, it seems that the determination of liability in such cases is a matter of the gravest responsibility. I know that it is utterly impossible for a city or a town under conditions such as frequently exist in winter so to attend to a sidewalk as to provide against slippery condition. However, the law is laid down, and the appeal must be dismissed." Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for Mr. Henry and Frank Hughes, K.C., for the city.

FLYING INSTRUCTOR DIES RESULT OF AIRPLANE CRASH

Camp Borden Aviator is Killed Almost Instantly When Plane Crashes.

ONE MAN INJURED.

Court of Inquiry Has Been Ordered—Airplane Complete Wreck.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — One man was killed instantly and another seriously injured when a moth airplane spun into the ground from a height of 200 feet at Camp Borden to-day.

Flying Officer A. E. Reynolds, R. C.A.F. instructor, died almost instantly and his passenger, Major Currie of Ottawa, suffered a broken leg and possible internal injuries. The airplane was completely wiped out.

A court of inquiry has been ordered, as there is no clue left in the wreck as to the cause of the crash. The ship had been in the air but a few minutes, and was still gaining altitude when it nose-dived into the earth. The airplane was fitted with dual control, but it is not known whether or not the controls were connected in the seat occupied by Currie, the passenger.

Visits Camp.

The flight was being held, it is said, for practice purposes. Reynolds, an experienced flier, who came out from the old country only this summer to join the R.C.A.F. instruction staff, was taking friend Currie up for a spin. The Ottawa man had come as a visitor to the camp. The day was clear and calm. Beautiful flying weather. No difficulty for the pilot was noticed as the ship took off. When it was in the air no one heard the engine cut out. The first notice of the accident came when the ship smashed on the flying field. Reynolds, horribly injured, died in a few seconds, while Currie was rushed to the camp hospital. It is believed he will recover.

Camp officials stated to-day that they did not know whether the pilot was in the front seat, where he would sit if he were giving instructions to the passenger, or in the back seat, where he would sit if they were doing just straight flying.

NO INCREASE IN MILK PRICE

Milk Vendors Will Not Increase Price of Milk This Winter.

UP IN OTTAWA.

Milk will remain at the same price, ten cents a quart. The Examiner learned on conversation with G. A. Gillespie of the Peterborough Milk Products and A. H. Campbell of Campbell Dairy Products that although milk and cream were taking an advance of two or three cents a quart in most other cities, the price would remain the same here. Both said that there was very little profit in selling their high-grade and pasteurized milk at the present prices, but they would not advance them.

The price of milk in Kingston will increase one cent, making the new price eleven cents a quart. This advance takes place to-day. In Ottawa the price of milk will advance three cents a quart to-day.

In most cities the winter price of milk is usually two to three cents higher than the summer prices.

EPIDEMIC OF MISSING BOYS

Youths Reported Missing From London, Oshawa, Trenton and Hamilton.

POLICE NOT CALLED.

TORONTO, Nov. 1 (Special to The Examiner).—An epidemic of missing youths has struck the Province. The assistance of Provincial police has not yet been invoked, however, to investigate the cases reported in London, Oshawa, Trenton, Hamilton and other centres.

"The only case reported to us was one at St. Catharines and that boy turned up after a day or so," Inspector Cuddy, Acting Commissioner, said to-day.

Growing mystery shrouds the disappearance at London of Ralph McKey, 21-year-old Regina boy attending the University of Western Ontario, and of Herbert Chappelle, 14-year-old son of Mrs. A. S. Chappelle, aged 28. No further light on either case was reported early to-day.

It was stated by the mother, who is seriously ill over the affair, that she chastised her son last Thursday for a misdemeanor, following which he disappeared. Wracked by fears that Herbert may have sought death in his despondency, Mrs. Chappelle is confined to her bed.

No Connection

London police scout the suggestion that there is any connection between the Chappelle and McKay cases, though they disappeared on the same day. McKay's parents, who arrived here here Tuesday to direct the search, are almost at their wit's end in their anxiety, though they say they do not consider for one minute the idea of foul play.

From Hamilton is reported the case of J. Piner who disappeared three days ago. Hamilton police are aiding in the search.

The case of two Oshawa lads, Norman Brown, 13, and Francis Cunningham, 17, has engaged the attention of the police there, though it is hoped by relatives that they are merely victims of a wanderlust spirit. Young Brown was an ardent reader of West-

GALT, Ont., Nov. 1 (Special to The Examiner). — Police were to-day rounding up a gang of young ruffians who, in their alleged Hallowe'en pranks, assaulted M. Cluney, steward at the Memorial Home, when he remonstrated them for the alleged torturing of kittens by tossing them by their tails up on to the roof of an old building opposite the home. The gang, numbering about 20, pounced on Mr. Cluney, knocked him down and it is said, kicked him. He might have been more seriously injured had it not been for his faithful collie dog, "Buster," who rushed across the road to the defence of his master and battled off Mr. Cluney's assailants. The dog's barking served as an alarm and the gang disappeared in various directions, and while the police were immediately called they found no trace of them at that time. However, Wednesday afternoon police arrested Roy Wakeford, 19, who was released on his own bail. It is said the members of the gang are all teen age boys.

Mr. Cluney is still confined to his bed. His left shoulder was dislocated and his body is a mass of bruises. Having been shell-shocked overseas, he is in a state of nervous collapse. He got up but collapsed, and had to be put back in bed.

The gang which attacked Mr. Cluney is believed to be that which is responsible for an epidemic of mischief in the south end of the city. Neighbors in the vicinity of the Memorial Hall have been missing their cats lately and Mr. Cluney, catching the gang, told them if they did not desist he would telephone the Humane Society officials. No sooner had he spoken, he says, than he was grabbed from behind and the mob piled upon him.

HELD AT HAVELOCK.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society will be held on Tuesday evening, November 27, at 8 o'clock, in the City Council Chambers. The result of the tag day held in Havelock recently shows total receipts of $61.00, an increase of almost $15.00 over last year, which goes to show that the people are in sympathy with the work being done.

The number of children in the shelter at present is seven, a very small number in comparison with other years, and also in comparison with the number of children in most of the shelters throughout the province.

THE WEATHER

With the ushering in of another month, it is in order to give a few facts and figures regarding October. The month was cooler than usual, much wetter than average, and with considerably less sunshine than we usually have. The highest temperature was 84 degrees; the lowest, 15 degrees. The rainfall totalled 4.15 inches, about one-third more than average. We had no snow in a measurable quantity here, although in several nearby localities there was some. While there were a few pleasant days, they were outnumbered by dull days with cold rains.—W. P.

Long before eight o'clock the masqueraders began to gather at the Armouries. Little girls, little boys, women and men, they all came in costume and took their places behind their banners in readiness for the big parade.

OLD RESIDENT STILL ACTIVE IN BUSINESS

James Middleton Tax Collector For Smith Township For Past Nine Years.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Has Spent Most of His Life in Peterborough District.

James Middleton, who celebrated his eighty-third birthday yesterday, was hard at work upon his account books when The Examiner called upon him at his real estate office on Hunter Street this morning. Mr. Middleton has been tax collector for the Township of Smith for the past nine years. He collects and keeps account of an annual sum of about $48,000.00, and he has hundreds of names upon his books to show when and how much were the taxes paid.

Mr. Middleton said: "The proudest thing to me in my life are these books which I keep for the Township of Smith." He turned over the pages for The Examiner to see. The names were all neatly and clearly written, and the book-keeping was perfect. The pages were clean and white, free from any blots or smurge of rubbed-out blunders.

Mr. Middleton was born in Peterborough County, about three miles from this city, in 1845, on the First Concession of Smith, on the same farm now occupied by Samuel Dickson. At the age of three he moved with his parents to a farm near Selwyn. At that time the farms were as well settled in that community as they are now, but the land was still pretty well wooded. He attended Number 9 School, in the Township of Smith, and learned to read and write and do figures. "I was always good at figures," said Mr. Middleton. He had to walk two and a half miles to school, and in the winter it was a difficult journey for him because the roads were filled with snow drifts and were never opened from the first fall of snow until the spring thaw. "We seemed to have more snow in those days and there was no visiting back and forth among the neighbors. A person just stayed where he was until spring," said Mr. Middleton.

Elected to Council.

When he was twenty-one years of age, Mr. Middleton ran for councillor of the Township and was elected. He remained as councillor, reeve, and deputy-reeve for twenty years. He was warden of the county the last

STOWAWAY GIVEN GRAND RECEPTION

Clarence Terhune Had No Place To Sleep on Graf Zeppelin.

FRIEDRICHSCHAFEN, Germany, Nov. 1.— (Canadian Press).—Clarence Terhune, nineteen year old stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin was given a triumphant reception by a big crowd here. Terhune said he did not know what he would do but he would not remain in Europe long. He said he was maid of all work on the trip, and said while he had lots to eat he had no place to sleep.

Down the street they came. A bunch of rollicking clowns at the head prancing and dancing to the music of the band. Right in front of the band came a cart loaded with clowns and drawn by an eager old horse. The rig shimmied and bounced to the antics of the clowns and it threatened to spill its hearty load of tramps in the road; but no one seemed to mind. The masqueraders followed in wild profusion, but all keeping two by two down the centre of the street. There were all kinds of costumes, all kinds of shapes, all kinds of figures. There were black faces, red faces, and funny faces. There were those dressed in the robbings of old chests and attics, and others dressed in the bright costumes of former days, stepping right out from the pages of history. A big six-footer dressed as a child wearing enormous ears holding a painted balloon and drawing a small train. Pig Skin Peters held his trusty dog on chain and carried his trained duck. Uncle Sam wore the Stars and Stripes and smoked a huge Havana. His Satanic Majesty dressed in his fiery clothes of the burning inferno. A whole vegetable garden composed one novel costume. Old St. Nicholas with a bulging bag of toys and a Christmas tree paraded down the street together. Miss Canada covered from head to foot with maple leaves. Britannia draped in the Union Jack wearing her golden helmet and carrying her trident of power. Bobo Baxter peddled his demi tasse. These are only a few of the costumes that drew cheers from the crowds that massed the sidewalks. The Caledonian Pipe and Drum Band made an impressive appearance as they marched in their national garb to the skirling of the pipes and the roll of the drums.

A High Light

One of the high lights in the parade was the band of the Peterborough Machine Gun Company, uniformed in pajamas of various colors and stripes. Their instruments circled about their necks and throaty tunes wheezed from the kazoos. The drummers beat old wash boilers. It was noticed that one of the most popular and best rendered selections of these lusty musicians was that old lament, "How Dry I Am."

Judged in Rink.

After parading George street before the throngs on the sidewalks the parade proceeded to the Brock street rink. The rink was as full of spectators as it was that memorable night when the Petes won the championship. The judging of the costumes took place in the rink on a raised platform in the centre of the floor.

The winners of the various costume competitions were:

Boys (14 and under) Comic—Edgar Woodcock, three years old, dressed as a little pickaninny.

Special mention— Harry Faist, of Winnipeg, six years old.

Girls (under 14) Fancy — The judges found it difficult to choose all were so good. Kitty Walker dressed in white with silvery trimings. Special mention, Dorothy Cottingham and Lucille Millburn both wore splendid costumes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Farr.

Seven Wild Geese Also Added to Their Haul at Muskrat Island.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Nov. 1.—William Owens and John Gordon, of Toronto, while spending a week's vacation duck-shooting at Muskrat Island, Pidgeon River, had the good luck to bag 40 ducks. Mr. Gordon had six wild geese come over his duck hide, all of which he killed, and about an hour later, another flock of geese came his way. He shot one of these. This is an exceptional record and the remarkable feature is that the geese were all killed with No. 5 shot and a Winchester pump gun.

Shooting Match Held.

Jim McQuade held a very successful shooting match at his home on Monday afternoon. Although the weather was unfavorable, nine geese were captured by the best marksmen. The average price was $3.11 for each goose, after expenses were deducted.

G. W. HATTON BECOMES SICK AT COURT CASE

Magistrate Adjourns George Ward Action in Police Court Yesterday.

CROWN GIVES EVIDENCE.

Is Charged With Attempt To Escape Liability Following an Accident.

His Worship Magistrate O. A. Langley and Alex Elliott, counsel for the defence, were quick to extend a courtesy to Crown Attorney Hatton, K.C., when, on Wednesday afternoon illness overtook him in court and he was forced to retire after concluding the case for the crown against George Ward, Millbrook resident, charged with intent to escape liability, civil or criminal, following an accident some three weeks ago. In it, Mrs. Ewart Davies and her 13-year-old daughter were so severely injured as to necessitate their confinement to the hospital for three weeks.

The bench adjourned the case until Saturday morning at 10 a.m. with Mr. Elliott acceeding.

Chief's Evidence Important.

It is recalled that on the night of October 6, last, Mrs. Davies and her daughter were injured in an accident at the Park, Rubidge and Rink street intersection, and at the time, there was some confusion as to who the driver of the car had been and whether he had taken the necessary steps of rendering assistance and leaving the name and address following the accident. The police had not been able to locate him on investigating the accident.

To-day, the crown presented eight witnesses but only the last called, Chief of Police Newhall were able to give any definite evidence as to the actions of the accused, Ward, following the accident, particularly regarding the rendering of assistance and leaving of name, license number and address.

Chief Newhall told of his visit to the scene of the accident after it had been investigated by two of his men. He had noted a large spot of blood on the east side of Park street almost into Rink street and about eight feet from the curb. "I heard nothing more," said he, "until on the following Wednesday, October 10, George Ward of Millbrook called on me with the two ladies here in court. Ward said he had been sent from a lawyer's office. He said that he had asked the keeper of the little store (whom I identified as Mr. Holbrook) to call a doctor and then had gone over and sat in his car opposite the C.G.E. offices for forty-five minutes. I said this was not correct as I had been down to the scene, and he said he had gone to stay with relatives in the south end. I asked him why he didn't leave his name and number and he said he had done everything else that he could. Ward volunteered the statement and no questions were asked until he was half way through it.

There was no cross examination.

Mrs. Nellie Davies.

Mrs. Nellie Davies, one of the victims of the accident, who resides at 33 Lafayette avenue, told of being with her daughter, Iris, on the evening of October 6, when the accident occurred. She did not recall much about the accident anymore than that they had been struck from behind. She recalled being picked up after having been unconscious. It was about 7.20 p.m. and Doctor Scott had come to her home and had later attended her in hospital where she had been confined about three weeks.

Mrs. Davies seemed slightly confused as to the exact location of the scene of the accident but believed that she had been close to the sidewalk. She did not know what had struck her, from which direction it Cross examined, she recalled starting from the west side of Rubidge street had come or who the driver had been. for the east side of park, toward the C.G.E. garages.

Sergeant Thomas.

Sergeant Thomas, of the city police department told of receiving the report of an accident the evening of October 6, about 7.20 and of passing the scene about three or four minutes later. The reason he and Officer Naples had not stopped their car was because there was no one around the scene. They had gone down to 33 Lafayette avenue and had returned to the scene of the accident at about 7.50 p.m.

Cross-examined, witness said he could not tell how much time might have elapsed betwen the time of the accident and the time at which he had received the call. He did not recall any lanes leading off from the scene whereon, the counsel for the accused suggested the car might have been parked. There was a drizzling rain. The corner was pretty well lighted.

Constable J. Naples.

Constable Naples gave evidence much the same as his fellow officer. He had driven the car when they had gone to investigate the accident and had slowed down at the scene. They had continued down to Lafayette avenue and returned. Cross-examined witness said they had not been talking to anyone who had actually seen accused's car. They had only known where the accident had taken place through a report by a third person.

FROST HINDERS EARLY PLOWING

Farmers Have Found Ground Too Hard To Start Early Morning Operations.

APPLES HARVESTED.

BALDIEBORO, Nov. 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—The frosts during the past few days have been quite severe. Everything is taking on the appearance of late fall. During the early morning hours of the past week, farmers have found it necessary to wait until the sun had thawed the frost off the surface of the soil before they could commence plowing.

Most of the apples in this vicinity have been picked, and are, with the exception of some winter varieties, very scarce, and also of poor quality.

Many farmers have found the rot in potatoes and upon picking them over a second time, have found that the rot has developed after the potatoes were dug.

There is a large acreage of fall plowing done, but still there is a lot to be completed, the continued wet weather keeping the farmers off the land.

Threshing is now in full swing but the grains and seeds seem to yield poorly. Wheat is yielding from twenty to thirty bushels per acre; barley from twenty-five to forty bushels. The quality of the barley is excellent. Oats are threshing from fifteen to thirty bushels per acre and in most cases are a poor quality. Although buckwheat is yielding only twenty-five bushels per acre, the quality is good. Peas are yielding from fifteen to thirty bushels, this crop being greatly damaged by the harvest rains. Alsike is only a fair sample, yielding from two to three bushels.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. I. Clothier of Oshawa visited friends in the vicinity on Saturday.

Mr. Aylmer Dawson spent a few days last week, the guest of friends in Toronto.

PONTYPOOL MAN IS WINNER OF $10,000 IN VETERANS POOL

Fred Graham Drew Baytown in Cambridgeshire Stakes.

SECOND PRIZE.

PONTYPOOL, Ont., Nov. 1.— Fred Graham, who won $10,000 second prize in the Army and Navy Veterans pool in Quebec in the Cambridgeshire handicap, is 30 years old, and a bachelor. He drew Baytown.

He lives when at home in Pontypool, Ontario, but in the summer time works on a section gang of the C.P.R. A few weeks ago he left his home to work with the Hydro near Toronto.

Graham's ticket number was 8167X.

About two weeks ago he told the station master of the C.P.R., Mr. O. Dunn, who was selling tickets for the event, to save one for him.

He forgot all about it, however, and last week Mr. Dunn reminded him that he owed him a dollar for the ticket. Graham was going to sell it to a chap who was in the station but came back and decided to keep it himself.

He also bought another ticket at Inniskillen, but won nothing on it. Last Saturday he received a telegram from the association telling him that his ticket has been drawn on the horse Baytown. The town is very much excited and they can hardly believe the good fortune.

Graham is an orphan and can neither read nor write.

NIGHT WAS QUIET.

Very Little Disturbance Was Noticed in Campbellford Last Night.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Very little disturbance marked the event of All Saints' Eve here last night. There were the usual number of the youngsters in various type of masquerade costumes parading the streets and begging candy and apples from the hospitable citizens. The street light at the corner of Bridge and Rear streets came to grief and shattered glass sprinkled the pavement at the intersection as a result. A west side corner was decorated with a few stray articles from local backyards, but no damage was reported to the authorities up till an early hour this morning.

Appearing before Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning, following his remand of several days ago, Ralph Davis pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and asked a further remand. LAFLAMME CASE IS BEING HEARD

CORNWALL, Nov. 1.—In a courtroom crowded to capacity the trial of Raoul Laflamme for the murder of his brother, Albert Laflamme, at St. Raphael, Glengarry County, on June 10, opened yesterday afternoon before Mr. Justice Raney.

Theodule Laflamme, the grey-haired father of the accused, was the first Crown witness, and stated that he first saw his deceased son, Albert, about 5 o'clock on the morning of the murder, and later at 6 o'clock, when he went out to do the chores, and half an hour later found his dead body in the yard north of the house. Raoul, the accused, had left the home farm about two years ago, he said.

In cross-examination, Mr. Laflamme said that Raoul had sent his sister away several times to a Provincial institution, and witness had some fear that as time went on he would put his father off the place, and offered Raoul $1,000 to leave the place. Witness had seen accused doing several things which indicated mental trouble. Albert took no part in any litigation between Raoul and his father, Mr. Laflamme stated.

CHILD'S COUGH WAS GONE BEFORE DOCTOR ARRIVED

Almost Instant Relief Came When He Phoned Worried Mother What to Do

Glad that she took the advice of her doctor, Mrs. O. P. Murphy, like vast numbers of mothers in Peterborough and vicinity, realizes how quickly a child's cold can now be ended by home use of a pleasant hospital method and how much needless misery and risk is caused by putting off the right treatment.

For a day or so her little daughter Louise had shown signs of a cold. She didn't pay much attention to it at first, thinking that the cold would soon go away. But that night the child kept her awake coughing and she became alarmed when the thermometer showed temperature.

Then she called the doctor. He advised Mrs. Murphy to immediately give the child Ayer's Cherry Pectoral —a quick remedy that has proved to be of unusual value in hospital treatment of children's colds.

In just a little while she had stopped coughing and was sleeping quietly. When the doctor called next day her fever had disappeared, congestion was clearing up and in another day or so all trace of the cold was gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral can be had at the nearest drug store. Even sick children love the pleasant taste—and doctors advise it because it is as harmless as the purest food—made of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which cold clinics and more than a million mothers have found to be the quickest and most effective to stop a cough and end the cold.

*CELERY AND NUT SALAD: Slice celery in quarter inch pieces. Mix with the desired quantity of chopped nuts that have been roasted in a pan in the oven until brown. By this process, much of the protein is destroyed, leaving behind a flavoring mixed with the dextrose which is very agreeable to the taste, and is a food which may be used with almost any meal. Heap the celery and nut mixture on beds of shredded lettuce. The addition of chopped parsley adds a pleasing taste.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Swollen Face.

Question: Mrs. Lucy R. asks: "Will you advise me what causes a lady sixty years old to arise in the morning with her face badly swollen? Am somewhat overweight."

Answer: Your trouble may come from many different causes, such as pyelitis, Bright's Disease, heart leakage, etc. A proper diagnosis should establish the real cause, and this would naturally suggest the proper treatment.

Starch and Protein Meals.

Question: Mrs. J. I. W. writes: "I notice you advise starchy meals for noon. Why is this? I eat meat once a day and it must be at noon to insure perfect digestion before I sleep. Could I not change these meals about?"

Answer: I think it is usually better to have the meat meal of the day as far as possible away from the other protein meal at breakfast time, at which meal I usually advise eggs. There is no reason why you cannot sleep perfectly after using meat at night provided your combinations are correct. After this kind of meal you should be able to sleep at once, and your sleep should be dreamless. If the starch meal is used at night, it is more likely to cause excessive fermentation if you are not blessed with a good digestion. However, it is all right for you to change the meals about if you seem to get along better with your plan.

Excessive Saliva.

Question: A. W. R. asks: "What causes saliva to flow excessively before falling to sleep. If I forget about it, it ceases, and if I remember, it begins to flow and causes me to keep drawing it from the glands."

Answer: Your trouble may be caused entirely from your nervous habit of exciting the salivary flow, or may be due to over-acidity of the stomach digestive juices. Try dieting carefully to reduce the over-acidity.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

ARE MAKING GOOD.

It is gratifying to learn that the experiment of moving settlers off the unproductive land of Haliburton County to the richer soil of Northern Ontario has proved sufficiently successful to justify the continuance of the policy, and that more families are to have a chance to secure better homes for themselves.

Hon. William Finlayson's reforestation system, which includes the removal of all the settlers at present situated on rocky farm land in Haliburton and other townships and the conversion of the area thus cleared into a reforestation and tourist country, will mean much to the Province when it is completed, and just at present it means much to the settlers who have thus been transplanted.

The reports from Northern Ontario where the pioneers of the movement were placed are reassuring.

The ex-Haliburtonians are doing well.

They are comfortably housed, are constructing splendid farm buildings, and are satisfied with the outlook, confident that their future will be prosperous.

The trek northward will undoubtedly accelerate as a result of the favorable news of the success of the first quota.

A CHANCE FOR WAR FLYERS.

Peterborough's former war flyers, in common with other Canadian veterans of the air service, are to be given an opportunity to take a refresher course in aviation at Camp Borden at the expense of the Government, the only stipulation being that they afterwards must be willing to serve for a year as instructor to some one of the civilian flying clubs.

This course is a commendable attempt on the part of the Dominion Government to make flying in this country as safe as possible, and to interest more Canadians in aviation and keep the air service, Government as well as commercial, Canadian in personnel.

It is felt that ex-war aviators of two or three hundred hours' experience would make ideal instructors, and by making a free course possibl e in order to give such flyers the opportunity to brush up their flying technique, it is hoped that a large number will be attracted to aviation again and will place the benefit of their training and experience at the service of young Canadians anxious to enter the flying game.

The refresher course opens at Camp Borden next week, and the attention of local ex-army airmen is called to the opportunity that is thus offered.

THE WAR MEMORIAL.

While the war memorial in Confederation Square will not be unveiled until next spring, it is practically completed, and there is need of a note of warning from parents and school teachers in regard to treating with proper respect this symbol of the community's grateful remembrance of the men who gave their lives in the Great War.

Small children have been noticed climbing over parts of the memorial and treating it as a new playground, while boys and girls well in their 'teens and certainly old enough to know better have been guilty of similar lack of appreciation of the significance of the memorial.

It is the duty of parents, The Examiner believes, to tell their children that the community's tribute to the citizen soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice must be regarded with reverence.

It stands there as a lasting memorial of the gallantry of hundreds of Peterborough City and County soldiers who died that their beloved homeland might be saved.

It represents, too, the grief of hundreds of families to whom a tersely worded telegram from the Militia Department brought tragedy back in thoose dark days when the world was at war.

It is there because men died and women wept—and still weep.

Let us learn to look upon it in the light of what it signifies.

A WORTHLESS PROMISSORY NOTE.

To Canadians, one of the curious things about the United States presidential elections is the air of certainty with which the parties promise to build the St. Lawrence deep waterway. Mr. Hoover, for his part, offers it to the farmers as a measure of relief as though it could be built over night.

The truth, of course, is that there is not a chance of the St. Lawrence waterway being begun, let alone completed, within eight or ten years. So far as Canada is concerned, the issue is not even now a live one. There was much talk about it last year, and a lot of correspondence, and much activity behind the scenes about power rights; but, so far as getting on with the project mattered, such things meant nothing.

As things stand at present the while question is hopelessly tied up in a legal tangle about provincial and Federal power rights. More than that, there is no evidence of the slightest disposition on the Government's part to go ahead with the enterprise, no evidence that the Opposition is any more anxious about it than the Government, and still less evidence that there is any agitation about it in the country.

If the farmers of the American Northwest are really depending upon the St. Lawrence waterway to bring them relief, then they certainly have a long siege ahead of them.—Ottawa Journal.

A CLEVELAND SUGGESTION.

A Cleveland tourist, well acquainted with fishing conditions in this district, has written an interesting letter to Rod and Gun, in which he makes several recommendations, one of which has already been brought forward by The Examiner.

That is, that the falling supply of game fish in this section of Ontario should be offset by the introduction of new kinds of fish.

The Examiner suggested that pickerel might be used for this purpose, and the Cleveland angler also recommends the pickerel, which he calls the wall-eye and the Northern pike.

Whether local sportsmen approve of his program or not, Mr. Stark's views are full of interest to the people of this district.

He writes as follows:

"Having just returned from spending six weeks north of Peterborough, Ont., your latest issue found me thinking of fishing and kindred subjects. I notice one of your subscribers from Oshawa writes a timely letter on the poor fishing in the old Ontario district; and as most city dwellers lack the time to go into the far north, this is a serious problem when one realizes that there is no excuse for it.

"The situation at Rice Lake is just as he states. I fished there for six weeks three years ago and in that time had what I considered good fishing in spite of the fact that I only caught two 'lunge and seven bass, but caught by casting a good number of wall-eyes. Destroy the wall-eyes in Rice Lake and it has nothing but some temperamental 'lunge and a few bass, usually wormy by July 1st.

"The situation is similar north of Peterborough, except that some of the best lakes have no wall-eyes, nor northern or grass pike. The 'lunge are there in fair numbers but refuse to bite. The bass are big but scarce and usually wormy, though this latter condition, which spoils them for food, is not known by most tourists, who unknowingly eat worms and all.

"May I submit for the consideration of your columns the following two suggestions:

"1. Introduce into all the lakes near the populated centres new kinds of fish. I suggest the wall-eye and the northern pike. This would result in a greater variety of fishing, thus giving the few bass and 'lunge a rest from pursuit, and what is more important, in reducing the abundance of small fish, perch and sunfish, etc., that now keep the larger fish so well fed that they refuse all but the most skilfully placed plug or minnow.

"2. The cause and remedy of the wormy condition of the fish in this neighborhood should be studied and properly dealt with. Three years ago I found that Rice Lake had some of the finest perch I had encountered anywhere, six being taken within half an hour, all over twelve inches long. These were simply alive with worms in June and thus were cast out, though I have seen tourists and city fishermen carry them home in glee or cook and eat them on the spot. Bass are not so badly affected with worms, but three out of four of the bass (large mouths) I have taken from the lakes in this section during the past six years have been wormy.

"The lakes from Rice Lake north are among the finest in the world for scenery and as places where fish might be, and their convenience to populated centres makes it particularly desirable that the greatest of outdoor sports should be preserved.

"Walter H. Stark, Cleveland, Ohio."

UNCLE SAM IS INTERESTED.

With registrations nearly double the total vote in 1924, one secures a real indication of the intensity of interest that attends the presidential campaign across the line. Four years ago 29,091,492 persons cast ballots in the Coolidge-Davis contest. This year the registration totals 43,084,257. In New York State alone there are 4,875,721 registrations, as against 3,256,319 in 1924.

What does this heavy registration mean? It can only mean one thing and that is increased interest. The Coolidge-Davis affair was a foregone conclusion from the start. Mr. Davis, an outstanding man in every respect, never had a chance to win. Everyone appreciated this and, consequently, the campaign was a very tame affair. With "Al" and "Herb" in the field, however, the situation in 1928 is decidedly different. The strongest possible candidate of each party is making the race. Each man is determined to win. Mr. Smith and Mr. Hoover are working early and late and leaving no stone unturned. It is no Coolidge-Davis tea party; it is an honest-to-goodness battle, the kind so many Americans like.

Careful observers of the situation incline to the belief that the heavier registration is a happy omen for Governor Smith. They base this claim on the great success that has attended the Democratic nominee's speaking tours throughout the country. Everywhere he goes, the story is the same. Philadelphia, stronghold of Republicanism, fairly went crazy over the New York Governor last week. The same thing happened in Chicago, in Denver, in Boston. In Baltimore last night the ovation to Mr. Smith lasted 21 minutes and even then the candidate had to stop it in order not to cut too deeply into his radio time.

A Washington despatch yesterday quoted the American correspondent of the London Times as having undergone something of a change of opinion in his estimate of the American political situation. This correspondent had no doubt, a short time ago, of Mr. Hoover's election. He cables his paper this week, however, that the outcome is by no means certain. It may be said, of course, that estimates are of little value, that anything can happen in an election campaign. This is the case, and because it is the case, speculations are made. Obviously none would be necessary if results were certain.

The election will be held next Tuesday. The betting odds favor Mr. Hoover and the indications are that he will be chosen. There are those, however, who believe that the "dope"—as sporting circles have it—may be all wrong, and that Mr. Smith will stage one of the greatest "upsets" in American political history.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

After he read the Globe's leader on Wednesday Premier Mackenzie King had no difficulty in realizing that he was really home.

BISHOP LLOYD AND THE QUOTA

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir:

Before urging the Federal Government to introduce a quota law, should we not try every other method of bringing British emigrants to Canada and planting them on the land? A quota law is a doubtful expedient for a young nation professing belief in the doctrine of human brotherhood, especially as we have unlimited room for expansion—have a population of only nine million and can support 200,000,000. In view of this enormous gift of open spaces that has fallen into our hands, does it become us to refuse to allow honest, healthy men and women of other nationalities, anxious to work, to enter Canada because they exceed the number of immigrants from Britain?

Rather, should we not do our duty toward the Motherland by speeding up the exodus from her shores? "This ought ye to have done and not to have left the other undone." Britishers in distress! Land in distress! To bring the two together spells opportunity, not only for Canada, but for the Church. Is it not true that the reason we have so few arrivals from Britain is that we fail in our duty toward them?

Britishers who wish to come, have probably been out of work for some time, and have no money; and homesteading is not a poor man's task. Neither the banks nor any of our governments will loan money to a homesteader until he gets his patent, owns stock and other collateral. The banks do not pretend to live on anything except interest, but the churches profess to thrive on altruism. Their very life is professedly to serve others. Will the Church not take up the burden by providing loans to new British settlers until they are on their feet and able to do business with the banks?

Of course, Bishop Lloyd does not speak for his Church, but the writer would appeal to him, to Canon Vernon, and to other leaders of the great and historic Anglican Communion who are advocating a quota law for Canada. He would ask them to use their splendid energies in persuading the Church of England in Canada and in the Motherland to call a halt to their building programs and use the money in the emigration and planting of, say 5,000 families annually on as many homesteads for the next 100 years. This would not be too great a common task for the Church in both countries.

The reason that India rejects the Christian Church, but inclines to Christ is that the various Christian denominations do not seem to have the genius of "losing themselves" that the Nazarene had. They cling to a visible kingdom with their members striving to occupy prominent positions on the right hand and on the left. India, Canada, and all other countries will turn toward the churches instead of the dance halls when church members give up the mad race for extension and supremacy and seek only to extend the invisible kingdom of universal brotherly-kindness.

If the Church universal had faith to lose itself and drop its denominational rivalry it would solve unemployment and find its own soul. So far as the writer is concerned, he is ready to associate himself with the first church that makes the providing of work and homes for idle men and women the central tenet of its faith.

Although not a Catholic myself, I admire the activity of that church in fostering settlement. I was greatly delighted recently to hear of a conversation between the Premier of one of our provinces and the representative of a Protestant Church. The latter was pleading for assistance from this particular province referred to, and added, "Why do you not do as much for our Church as you do for the Catholic Church?" The Premier's reply, in effect, was: "Get busy, do something in that direction, and we will co-operate with you. The Catholic Church is planting people on the land."

It has long been our hope that not only the churches should subsidize the unemployed, but that service clubs, universities, Boards of Trade, wealthy men and women, industrial plants, chain and departmental stores, and big businesses generally would come to the rescue. By so doing they will relegate unemployment to the limbo of soulless countries where it belongs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 1—(Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday continued of a limited character and the only business transacted was the sale of a few odd loads of barley and oats and to the United Kingdom and the continent.

There was no important change in spot prices for cash grain, but the undertone to the market was firm with a fairly good trade passing in car lots.

A fairly active business was done in spring and winter wheat flour and values were well maintained.

The trade in all lines of millfeed was active and the tone of the market was firm. A moderate amount of business was done in standard grades of rolled oats and values were steady. A strong feeling developed in the egg market and prices for fresh extras and firsts were marked up five cents per dozen. This was attributed to the small receipts and the good demand. Storage grades were unchanged. The receipts were 896 cases.

The undertone to the butter market continued firms but the demand was less active. Receipts were 104 packages.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XXI.

In spite of having no appetite and a headache, Julie quite enjoyed herself. There was something about Schofield which it was impossible not to like. He was anxious to please, so attentive and kind.

"Are you married?" Julie asked impulsively, and he flushed and shook his head.

"No. My wife died—not long ago."

"I am sorry," Julie said doubtfully, not quite sure whether it was a case for sorrow or not.

He fidgeted uncomfortably.

"I'm afraid, like many other marriages, ours was not a great success," he said.

"I think marriage is a rotten swindle," Julie declared.

He looked rather pained.

"I know some that have been very happy," he told her.

"Do you?" She shrugged her shoulders. "Few and far between, then, I am afraid."

She drummed her slim fingers on the table, conscious of Schofield's eyes upon them.

"You—you are not married?" he asked.

"Good Lord, no!" Julie laughed. "No, thank you," she said again loudly.

"Why do you say that?"

She flushed and looked away.

"Why? Oh, I don't know! I prefer independence, I suppose."

"But if you met some man who—who thought the world of you—some man who would be kind and—and devoted—"

"Are there any such men?" she asked cynically.

"There is one here," Schofield said.

She turned her head slowly and looked at him in blank amazement.

"I beg your pardon," she said at last.

Schofield's honest eyes met hers unfalteringly.

"I said there was one here," he repeated. "I suppose you are surprised. I have not forgotten that we met last night for the first time, but directly I saw you—" He paused, and went on slowly as if anxious to say exactly what was in his heart. "Directly I saw you everything was changed for me. I am much older than you are—I am nearly fifty—but until I met you I have never felt for any woman what I—what I felt for you last night."

Julie looked at him and her flippancy died away. He was so much in earnest that in spite of her wrechedness she felt touched.

He went on: "Last night when you told me I might ring up, you made me happier than I have ever been in my life. This morning, when you said you would lunch with me, I could not believe my good fortune. I am not asking you for anything, Miss Farrow—I dare say you think it presumption on my part to have said as much as I have done, but some day, if there is no other man you care for—!"

Julie gasped.

"You're not—you're not asking me to—marry you?"

"Some day I want to ask you, if you will allow me."

Julie felt as if she were dreaming. Until last night she had never seen this man, and even this morning she had forgotten his name and what he looked like, and yet now—after so short a time—he was making her a serious proposal of marriage, and, what was more, she was conscious of a faint sense of pleasure.

She broke out desperately:

"But you know nothing about me—nothing!"

"I know you are the woman with whom I could be perfectly happy."

She laughed derisively.

"That is a bold statement. If I were to tell you—"

He just touched her hand with his.

"Nothing would make any difference."

She felt her eyes wet with sudden tears.

"Are you—just—joking?" she asked.

"No."

She looked at him for a long moment in silence; she felt as if she saw him now for the first time. He was not young, as he had told her, and he was not good-looking, but there was something in his face—a steadfastness and sincerity which was like balm poured into her aching heart.

"I don't want you to say anything now," he was telling her. "If you will just let me see you—often—and be your friend."

"I don't know why you are so kind to me."

"I am being kind to myself."

She looked away, winking the tears from her lashes.

"I shall cry in a minute and disgrace you forever."

He let her alone for a little, and Julie dabbed her eyes with a handkerchief and powdered her nose.

"There now!" she said more cheerfully. "Well—where are we now?"

"Waiting for you to say that I may be your friend."

"Of course!"

"And then, some day—if there is no other man for whom you care more—"

"There is no man anywhere I care for," Julie said sharply. "There isn't anyone anywhere I care for—except perhaps Bim."

"No mother or father?"

"No," she smiled. "No sisters or brothers—no nobody!"

"You must be very lonely."

"I've got Bim."

"Bim?"

"Bim Lennox—she spoke to you on the 'phone this morning."

"Oh, yes. I saw her last night. I liked her."

"She liked you, too."

"I am glad."

He was so simple and sincere. Julie felt a sudden sense of impatience with him. He was like a breath from her old peaceful life. Lately she had seen so little of simple honesty and sincerity. Sometimes she thought she had left all those things behind her on the snow-capped mountain tops.

"Where have you been hiding all these years?" she asked impulsively.

He told her quite frankly.

"I've lived in a country town. I've just been a nobody—a junior partner in a highly respectable firm of solicitors. I made enough to live on but I doubt if I should ever have made much more. I had a little house with tesselated pavement up to the front door—" He broke off, visualizing that little house which had never really been a home. In imagination he was walking up that pavement again and fitting his latchkey in the lock; in imagination he was hearing once more his wife's querulous voice. "How late you are, Lawrence—and do wipe your boots properly!" He shivered and pushed the memory from him. Linda was dead, and the past was dead—why think about it? He went on hurriedly:

"My wife died—she was never very strong, and then a distant relation died too, and left me some money—quite a lot of money—"

"Lucky you!" Julie said.

"Yes," he answered, "I think I was very lucky," and his eyes were on her face. "I hope my luck will continue to hold," he added.

"I think you deserve that it should," Julie said. When they were driving away she remembered the daffodils.

"I want to buy some for Bim—she loves them! I dare say we can get some in Bond Street."

"Doesn't it seem a strange place to look for daffodils!" Schofield said.

"Don't you think you often find things in the most unexpected places?" Julie asked, and she remembered how strangely love had come to her—where and when she was least looking for it.

Schofield bought the largest basket of daffodils he could find.

"I believe you like them better than my orchids," he said when Julie gave a little cry of delight and bent her face to their golden sweetness.

"Better? Oh, no!" In an instant she was on her guard again, putting the daffodils away. I'm afraid I've got real London tastes—night clubs and hothouse flowers, and staying in bed all day so I can be up all night. I wanted the daffodils for Bim—she loves the country. Only this morning she suggested that we get rid of our flat and go down to live in her country cottage."

"And you would not like that?"

"I should hate it," Julie declared.

She felt his eyes upon her with quizzical kindness.

"Why do you look at me like that?" she asked.

"I am not sure if I altogether believe that you hate the country," he said.

"What do you mean?"

"That I am not quite sure if you really love London as much as you would like me to believe."

"Oh, but I do, I do!" she insisted. "I used to live in the country. I was quite a country bumpkin, I assure you. I went to bed early and got up early and wore country clothes, and did harmless, stupid things—"

"It sounds rather attractive."

"It was boring!" Julie declared. "And so you came to London."

"Yes, after—" She broke off. "And I hope to live and die in London," she added with forced enthusiasm.

"I hope you will live and die in the place you like best," Schofield said.

"You are the kind of man who would spoil a woman terribly," Julie said.

"It would give me great happiness if I had the right to spoil you."

She laughed rather sadly.

"It's such early days. Soon—perhaps quite soon—you will know me better and then you will wonder why you ever thought me nice at all. I've got all sorts of vices."

"I don't believe you."

"Ask Bim."

"I will."

"Ask Marco Essen."

"Essen." Is that the man I saw you with last night?"

"Yes."

"I most certainly shall not ask him."

"You don't like him?"

"No. I am sorry if he is a friend of yours—"

"He is not a particular friend. He's just one of our little crowd."

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 1 (Canadian Press)—Reports indicative of Argentine wheat crop prospects being endangered by rust did a good deal to give an upward trend to the wheat market yesterday. Houses with eastern and foreign connections were active buyers of wheat futre deliveries, but export dealings yesterday in wheat from North America were estimated at only 300,000 bushels, and hedging sales from the northwest were persistent.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ¼ to ½c net higher. Corn finished ⅝ to ¾ to 1c up, with oats showing ⅛ to ⅛c advance, and provisions varying from 77 cents decline to a rise of 10 cents.

Wheat values began to develop strength early, although the market had a hesitating start. First news about rust came by way of Liverpool in a message telling of further rains in Northern Argentina and "rumors of rust." This was suplemented later by Winnipeg advices that Winnipeg traders were buying on account of rust in Argentina. Inasmuch as the north Argentine crop especially is at a critical stage, possibilities of rust damage accelerated by undue moisture and heat had an immediate bullish effect on the wheat market here and numerous speculators who previously were on the selling side hastened to reverse their position. Word of decreasing stocks at Liverpool and of curtailment of crop estimates in Western Australia counted also as an incentive to buy.

Efforts, however, to realize profits on the bulge in wheat prices had considerable to do with failure of the market to hold at the day's top level. On the other hand, talk was current that the estimated world surplus of wheat, 300,000,000 bushels, is really less than one month's supply for the world and is not more than a safe economic reserve. On this basis, friends of higher prices contended that wheat at prices under the cost of production are at least in debatable ground.

Owing to decreased country offerings of corn, as well as on account of a forecast of rain or snow throughout much of the corn belt, corn values developed more strength even than was the case in wheat. Eastern demand for corn was good, and there were indications that a large amount of Illinois corn is going direct from interior points to the seaboard for export. Oats sympathized with corn.

Notwithstanding upturns in quotations on hogs, the provisions market averaged lower, demand being laggard.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—Butter prices were steady at the late advance on the mid-week market, and the trade reported a better movement on spot attributed to the steady increase in the demand this week. A range of from 39½c to 39¾c per lb. was obtained for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids on the Curb market, and business was livelier than for some days past.

There has been an improved demand from English importers for cheese this week and business at seaboard has responded to an increase in orders, with a firming up of prices. The local market is without any noteworthy feature and dull, with dealers quoting a nominal range of from 21½c to 22c per lb. for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded. Demand on spot for cheese is poor.

The undertone to the market for all grades of strictly fresh eggs continues firm. Local dealers report a good "over the counter" demand for fresh grades, which is extremely hard to meet owing to the small supplies available from current production. Storage eggs are moving fairly freely into distributive markets this week.

GRAND JURY INDICTS KEYES

GAINED PUBLICITY.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(Canadian Press). — An indictment against Asa Keyes, prominent district Attorney of Los Angeles county, charging "Wilful and corrupt misconduct in office" was returned here last night by the county Grand Jury, which also filed an 'accusation' in the superior court demanding his removal from office.

The indictment charged that Keyes who gained widespread publicity in the investigation of the Aimee Semple McPherson disappearance case and in the conviction of William Edward Hickman who was recently executed, had accepted money from several persons in exchange for dismissal of indictments against them or, failing in that, acquittal at the hands of juries.

GIRL CHARGED WITH MURDER

Irish Immigrant Girl Arrested in Toronto To-day On Murder Charge.

WORKED IN COBOURG.

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—(Special to The Examiner).—Margaret Sheridan, 27, out from Ireland less than a year, employed as a domestic, was arrested today in the bank of Toronto Branch, 205 Yonge street, by detective Sergeant James Thompson and detective McArthur and Russel Breen on a warrant charging her with murder.

The charge was laid at the direction of assistant Crown Attorney James Wallace, as a result of a baby being found dead October 10, by Robert Johnston in a box on the lawn at 145 Crescent Road.

After the body was found, an autopsy performed by Dr. Robinson showed the child had lived and suffered a fracture of the skull. A newspaper with a Cobourg, Ontario address on it, and on this information the police learned Miss Sheridan had been working in Cobourg, but left there September 7 for Toronto, and had transferred her bank accounts to the Yonge street branch of the Bank of Toronto.

Brought to police headquarters, Miss Sheridan is said to have admitted to detectives she was the mother of the child. She said she gave birth to the child while alone in a room on Blythewood Road, where she was employed as a domestic. She denied killing the infant and said that the baby had fallen on the floor. It did not cry and she believed it was dead.

She says she put the infant in a cardboard box and walked aimlessly about the streets for some time, not knowing the city and finally threw the box on the lawn on Crescent Road.

She will appear in the Women's Court to-morrow morning. An inquest will be held. The woman said the father of the child lived in Ireland. It was learned she was brought out from Ireland under the Dominion Government plan for placing domestics in Canada and since the death of the child has been living in a welfare home on Wellesley street.

OLD RESIDENT

year he was in the Council. Asked what year it was that he was warden, Mr. Middleton said: "I can't remember. Dates didn't seem as important to me in those days as they do now." This is typical of Mr. Middleton; he is not living in the past but in the present.

Real Estate Business.

After he grew up he moved to the farm on the Second Line of Smith, where his son, Bert, now lives. He lived there until twenty-seven years ago, when he moved into the city. During the past twelve years he has been in the real estate business, and for the past nine years he has been tax collector for the Township of Smith. Mr. Middleton said that last year there were some mistakes made in the numbering of the lots, but he has lived so long in the township that he practically knows the position of every lot by heart.

Mr. Middleton spoke of his early trips to Peterborough with his father. He said the town was very small then and he judged that there wouldn't be more than two thousand people here at that time. He well remembers driving up to a general store that stood where the old Oriental building now stands, where his father bought supplies. He spoke of the large number of saloons that dotted the streets and corners of Peterborough of those days.

HALLOWE'EN NOTES.

"It was a great night and every body had lots of fun—myself included"—Mayor Denne.

Hallowe'en is over for another year, and this morning, many conscientious church people are observing All Saints' Day. But there are others who will recall "the day after," not by any such observance, but as a day on which, on instruction by the City Police, they donned overalls and set to work to repair damage done during Hallowe'en night. Chief Newhall this morning told of several parties, apprehended during their work of destruction last night, who are redeeming that misbehaviour by putting together that which they had torn asunder—fences, door steps and whatnot.

Inspector Reid this morning expressed the disappointment shared by the members of the police department as well as those responsible for the big Examiner party, at the manner in which the spectators, numbering thousands, crowded out onto the route of the parade, thus detracting from its effectiveness. While citizens generally co-operated in keeping George Street and other streets pretty well cleared of motor cars (and the police appreciate this), the crowd seemed at times to forget that there was such a thing as a sidewalk from which they were expected to watch the parade. They crowded out to such an extent that at one point on George Street, those in the parade were forced to file through a space not greater than the width of the car tracks.

At that though, it was a night of great and unusual sport, especially for the youngsters. The police report that the "gangs" from the suburbs of the city were not altogether sympathetic to the big parade, and rather than coming in to join in it, they remained to make their own fun, being everything from tearing down fences to removing signs, old vehicles and the more innocent pranks.

The sergeant on the desk at the Police Station reported numerous complaints, but that during the parade there was a lull in the number of calls. From 9.30 on, they became more numerous again, and while there can be no detailed description of the damage done, many incidents came to the attention of the police.

At the corner of Romaine and George Streets, the glass front of a church bulletin board was smashed, an occasional garden suffered and fences on McDonnel and other streets left their resting places.

Some of the more malicious acts were those of the party who placed a large block of timber in the roadway at the corner of Charlotte Street and Monaghan Road, the placing of old fence boards, with nails pointing upward, across Aylmer Street, near McDonnel Street, about 9.30, and the breaking of a side window in Lucano's store, Aylmer Street North. Out on the highway, at the foot of the hill near Springville, a large metal sign was placed in the centre of the road, and a party of motorists was forced to stop and remove it.

An amusing incident is related of a party of young people who had parked on a side road out near Springville. Suddenly, a large band of farmers' lads appeared from ambush, and when the driver of the car attempted to pull away, they pitted their strength against that of the motor, and were successful in at least "temporarily delaying departure of the party."

The driver of a loaded furniture-moving wagon came to grief on Charlotte Street, immediately west of George Street, when his vehicle broke down. The arrival of the parade left him helpless and the long line was forced to detour around the obstruction.

Best Comic in Action—Jimmie Halsey and H. Vannette as monkey and master. The monkey was the hit of the whole show. This fellow made more grimaces and funny faces than was ever seen in the city before. He had the whole crowd with him and they roared with laughter as his every expression. He needs no false face. He pleased the audience with his "butterfly" dance to the music of the concertina played by the fat gentleman, his master.

After the parade was over those who did not go to see the judging of the costumes at the rink, went up to the armouries where the Rangers band was waiting for them with the liveliest dance music heard in Peterborough in a long time. These people were later joined, after the judging was over, by those who were at the rink. Although the armouries is the largest indoor space in the city it was jammed to the doors by the joyful pleasure seeking throng who joined together as though they had known each other all their lives. When the music started those who wished to trip the light fantastic eagerly sought the centre of the floor and danced their merriment away. The time passed all too soon and at eleven o'clock "God Save the King" was played and the merry crowd hesitatingly sought their way home. All's well that ends well.

ern adventure stories, and Cunningham, it is said, has wandered over much of Eastern Ontario. When last seen they said they were going to Bowmanville. Brown's parents say he may be spotted by two moles on the left side of his face.

Greater mystery is attached to the disappearance of Harry Hyatt, 15 years old Trenton boy. Police of both Trenton and Belleville are making persistent enquiries. eLaving home with telling his mother, he is said to have boarded a train for Toronto. He had just drawn some money for picking apples. His distracted mother states that during the summer he met a boy visiting the the district and her one hope is that Harry has just succumbed to the urge to see the bright lights.

Interesting comparisons with other months are provoked by the vital statistics for the month of October, as compiled at the City Clerk's office this morning. Fifty births, twenty-five marriages and twenty-four deaths were recorded, as compared with a like number of births, sixteen marriages and nineteen deaths

Compared with the month of September, October, 1928, shows ten more births, two less marriages and six more deaths.

FAT MAN'S RACE TO BE HELD TO-NIGHT

Bill Kay and Jim Coursay Matched For Five Mile Run.

Bill Kay and Jom Coursay, of the Raybestos, will endeavor to break all previous records for five miles this evening at 5 o'clock. Mr. Kay, who has been a long distance runner for some years past, has been in training this last few weeks and says he is in the best of shape. Mr. Kay will be running under the Philadelphia colors. He expects to be back around 5 o'clock as he has a very important engagement. Mr. Coursey, whom I think you all know, does not need much advertisement as he has been in sport for a number of years. This year he was with the Raybestos ball team as grand stand announcer. He has been doing considerable training, running from home to work and has not been late once, so you can see he is doing nicely.—Contributed.

night, as clear moonlight was forecast and mild lower air currents over the ground

There was such a run of flowers with which to welcome the return of the dirigible and her crew that additional floral decorations could be purchased only at a premium. Dr. Hugo Eckener's room in the works resembles a greenhouse, with flowers in great jars decorating his desk. In the office of the administrator, Dr. Wick, next door, there was a stack of congratulatory telegrams and welcoming letters from America and Germany for Clarence Terhune, the boy stowaway.

The Bavarian Automobile Club Presented Dr Eckener with a gold pin and both the Bavarian and Wurtemburg clubs made him an honorary member.

Noon—Graf Zeppelin—Take 2 ... ..

The homeward bound German air liner Graf Zeppelin, after a record-breaking run across the Atlantic, was back in Europe last night headed for Freidrichshafen. It was the second time that she had defied the stormy Atlantic and crossed it safely.

The best previous dirigible run across the Atlantic was made by the British ship R-34 on her homeward trip in 1919. On this trip the R-34 took 64 hours and 13 minutes to fly from Roosevelt Field to Clifden, Ireland, while her total time to her home port in England was 75 hours. It probably will take the Graf Zeppelin about 75 hours also to reach Friedrichshafen.

The third day's flight of the air liner found her making fast time off the coast of Europe. Taking the northern route instead of the southern one on which she had made her voyage to America.

Darkness had just set in when the Graf Zeppelin hove into sight over Paris. Her lights were ablaze and she sailed steadily above the city at a height of approximately 1,000 feet. She was flying directly east on a course which would carry her straight to Freidrichshafen which is on the same degree of latitude as Nantes.

A few minutes later the homing voyager passed over the populous suburb of Latremisiere. It was just as the shops and plants in that industrial place had closed their day's work. Sirens and horns shrilled a screeching welcome to the great aircraft which dipped a few hundred feet and then made a half circle as, if in acknowledgment. Then the ship turned her blunt nose eastward again and was soon lost to sight.

The night was very dark and cloudy, but there was no rain. The course which the dirigible appeared to be following was straight across France.

SUCCESSFUL EVENTS HELD

heathen, I will be exalted in the earth." This was the thought which stirred the heart of the master when he asked what was wrong with the world and if He was here now and were asked that question, He would say we need a new discovery of God. We find now as the Psalmist did in his day, a lack of knowledge of God and in the rush and hurry of life are many hindrances to gaining the proper conception of what God and His wondrous love mean. Each day must supercede what has been done on the previous day. We have the telegraph, the telephone, radio, automobile and airplanes—everything that will help us to go faster than ever before. It is the most dangerous period in our national life and this rush is great peril. "Make it snappy" is the slogan and the minister hears it over and over, even in regard to service of holy matrimony. We must have time to brood and meditate on the big issues of life. Moses served forty years in Midian tending his father-in-law's flocks before he undertook the leadership which was the outstanding feature of his career. David, in the quiet places of Judea dreamed in solitude and sat on the mountain top of meditation and wrote his conceptions of the infinite which we have in the Psalms and our Lord in the wilderness knew the value of silence and the quiet places, and so also in secular literature. Homer spent forty years in solitude and wrote the wonderful work which resulted in the liberation of his enslaved people. There are no great advances in art, music, philosophy or theology in the past fifty years; all the great works came out of solitude. The world is waiting for a voice and when it comes it will be that of a prophet or man of God. We need the ministry of silence to work out the new discovery and develop the dream. There are five distinct epochs in the history of the church, each bringing a new discovery of God. The first is the fisherman's stage when these humble men were called to be ambassadors of God. Then there was the Reformation when Luther found the church arguing over secondary matters. Third, the Wycliffe and Puritan period with still another conception of what God really is. Fourth, Wesley's revelation when he stood on the graves of his fathers and said, "The world is my parish." The last is the layman's appeal made with its authentic note of certainty.

If we could swing the world into its God-given orbit, as we stand beneath the cross and exalt His name among the heathen, what a revelation it would be.

An anthem was sung with solo parts by Mrs. J. R. Hull and a duet by Mesdames Hull and Yale. Following the sermon, Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Greenslade sang "Love Divine, All Love Excelling", Mrs. Greenslade acting as accompanist.

NORTH EMILY UNITED.

Rev. H. H. Mutton, of Cambray, conducted the anniversary services of North Emily United Church. There was a good attendance at these services. The church, which has just been redecorated, was beautified with cut flowers, plants and fruit. The choir furnished the music for the occasion, and a liberal thankoffering was received to cover the cost of the work of decorating and of putting on a new roof.

Zion Anniversary.

Rev. J. F. Everson conducted the anniversary services on Sunday at the Zion appointment of the Cambray circuit. This is the congregation from which Mr. Everson came when he entered the work of the ministry and this is the second year he has been asked to conduct these services in his old home church.

OBITUARY

CHADWICK BLACK.

Mr. Philip Black, of this city, is in Toronto attending the funeral of his father and will remain the balance of the week.

Surviving relatives of Mr. Chadwick Black are as follows: Two sons, P. Black, this city, J. Black, Toledo, Ohio; one daughter, Mrs. Atkins, of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. Winemen, also of Toledo, Ohio.

TIMOTHY TWOMEY.

(Examiner Correspondence),

ENNISMORE, Nov. 1.—The funeral of the late Timothy Twomey, whose death occurred on Friday in the St. Boniface Hospital, Winnipeg, was held on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, from the residence of his brother Maurice, to St. Martin's Church and cemetery. The funeral mass was sung by Rev. Father McAuley, and Rev. Father Galvin of Downeyville officiated at the grave.

The late Mr. Twomey was in his sixtieth year and had only been ill a few weeks with pneumonia. He had been looking forward to coming to live with his brother Maurice, of Ennismore, where he was born and resided until seventeen years ago, when he went to Winnipeg.

The deceased was of a quiet disposition, but made many staunch friends as was evidenced by the large number who attended the funeral. He leaves to mourn his loss three sisters and two brothers, Sister Veronica of Port Arthur, Sister Genevieve of North Bay, Mrs. P. J. Scollard of Peterborough, Maurice of Ennismore and Thomas of Downeyville. The pallbearers were Messrs. Thomas Cavanagh, William Killen, John Cadigan, Eugene Murphy, Timothy Murphy and W. R. Cavanagh.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JAMES MORRISON.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 1.—The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence on Caroline street, of the late James Morrison, who had been a resident of the village for a period of nearly fifty years.

There was a large attendance of old friends and neighbors who met to pay the last earthly tribute of respect to a dear old friend. The service was in charge of Rev. T. M. Wesley, assisted by Rev. S. A. Kemp.

After prayer and singing "Abide With Me," Mr. Wesley briefly addressed the people, speaking from the 13th verse of the 4th chapter of St. Paul's first epistle to the Thessalonians, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others without hope." St. Paul wrote his epistle to these early Christians probably before the writing of the gospels and in these writings he exhorted them against the temptations which beset them and bade them hold fast the faith. Those first Christians looked forward to the second coming of Christ while they were alive and they feared for what would come to those who died before His coming so St. Paul's gives them comfort by telling them of the other life which awaits the faithful after death. Those words which allayed the fears of the Thessalonians come to us to comfort us when the shadow of death falls on our loved ones.

The pallbearers were Messrs. W. H. Casement, J. Blakeley, Dr. J. R. Fraser, Robert Garbutt, Hugh Kidd and Robert J. Webster.

The funeral proceeded from the house to Lakefield cemetery where interment was made.

Mr. Morrison was one of the oldest residents of the village and until bad health confined him to his home, he was keenly interested in village affairs. He was very fond of children and always had a pleasant word and a smile for his little friends. He was fond of a quiet life and was very highly thought of in the neighborhood in which he spent so many years.

IN MEMORIAM.

KEITH.—In loving memory of my dear uncle, James W. Keith, who departed this life October 28th, 1927.

"Short and sudden was the call
Of one so dearly loved by all,
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near;
And only those who loved can tell
The pain of not saying the last farewell."

—From one who loved him dearly and shall never forget him—Nephew and Niece.

IN MEMORIAM.

KEITH.—In loving memory of my dear brother, James W. Keith, who departed this life on October 28th 1927.

"Sleep on, dear brother,
Thy work is o'er,
Thy willing hands
Will toil no more;
God thought it best,
I will not complain,
But hope some day
To meet again."

Still others, with Sunset's aid, express their artistic sense. They create lovely things in tied and dyed work, ombre or shaded dyeing, batik, etc.

Sunset is used continuously—from one end of Canada to the other.

Do you use dyes? Try Sunset—it's the most wonderful dye in the world. It dyes silk, wool, cotton, linen (or mixtures of these fibres) all in one dye bath. It is quick, clean, easy to use and the colour is gently boiled in to stay—therefore it's fast.

Mr. Edward Courtney of Ashburnham celebrates to-day the 84th anniversary of his birth. His many friend will regret that his health is not in the best condition on this anniversary. Mr. Courtney is one of the older residents of the city who have kept alive the tradition of old-time courtliness and gentleness of manner, along with a keen interest in current events and in the welfare of Peterborough and its people. He has kept abreast at all times with the changing movements of the times while remembering clearly ways when fashions and manners were different and perhaps more leisurely. His skill as a worker in fine wood and his ability to recreate pretty things from this substance has added to the interest of his conversation. There are many who will unite in wishing him a return to his usual health.

Sky blue, gold, cream. They are pretty colors, all of them. Picked out with touches of black, they form the color scheme for a lovely booklet that illustrates Christmas gifts in jewellery. A gilt-faced lady that looks like the gilded models for dresses that appeared in the fashion exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, is on the cover. She has a black and gold dressing gown and blue beads encircle her neck. On the little finger of her left hand is a blue ring. Swirls of gold and blue and cream surround her.

In the book are delectable things in gold and silver and precious stones. The old song had it:

"Tis not the weight of jewel or plate
Nor the fondle of silk and fur
But the spirit in which the gift is sent
As the gifts of the Wise Ones were.
And we are not told whose gifts were gold
Nor whose the gifts of myrrh."

Here you may find a necklace of ivory cream pearls, "with rose tint and high lustre," priced anywhere from $250 to $25,000, with the two additional round noughts making quite a difference in the quotation.

There is a gorgeous diamond necklace, illustrated in all its gleaming beauty, "delicately wrought of platinum and softly flexible, featuring two fine pear-shaped diamonds." This bit of glistening beauty has no price set on it, but doubtless it would be edough.

There is a "Golfer's Pal," a leather bracelet holding a handy scorer for either hole or total score; there are novelty French cigarette lighters shaped like bullets; green and white and red designs in French enamel, of modernistic type, on cigarette cases; compacts of silver and enamel, priced from $10 to $15; and wrist watches priced all the way up to $500.

And there is china and silverware and glass and French ivory dresserware, in all the favored shades of turquoise blue, green, rose and cream. Amber with an overlay of natural colored mother of pearl is richly decorated in blue and gold designs.

The "Home and Hostess" set is the name given a pretty silver service which has a decorative glass tray and a small set of flat silver.

In the October issue of "The Echoes," the official publication of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, appears a nice little poem entitled "Miss Bunny's Bonnet," written by Gladys Jay of Peterborough and appearing in a little book of verse called "Creative Young Canada," compiled from the pages of the "Circle of Young Canada" in the Toronto Globe, by Miss Agnes Delamoure.

Miss Delamoure, who passed away recently, was in charge of "The Circle," and this book was her last effort. It was published to indicate the type of effort being made in literary ways by Canadian children and was edited by Dr. A. E. Marty, the well-known Canadian educationist, who is of the opinion that, although the attempts of such contributors have no important development from a literary or artistic standpoint, they will "eventually form the nucleus of an appreciative public, which is indispensable to the fostering of Art in a nation."

Such well-known writers as Marjorie Pickthall and Norah Holland received their first recognition in literary fields from "The Circle of Young Canada."

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

At a certain Peterborough function not long ago a man told a story about married life, a story that seems well worth a place in our column or in the series "Five Years After." "I don't like to meet people who have been married forty years and boast they have never had a cross word between them," this man said. "I think it does more to discourage matrimony than any other one cause. Who would want to be married forty years and never speak his mind?"

• • • • • •

Probably sir, what these people mean is that both of them never "flew off the handle" at the same time—which is, after all, a great secret of married bliss. Some contributors to our recent series admitted it.

It takes two to make a quarrel, and so long as one party to the contract retains a sense of humor, or duty, or whatever it is, the pact is safe.

• • • • • •

Were you at the Hallowe'en party last night? Isn't it funny how people indicate by their dress theird esire to be what they are not? I remember a pharse current during the war, "A soldier is a man who always wants to be where he isn't", and we might as well define "human being," "as a person who always wants to be what he isn't."

• • • • • •

There were girls dressed as boys and boys dressed as girls; youths costumed as old people and old people trying to pretend they were young; unmarried couples trying to pass themselves off as married and long-wedded couples endeavouring to return for the time being to unmarried bliss.

• • • • • •

Very successful, too, some of the kidder. I noticed the man on duty at the door had dificulty in telling, sometimes, who were in costume and who wore their ordinary appearance. At that, I think he allowed some who were not masquerading to enter the forbidden zone!

• • • • • •

One of the best stories of Hallowe'en that I have heard was told me last night, and I believe it to be true. There was a Masonic function which somewhat interfered with the party, and after the function one of the participants went to call at a certain house. When he greeted the lady of the house (he was dressed in formal attire, of course) she took him for someone masquerading as a gentleman, and offered him the candy dish!

• • • • • •

I said I believed that story; well here's one I don't believe, but it was told after the dance last night. Mrs. Hickson said to her husband before they started out, "I want you to remember that it's the custom to dance the first dance with your wife." To which he replied, as he put on his hat: "Well, wind the gramaphone. We'll dance it right here and get it over with."

• • • • • •

The Hallowe'en parties are nearly over for this year, but some of the games in our Hallowe'en help would be good for almost any party, so if you are going to give one any time this winter, just write asking for this leaflet.

• • • • • •

I wish to thank, just before I forget, everyone who sent in helps for Christmas gifts. I'm delighted with them all, and I am sure, when they are printed, the neighbors will like them too.

• • • • • •

Many recipes have come in this week, and several neighbors have written to say how they enjoy these we have printed. Among the recipes I found in my mail yesterday is one that is not for food, and I'm printing it here. It's a real hint for you girls who are trying to make a hit with the young men!

• • • • • •

"When a girl is at the age when she lives on carmels and excitement", says this contributor, "she needs a little advice on her treatment of manly youth. Here's something Iv'e found, from my own experience. If a girl talks all the time about what the shopgirl said to her, or the nasty cracks her best chum pulled on her, or the trouble her mother has with cook, she's off on the wrong tack."

• • • • • •

"That stuff may be interesting enough to her, and the young man will politely ask for more, and endeavour to appear interested. But he will be really bored. If you want to please the lordly male, young or old, talk about HIM. He's more interested in himself than anything else in the universe—you included. Give him the centre of the stage, throw all the limelight on him, make him strut—and when he goes about midnight or one a.m. he'll think you're just the works, and he'll be back for more."

• • • • • •

What do you think, neighbors? Is my corerspondent correct? It's certainly different from the old idea of making the men burn the incense at our altar.

• • • • • •

If you have any ideas on the subject, write and tell the neighbors.

S-O-S

If you have a problem, or want advice, or a recipe, the neighbors will be glad to help out. Write to Marion, who will present your request.

Mrs. H. S. seeks a good recipe for making pie crust. She says, "I always fall on it." Will some neighbor please help out?

CHIFFONFANS

New evening fans are fashioned of picoted petals of chiffon that, layer upon layer, give the impression of ostrich from a distance. They come in all the evening shades.

LAXATIVE FOR BABY THAT "STAYS DOWN"

Baby's tiny system rebels against castor oil and strong purgatives; but here's a medicine that just suits him. And it does the work quickly and so gently that Baby doesn't feel it. Fletcher's Castoria is soothing cross, fretful babies and children to sleep and making the feverish, constipated, upset ones well and happy. In millions of homes to-day. Castoria is purely-vegetable, harmless and endorsed by the medical profession. Avoid imitations. The Chas. H. Fletcher signature marks genuine Castoria.

SILVER CHAINS

Silver chains or other silver jewelry can be kept bright by boiling up frequently in aluminum pans. Shine with a chamois.

MARION'S MAIL

"Dear Marion:

One of the neighbors gave an idea of painting milk weed pods for a winter decoration Another splendid bouquet is made by painting the stems and dying the tops of the teasel. Use gold and aluminum paint on the stems and any colors, green, red, etc., for the tops. As the teasel grows three feet high and more, one can make a magnificent large bouquet. The teasel grows on many roads adjacent to Peterborough.

OTONABEE."

Thanks for the hint, "Otonabee." This surely sounds like a very attractive decoration, and should brighten up many rooms during the winter.

"Dear Marion:

This is my first letter to your page and I must say I enjoy reading it very much and find many useful helps in it.

Would you please send me this week's help—printed hints on games and decorations for Hallowe'en; also instructions for making wool flowers for coats; ribbon flowers for lingerie and the pointed slip if they are obtainable. Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Campbellford. A. M. S."

I'm glad that you enjoy our page, "A.M.S.", but sorry that the ribbon flowers and pointed slip helps are all gone. There was a big demand for both several weeks ago.

"Dear Marion:

Please send me this week's household help also instructions for wool flowers. I just enjoy reading the Whatnot. Hoping you have every success in the Women's Page which I am sure you will,

Yours sincerely,
MRS. N. S."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1928

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Dominated by a benefic aspect of the Sun, this should be a fairly fortunate day, according to astrology.

It is a time for both men and women to seek improvement in their financial affairs and should be favorable for all who look for employment.

The planetary government is especially stimulating to men and women in the public eye and is supposed to make all who desire high place exceedingly sanguine.

The direction of the stars may contribute to the success of secret plans or even of intrigue. Deception is supposed to be mildly successful today.

In certain parts of the world military force will be necessary and danger of serious entanglements in foreign lands is forecast.

From the seas will come amazing tales of accidents and violence, the seers prophesy, and they foretell a frightful accident in the air.

Rains and floods may be expected, so it is well to prepare for serious struggles against the forces of nature.

Women will find this a lucky day for shopping and they should be lucky in being able to choose what is becoming.

Astrologers who for months have been predicting return to the ideals of fluffy femininity foretell great growth of natural beauty among women who will be less artificial than they have been since the World War.

Peace movements will continue to gain attention all through the winter which may bring new illustrations of the horrors of modern warfare in Europe and Asia.

Persons whose birthdate it is should avoid all domestic differences in the coming year when family quarrels may easily become serious. Business matters should be satisfactory.

Children born on this day may be exceedingly fond of traveling. These subjects of Scorpio usually love the sea. They are dignified and attractive in appearance.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY YOU CAN TELL A MAN BY THE CAR HE KEEPS

By Mehran Kl Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It used to be said that you can tell a man by the company he keeps. It would be truer and more up-to-date to say that you can tell a man by the car he keeps and the way he keeps it.

The type of car that a man buys is significant. Now that there are styles in autos as well as in dress a man's taste and temperament are expressed even more fundamentally through his automobile than in his personal appearance. The conservative person will be inclined to favor the car with a pedigree, one which has been on the market for some years and has proved its practicability and worth. He will not fall for balloon tires and four wheel brakes and other new-fangled notions until they have been established and taken for granted in the whole industry as these things now are.

The level-headed person stays in his class. He doesn't mortgage his home for a three thousand dollar car when his financial standing warrants nothing above the thousand dollar mark.

What a man does with his car after he gets one is also a valuable index to his character. Inherent carelessness is bound to be reflected in the condition of one's auto. So is the opposite trait of old maidish care and foresight. The great majority of car owners don't get caught without gasoline more than once. And yet there are careless people even in these days of efficient gas gauges cosnpicuously displayed who are constantly running out of gas.

The road hog is too conspicuously a selfish clod to need further comment. The character traits find expression in conduct. The auto is merely an occasion for expressing those traits: hence a valuable index to character and personality.

The future employment expert will insist upon taking a ride with his prospective employee to observe the condition of the man's car and the way he drives it.

There are many guide posts to character. Not the least of these is the type of a car a man owns and the way he keeps it.

A man's car proclaims the man.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson, write him care of this paper, send stamped envelope for reply.

LYRICS OF LIFE

GIVE ME FRIENDS

I would have friendship. Give me friends
And I care not how something ends.
Some dream, some project, may go — wrong
But I dare not, with friends along.
I'd rather share a wayside stone
Than ride in velvet all alone.
So give me gold, for I'm not loth,
But friends if I can't have them both.

I might have had more wealth, I guess,
And fewer friends than I possess,
But always when I had to choose,
A purse to lose, or friend to lose,
I took the friend and left the purse,
Although it made my fortune worse.
Rather than someone to offend
And take the purse and lose the friend.

I like as well to sit on silk
As kings and princes and their ilk;
But one can kiss a country wench
Quite well upon a wooden bench.
So I have loved a little bit
Cared less for wealth and more for wit,
And let the greedy world go by,
And who is sorry? Well, not I.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S TALL HAT

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Buster and Duster who were little boy and girl rabbits of Uncle Wiggily, had the measles and were quite spotted. Buster, being a rabbit boy, had the spots worse than did Duster who was a little girl and was so named because she often helped her mother by dusting.

So after Buster and Duster were well, and had no more spots on them, Uncle Wiggily said one day:

"I think I shall take them to the movies. To morow they will have to go back to school, as they are all over the measles. But they have not had much fun saying home, so I will give them a little treat."

"Yes, do," said his wife.

"Oh, goodie!" shouted Buster and Duster when they heard the good news and soon they were sitting in the movie theater. Now part of the movie was about a magical dog who could do all sorts of tricks. One of his tricks was to take a tall, silk hat, just like the one Uncle Wiggily wore and which he had used to gather cranberries, and that magical dog made the strangest things come out of the tall hat.

"And the funny part of it," said Duster after the show, "was that there wasn't a thing in the hat to start with! Not a thing!"

For so it seemed to the bunny children watching the magical movie. The dog performer held up the hat so they could see there was nothing in it, but right after that he put in his paw and pulled out a big red balloon. And then he pulled out a bunch of flowers and then some lollypops and then he pulled out a glass dish of water with a gold fish swimming in it.

"I'm going to make a gold fish come out!"

"Why it's wonderful!" cried Duster.

"Pooh! I can do that, too when I get home," said Buster.

"Yes I can," he said when they were outside the movie show. "I'll take daddy's tall silk hat and make a lot of things come out of it."

Uncle Wiggily, who was taking the little bunnies back to the hollow stump bungalow, did not hear what they were saying or he might have hid away his tall hat. But, as it was, he left it on the table in the front hall.

So later that afternoon, when all the other bunny boys and girls had come home from the Hollow Stump School, Buster got his father's tall, silk hat and, holding it up for all to see, said:

"I'm going to make a gold fish come out of this!"

He put his paw down inside the hat as he had seen the dog magician do, and felt around but there was no goldfish in the hat. Neither was there a toy balloon nor any lollypops.

"Turn it upside down," said Duster, "and maybe a pair of roller skates will fall out. I'd like a pair of skates."

So Buster did what his sister said but not a thing came from the hat. Then Jingle, another little rabbit, said:

"Maybe you got to hit the hat with something to jiggle out what's in it. You hold it, Buster, and I'll beat it."

So Buster held the hat out and Jingle got the fireplace poker and hit the hat as hard as she could like Uncle Wiggily beating carpet.

"Is anything coming out?" asked Jingle.

"Not a thing," sadly answered Buster.

"Then you got to do something else," said Custer, who was Buster's brother. "Put the hat on the floor and jump on it, hard. Whatever is inside will come out then."

So Buster set the hat on the floor with the hole in it next to the carpet and he got upon a chair. He wanted to make a good jump. Just then Uncle Wiggily opened the door and saw what was going to happen.

But he was too late. Down jumped Buster, right on top of the hat and it went flat and in plaits and folds like an accordian. Uncle Wiggily groaned and said:

"My hat is ruined!" But there was more to come. As no gold fish or balloons or lollypops had come out of the hat, as they did for the dog magician in the movies, Jingle took Buster's pop gun and shot a big cork from it right through Uncle Wiggily's hat as Jangle held it up to see if maybe there was a chocolate cake inside.

"Oh dear me!" cried Uncle Wiggily as he saw the ruins of his nice, tall, silk hat. "The next time I take any little bunnies to a show it will not be one about a magical tall hat." So he had to buy a new one, for he couldn't wear the one that was creased and shot. But maybe he needed a new one anyhow. Let us hope so.

RICKARD BELIEVES DEMPSEY WILL RETURN

SAYS MAULER WILL BE HEAVY DRAWING CARD

WILL ACCEPT GOOD OFFER.

Luis Firpo Negotiating For Bouts With Renault and Roberti.

(By E. J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(Associated Press).—Add Tex Rickard to the growing list of those who believe that Jack Dempsey, once the king of the heavyweights, again aspires to his old throne.

The master of Madison Square Garden, who accepted Dempsey's retirement after his second defeat by Gen Tunney as final and has steadily maintained since that the old Manassa Mauler had fought for the last time, roused himself yesterday in Miami Beach, Fla., where he is spending a short vacation, to tell the Associated Press he feels sure Dempsey will box again.

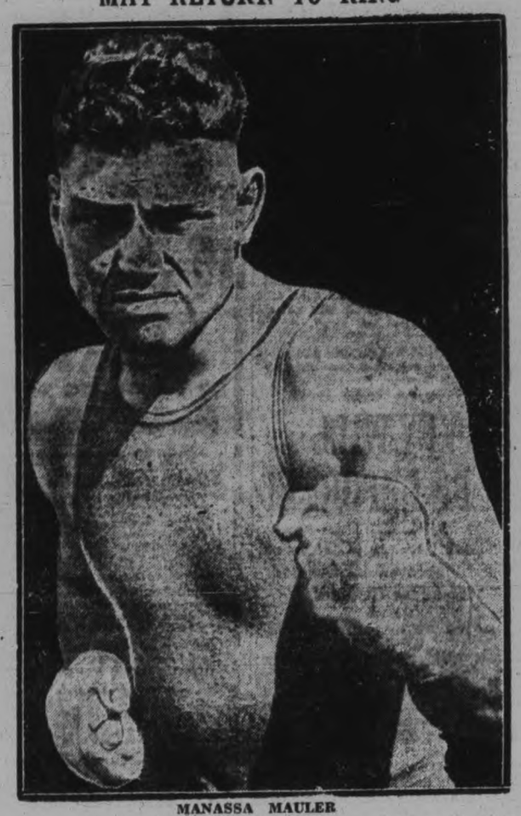
"The rumor that Dempsey will return to the ring has a good foundation despite his present shyness in regard to future bouts," Rickard said in his telegram.

Wants to Return

"He really wants to return to the ring. When a good young man comes along in the winter campaign you will find Jack ready to prance through the ropes again. He will be a big card, too. I am sure the ex-champion will again don the gloves.

Although the comeback campaign of Luis Angel Firpo, shaggy-haired Argentine who lost the greatest of modern ring battles to Dempsey in 1923, already has reached the stage where he is negotiating for bouts with Jack Renault and Roberto Roberti in Buenos Aires, Tex still is not sure that the South American's intensions are serious.

MAY RETURN TO RING



MANASSA MAULER

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world whom Tex Rickard believes may return to the padded glove kingdom. Says rumor that Dempsey will return to ring has good foundation despite his present shyness in regard to future bouts.

EX-CHAMPION CONSIDERING CAMPAIGN TO REGAIN CROWN

Old Man Mauler Wants $500,000 Guarantee For One Fight.

CONTRACT CANCELLED.

Luis Angel Firpo Also Believed Will Re-enter Heavyweight Ranks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.— Ears that listen at cauliflower keyholes are tingling these days to whisperings that indicate the return of Luis Angel Firpo, prosperous business man of Buenos Aires, and William Harrison Dempsey, actor and California real estate magnate, to the more rugged lines of endeavor they knew before affluence set in.

Dempsey, led to believe that he possessed the qualities of a great thespian and convinced that he could never whip Gene Tunney in a dozen comebacks, announced last spring that he was "through" with the prize ring forever. To-day his stage bubble has burst, the contract he signed for $5,000 a week for 20 weeks in a Broadway play has been cancelled. Tunney has passed from the ring picture and Dempsey, twice whipped by the big marine, is listening to daily advice and pleas that he don the padded mittens just once more to save the heavyweight ranks from utter stagnation.

The Old Man Mauler, despite his 33 years, is wavering, Tex Rickard won't talk, but Jack is believed to have set a $500,000 price tag on his services for one more battle. The mogul of Madison Square Garden is gun-shy now when requests for guarantees of that kind are shoved in his face. Tex is still a bit punch drunk from the financial beating he took when he guaranteed Tunney $550,000 for blasting Tom Heeney before a crowd that paid little more than that to view the tidbit of the summer season.

Dempsey Admits Failure.

"What the public wants," Jack muttered in disgust when his show closed a few days ago without completing its "run" on the road, "is real fights, not acted fights. I'm no actor."

The case against Firpo, the shaggy-haired bull who lost the greatest of modern ring battles to Dempsey in 1923, is more obvious. Firpo actually is in training in South America, whittling away flesh from a body grown huge and soggy since he retired to a life of physical leisure in 1925. He has contracted for two matches and is negotiating for a third. Rickard has made him an offer to fight here. Firpo insists on finding out what fighting ability he has left before accepting.

Bowling Alley Gossip By Pin Boy

C.G.E. Shop League—Group 2.

The winning streak that has been following the Lightning Arrester team deserted them suddenly on Tuesday night, and as a result they walked off the alleys on the tail-end of a three to nothing score, being defeated by Brass No. 1, who banged the wood for a majority of 300 pins in total pinnage. Ridyard continued his heavy work with high single 221 and three 522.

Brass No. 2 got the jump on the Insulation team by trouncing them in every game in Tuesday night's workout. W. Westian was the sharpshooter with 235 and 534.

Meter Makers dropped two games to the Switchboard Gang in a very dull battle, neither team being up to their usual mark. McPate for the Meters was high with 188 single and 523 for three.

C.G.E. Drafting Room League.

Another Monday night has gone by and still the drawing makers are maintaining their fast pace in piling up high scores.

Watts are still managing to secure a comfortable margin in every battle, winning six points from the luckless Short Circuits, who still repose in the cellar, having but 6 points to date. Lou Smith was the only one of the losers to bowl well, collecting high single with 265 pins. W. A. Jackson of the Watts made a high three of 646, having two games over 200.

Hugh Morton's Cycles are beginning to breeze along in A1 style, and are right up among the leaders as a result of Tuesday night's six-point gain over the Hi-Pots. Waterman came to the fore on the winning aggregation with two high scores, 235 and 544, although the playing was very close.

The Ohms know their onions as the score sheet shows. Tuesday night they walloped the Volts for six points, with whom they were tied the week before. This win puts the Ohms in second place, two points behind the Watts. Allen, Lesurf and McCarney each had a total of over 600 pins, as did Foster and Grant on the Volts' team. Foster's score of 689 pins was good for high three, while his single score of 311 was high also.

HARRISON TEAM DEFEAT COONEY'S

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, November 1. — The softball games in the Rink Company's League, held on Tuesday evening, were attended by a very large crowd of spectators, who were enthusiastic and rooted vigorously for their favorite teams. Both games were worth seeing, and though, of course, there was some crabbing, it was not unpleasant, and the games were clean and utterly devoid of any "rough stuff." There was just enough "ginger" to warm up the two games on a frosty night.

Cooney's and Harrison's met in the first game, and until almost the last innings either team might have won. There were more balls caught on a foul tip than in any other game, and in the seventh innings Dundas made a home run on a strike which landed the ball on one of the rafters, where it remained secure till George Wannamaker crawled out and dislodged it. Dundas struck out four men and walked four, while Darling had two strike-outs and five walked men. Ward made four runs for Cooney's, and Ross and Smith each made four for Harrison's. Both teams played a good game and kept the favor of their crowd.

R. C. Chittick umpired at the plate and Louis Sabatino at the bases.

Score by innings:

Cooney's .. .. 021402040—13
Harrison's .. .. 204050263—22

Second Game.

The second game surprised everyone and was one of the fastest games of the season. T he Cubs and Canada Cement teams have met before and until Tuesday night always with a resulting victory for the Cubs. The Cement boys got a lead in the first innings, and they held it to the end. The Cubs were minus three of their regulars, but filled the places with good players, but apparently were out of luck, for their best batters hardly got even a hit, while the Cement team were in splendid form and played their best game for three seasons. Their battery was in the pink, and Green struck out five men, while Payne for the Cubs struck out three. W. Elliott, the Cubs' doughty pitcher is suffering from a sprained ankle, and was unable to play, and Nicholls and Payne had never played together before, and were handicapped. The Cubs took their beating as the Cement boys took their victory, like gentlemen all.

R. C. Chittick again guarded the plate, and J. Vinnett and T. Nicholls took turns at the bases.

Cubs—R. Payne, p; G. Nicholls, c; H. Stabler, 1b; F. Payne, rss; H. Olver, lss; B. Wannamaker, 2b; H. Hamblin, 3b; E. Morin and R Elliott field.

The score by innings:

Cubs .. .. 010000.13—6

INTERMEDIATES LEADING GROUP

STANDINGS GIVEN.

The P.C.I. Intermediates are leading their group in the intermediate race, and are not tied for first place as was stated in Monday's paper. Oshawa C.I. and Bowmanville H.S. have one more game to play. If Oshawa C.I. win, Peterborough C.I. will hold the championship. If Bowmanville H.S. wins, it will be necessary for B.H.S. and P.C.I. to play a third game to decide the championship.

On Saturday the team travels to Lindsay to play an exhibition game with L.C.I. Intermediates. If P.C.I. play as good rugby as they have been, they ought to come home with another victory under their caps.

P.C.I. senior team play Cobourg here on Saturday. This is the last game of the group, and a stiff battle will be put up by the Cobourg aggregation.

The following is the standing of the two groups:

Seniors.

	Won	Lost
Peterborough C.I.	4	1
Oshawa C.I.	4	1
Lindsay C.I.	1	4
Cobourg C.I.	1	4

CITIES VIE FOR HONORS

Sport writers in Montreal and Ottawa are having a hot debate on which city develops the most hockey talent. Each city lays claim to the most home-brew outfit.

* * * * * *

* * * * * *

When one looks over Canadiens a better state of affairs is found, reflective of the fine attitude of French Canadiens towards sport. Pete Lepine and Battleship Leduc come from Montreal along with Sylvio Mantha. Morens, however, calls Stratford his home, and on the wings one finds Gagne and Joliat, both of Ottawa, and in the goal Hainsworth, of Kitchener, performs.

* * * * * *

What does one find in relation to Senators here, and where was the place of their nativity and hockey development. All from Ottawa with the exception of Finnigan and Frank Nighbor, who is from Pembroke and that is close enough. Finningan comes from Shawville and found out what it was all about here. When Montreal writers start to chide Ottawa about sport affairs they would do well to stop, look and listen. Montreal is the worst referee baiting town in Canada, and Lou Marsh, Mike Rodden, Mickey Ion, Bobby Hewitson and even Cooper Smeaton will admit that, and the referee baiting was not all from spectators either, as Cooper Smeaton will also tell you.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Twenty-one years ago the 26th of this month the late Gordon Southam, famous Toronto Varsity fullback in his undergraduate days and who was playing in the backfield that afternoon in Montreal for Hamilton's greatest Tiger team, kicked two drop goals from the field that brought an unexpected defeat to the M. A. A. team, its greatest team, which eventually won the Dominion championship in 1907.

The Tiger supporters will always remember what they termed "Southam's $10,000 Drops." The score was 7 to 5 in favor of the M.A.A.'s galaxy of stars and with the third period well under way Southam, with two mad linemen hanging on his neck, dropped his second goal that won the game 9 to 7. A week later in Hamilton Southam kicked two more drop goals to defeat a powerful Ottawa team 17 to 8. Gordon Southam, Billy Stinson and Don Lyon gave up their lives on the battlefields of France in the world war.

No. 1, Ballard, after received the ball from McCarthy, centre scrimmage, gave it to Ross Craig, No. 2. Nos. 3 and 4 pushed.

The teams were:

Tigers	Position	M.A.A.
Tope	Fullback	Stinson
Moore	Halfback	Russel
Southam	"	Craig
Simpson	"	Hamilton
Ballard	Quarter	Gordon
Craig	Scrimmage	Roberts
McCarthy	"	McAllan
Murray	"	Lessor
Barron	Inside	Kelly
Gray	"	Kingstone
Isbister	Middle	Molson
Wigle	"	Murphy
Savage	Outside	Lyon
Reynolds	"	Marriott

Ben Simpson and Ross Craig were two local men who played on the Tigers team.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Hockey plans are being hatched all over Ontario these days. The locals will have a conclave to-morrow night.

Coach Brown's P.C.I. team are a fast scoring outfit. They have scored 85 points in their games and have only had 8 points made against them. Any team that is that much better than the other teams in the Central Ontario groups should make its presence felt when it comes to the playoffs.

* * * * * *

The only thing that will trouble the P.C.I. team is lack of weight. There isn't a player on their lineup that scales 155 pounds. This is going to prove an important factor if they get further along in the race. The only thing to counterbalance avoirdupois is speed and team work, and lots of it.

* * * * * *

Saturday afternoon all eyes will be on Kingston where McGill plays Queen's. Queen's are being called to win not only on their great showing against Varsity, but also on past performances in their own backyard. McGill hasn't beaten Queen's in the Richardson Stadium since 1920. But then again, as the McGill supporters point out prayerfully, in the four games played to date in the Intercollegiate Union the home team has always lost. Se be it. We pick Queen's to win.

* * * * * *

Western University have made definite application to enter the Senior Intercollegiate Union. If they build a stadium in London, Western "U" should be a real addition to the senior ranks, as they have been turning out some smart teams, and it would round out the league nicely.

* * * * * *

The professional hockey magnates are sure having a hot time chasing the trail of young Mr. Trottier. First the story comes that he will stay amateur and play with Victorias in Montreal—he was on the ice with them once—now he is down in New York confabbing with Colonel Hammond of the Rangers.

* * * * * *

Sault Ste. Marie is coming back into hockey prominence with a reputed strong entry in the junior league of the N.O.H.A. The Soo team will carry that famous name, the "Greyhounds," again.

The schedule of the Canadian Professional Hockey League has just been announced. The teams will get underway with their first game on November 11, and they will each play two games a week until March 22. Who says the hockey players don't earn their money after a season like that?

Big Four Group To Practice Next Week

The Big Four Junior O.H.A. Group hope to take to the ice, starting this Saturday or Monday. The same four clubs will comprise the group. Marlboros, last year's champions, have lost quite a few from last year, only three regulars remaining. They are "Red" Horner, Charlie Conacher, and Harvey Jackson. Last year's subs will be to the fore this year. They are Harry Montgomery, Bill Pickering, Max Hacket, Ross Miller, and Tom Gilchrist. They are also counting on Elmo Pringle, last year with Newmarket, who is attending school here.

Toronto Canoe Club will have Clair McIntyre, Frank Richardson, and Glen Brydson, while Parkdale will have Gaston Nault, Jimmy Adams, Ed. Oliver, Harvey Freeman, and Jack Hamilton.

Varsity will have to round out a whole new team, as practically all of last year's team have gone

HARRY WISMER QUITS HOCKEY

Veteran Kitchener Manager Led Teams To Titles, Including Allan Cup.

HAS LAURELS ENOUGH.

KITCHENER, Nov. 1. — One of hockey's best-known managers, in the person of Harry Wismer, is through with the game as a manager for all time to come. Wismer announced on Tuesday that from now on he will see his hockey from a spectator's seat.

Harry Wismer is one of the best-known managers in Ontario. For eighteen years he managed the Twin City's entry in the Ontario Hockey Association in either the intermediate or senior ranks. These eighteen years of service were continuous, but for one year, when "Mike" Kaplansky was in charge. During that time teams under his titelage won the intermediate title once, the senior title twice, and on one of these occasions, 1919, the Allan Cup was brought to this city.

The first title came in 1914, when the intermediates won the championship; then, in 1918, the Allan Cup was won by the seniors, and last year the seniors won the O.H.A. senior title again, only to bow to the Montreal titleists in the Allan Cup play-offs.

More championships would likely have come to this city but for the fact that the team ran up against the famous Granite and Grads teams in the years that they earned the right to represent Canada at the Olympic Games, where they won the world title. On each of these occasions they provided the stoutest of opposition for the champions in the O.H.A. senior series.

HELD AS WITNESSES

CHICAGO, Oct. 31 (Canadian Press).—Several hundred spectators at the marathon roller skating contest to-day saw William Marzano shot to death in a quarrel and were herded into the patrol wagons as witnesses, after the police captured the slayer. R. M. Fishman, who fired shots, declared he was a friend of Alderown who had been wounded by Marzano.

COUGAR PLAYERS FACE SUSPENSION

Fines Also in Store For Hockeyists Who Fail To Sign.

WINDSOR, Nov. 1.— Five hockey players owned by the Detroit Hockey Club face suspension unless they come across with their names on the dotted line by to-day.

Charles A. Hughes, president of the club and of the Olympia, announced Tuesday morning that he had made his last advance to the self-styled "hold outs." He further announced that Commissioner Calder had ordered all five suspended if they did not come to terms with the club.

"I feel that all the players were offered fair contracts," said Mr. Hughes. "Some of them were offered more than they ever drew for playing hockey in their lives before.

"The present offers will stand only until to-night, after which those who have not signed will be suspended. And for each day that they hold out $100 will be deducted from each contract. To-morrow morning each offer will be $100 less; then on Thursday morning each will be $200 less.

"The players are to be suspended by Commissioner Calder and once they are suspended they must be reinstated by him. I am through talking to them. They can't practice with our team, and we don't want to have anything to do with them while they maintain their present attitude."

LEAGUE DRAFT AGAIN ISSUE

Subject Likely To Be Much Discussed at Baseball Meeting in December.

MAJORS HAVE CONTROL.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1. — Internal strife among the minor leagues over the old draft issue threatens to disrupt the National Association, controlling body of the minors, and may possibly have an important effect on the future of organized baseball.

Only the vote of the American Association prevented the minors from accepting a revised scale of draft prices and falling in line with the majors. This new set of prices, increasing the amount paid for players drafted to a scale ranging from $1,500 to $7,500, according to the league classification, was arranged by representatives of the minors and majors at the famous French Lick conference last Winter. Just as peace hovered over the situation the minors—led by the Association—rescinded the French Lick action and the war remained unsettled

Renew Battle Here

Now the warfare centres on the Association. At this league's annual meeting in Toronto, Dec. 3, guns will start popping. Last year the Association divided on the issue and ordered its president, Tom Hickey, to vote against acceptance of the new draft prices. The four votes in favor of the draft were cast by Columbus, Toledo, Milwaukee and St. Paul—all major league controlled clubs. This time a new factor enters the argument, since Indianapolis and Minneapolis teams are under obligations to the majors for favors during the 1928 playing season.

It is quite possible the Association will swing in line with the draft. It also is quite possible the league will encounter internal dissension in so doing, and the members of the circuit opposed to the draft may unite with others of the International and Pacific Coast, strong opponents of the draft, at the annual meeting of the National Association at Toronto, Dec. 5, 6 and 7, in open warfare which may take more than Judge Landis to settle.

Jack Dunn's death is sure to have some effect on the issue. He was one of the ringleaders opposing the draft in the International.

Major Control Hurts

Major league ownership in the International will play an important part in the warefare. Reading is owned by the Cubs, Rochester by the Cardinals, and Jersey City by the Yankees, while the Toronto club is not adverse to accepting help from the big fellows. Yet those in opposition to the draft are still in majority.

The Coast controversy, now in progress, centres around the "player selection" issue, too, since it is a fight by certain moguls there to suppress the power of William Wrigley, jr., a major leaguer who owns the Los Angeles team

The big minors claim major leagues are buying into their circuits purely to force the draft upon them.

Is the Big Issue

Internal strife among the minors is the big issue, though. All but five leagues already are included in the draft—have signed a contract accepting it. The other five International, Association, Pacific Coast, Western and Three-I—refused to accept the original draft. Later they made a modified agreement with the majors, in which only players sent them from the majors are subject to draft.

Now the "little minors" are fighting to make the "big minors" come down on equal terms with them in the selection of players That's the international issue which threatens to disrupt the minors' governing body.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"MADEMOISELLE FROM ARMENTIERES", A FINE PICTURE, HAS ALL THE HUMOR, DRAMA, AND PATHOS OF THE WAR. OPENS AT THE CAPITOL TO-DAY. HAROLD SNELGROVE WILL SING "ROSE" THE THEME SONG AT THE EVENING PERFORMANCES.

All the humor, drama and pathos of the war—not to mention a heap of popular war time ditties—are blended in "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," which opens at the Capitol to-day.

It is a magnificent film and deserves praise for its unforgettable human emotions, its simple but sincere love story, its humors of life in billets, the refreshing and delightful memories of war-time concert parties at the front, and last, but not least, its unparalleled and convincing scenes of the fighting, in which everything from tanks and howitzers to trench mortars and bayonets takes part. The inhuman energy of the guns putting down barrages, is almost terrifying in its drama, while, by way of contrast, the film shows scenes of comradeship in battle which are tear-compelling in their poignancy.

Two episodes may be mentioned as particularly real inspirations—that of the incident of the old soldier and the raw recruit singing "Old Soldiers Never Die," and the other, one comrade refusing to leave his wounded pal in the enemy's lines, emphasized by the sotto voce music of "Dear Old Pals."

Estelle Brody a player new to Peterborough audiences, appears in the title role, and lends to it a wealth of charm and distinction. She captures her audiences at the beginning of the film and retains it steadfastly throughout. She has pertness, humor and histronic skill, and played her scenes delightfully.

Mr. Harold Snelgrove will sing "Rose" the theme song of the production at the evening performances.

AT THE REGENT.

CADET RIVALED ON DRILL FIELD BY FILM ACTORS

Actors make perfect soldiers.

So says Major Raymond Moses, U.S.A., of the tactical department at West Point, after working with a crew of men, headed by William Haines, who came to the academy from Hollywood to enact cadets in Haines' new starring vehicle, "West Point." According to Major Moses, a member of the West Point instruction staff, the group of actors proved absolutely perfect material for military training at the school.

"All of them, including Haines," he said, "had some military experience, but still it was amazing how they grasped every detail of intricate drill, and were able to appear in the maneuvers along with regular cadets after single rehearsals. Of course actors are used to learning movements and action fast, but at the same time it was astounding to the officers."

RAILBIRDS DEBARRED FROM PRACTICE GAMES.

Owing to the fact that the railbirds interfere somewhat with the proper conduct of the drills officials of the Canadian Hockey Club are considering holding future workouts in private at the Forum, Montreal. The question was under consideration yesterday and a definite decision will be reached to-day. Maroons have not given the question serious consideration so far as their workouts are concerned though the club is planning one or two evening practices to enable the players to become accustomed to lighting conditions as they exist in league games. If these are held, spectators will be admitted.

JOE IRONSTONE REPORTS FOR DUTY

Former American Played Is Tickled To Work Again With Corbeau and Voss.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 1.— Following a few days of rapid action in the training camp of the London Panthers of the Canpro League, that saw the swap of Bill Holmes for Mickey Roach, the latter's quick sale to Windsor, and then the speedy outright purchase of Goalie Joe Ironstone from the New York Americans, matters got back to a more normal pace Wednesday, and the chief feature was the sudden and unheralded arrival Wednesday night of Joe Ironstone, whom Corbeau thought was still at his home in Sudbury.

Ironstone got Corbeau's wire at 230 Tuesday afternoon, and then set out by motor for London. When he walked in on Bert Wednesday night he reported that the radiator of the car had frozen up twice en route, but that he himself was ready for practice with the Panthers and was more than tickled to again work with Corbeau and Voss, the same defence that stood in front of him on the Toronto Falcons last season.

Mike Brophy, left-winger last season with the Providence club of the Canadian-American League, arrived, and made his first appearance at practice.

LOYOLA GAINS SIX POINT LEAD

Fumbles Help Both Teams in First of Play-offs Against Cadets.

JUNIORS LOSE OUT.

KINGSTON, Nov. 1.—Loyola intermediates secured a six-point lead over R.M.C. here yesterday when the Cadets at the Richardson Stadium by the score of 17 to 11 in the first of the playoffs for the Eastern section college title. The Montrealers in the first quarter had a lead of 12 to 0, but a comeback by the Cadets worked so well that they ran up the score to 12 to 11. In the last few minutes a perfectly executed onside kick by Savard resulted in Munich dashing over for a touchdown which gave the Montrealers their sixpoint lead.

Both teams had fumbles on the backfield that proved costly, R.M.C.'s two touchdowns coming as the result of backfield errors, while Loyola helped themselves to two trys in the same way. Savard, Gorman and McAlear featured the play of the winners, with Gobeil, Dayoud, Nichol and Storms standing out for the losers.

The game was a mighty plunging affair, with Loyola gaining more through the line. Three times within the space of five minutes they had the ball less than five yards from the Cadets' line, and though they took their three downs each time they were unable to buck their way over. It was this stonewall defence near their own line that saved R.M.C. from a worse beating.

Blanks Loyala on Round

KINGSTON, Nov. 1. — Queen's juniors swamped Loyola here yesterday in the second of the home-and-home games, at the Richardson Stadium, by a score of 25 to 0 and taking the round 29 to 0. It was Queen's game practically all through the four quarters, although Loyola, a much lighter team, battled hard.

Queen's now meet the Western group winners, with the first game at the local stadium on Saturday morning.

Costly fumbles on the part of the Loyola backfield players, coupled with tricky running by Day and Atchison and terrific plunging by the wings, swept Loyola off their feet, and for most of the game the play was in their territory. The Tricolor had little trouble in making yards through the line, while their wings were down on every punt, so much so that they were ready to flop on fumbles and convert the misplays into touchdowns.

"Weenie" Day, in the kicking role for the Tricolor, turned in a fine game, his kicking being of a sensational nature throughout. With Atchison and Adair, he engineered some fine runs, and was backed by great work by the wings. The feature play of the game was when Alexander, tricky quarter of the locals, lined up the team in a kick formation and then shot through for 25 yards and a touchdown.

Loyola held the Tricolor well in check in the first quarter, though Queen's plunged several times for yards. Shaughnessy, with the wind in his favor, kicked well and more than held his own with Day, but his wings could do nothing with the Queen's line and there was very little advantage gained. Both teams did considerable fumbling, and forward passes twice spoiled chances when the locals seemed away for good runs. Just near the end of the first quarter Queen's made yards three times in a row, and the beginning of the end was in sight for Loyola.

TRADING IN THE HOCKEY "PIT"

It's hard to believe that nearly $50,000 in players changed hands at the opening of the National Hockey League's training season. But it's true.

The most outstanding of these trades was that of Babe Dye, the former Toronto Pat player, who has probably added more grey hairs to the heads of goalies than any other man on ice. Babe was sold from the Chicago Black Hawks to the New York Americans for the count of $15,000.

During the past five years Babe has been the league-leading scorer for three of them. Last year he suffered a broken ankle and it put him out of the game for most of the season. However, last summer he played pro. baseball in Toronto with the Buffalo ball club and by all appearances he will again try to hit up the old form.

Among the other trades that the New York Americans made was the buying of Harry Broadbent from the Ottawa Senators. Manager Tommy Gorman of the Americans is very optimistic about this deal and claims that Harry is the league's smartest player to-day.

Besides these there was the buying of Johnny Sheppard of the Detroit club for $12,000 and the securing of the flashy little goalie, John Ross Roach for $10,000 from the Toronto Leafs. Tommy is building up his team not only defensively, but also offensively.

Well, November 15 is not far away. Then Tommy can show his wares to the world. But just the same he will be worth watching.

Roy Worters, Milk and Darragh Set Down By Leonard.

FAIL TO SETTLE TERMS.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 1.—Roy Worters, Hib Milks and Harold Darragh, three stars of the Pittsburgh Pirate hockey team, were suspended yesterday by the club for failure to come to terms with Benny Leonard, new owner.

The suspensions are expected to be sanctioned within a day or two by President Frank Calder of the National Professional Hockey League.

Worters, who is accredited with being the best goaltender in the professional ranks, last year received $4,000. For the 1928 season he demanded $8,000. Leonard offered $5,000. Darragh and Milks each were offered substantial increases over their last year salary but so far have refused to sign contracts.

The remainder of the Pirates had another brisk workout to-day, in preparation for the opening of the season next month.

Irish Tri-Color Fails To Bring Luck

LONDON, Nov. 1 (Canadian Press).—A despatch to The Daily Express from El Doret, Kenya Colony, Africa, to-day said that the colors of the Irish Free State failed to bring luck to the Prince of Wales in a horse race there. The colors were presented to the Prince by tiny Sheila O'Shea, daughter of Thomas O'Shea, who was a leading Sinn Feiner in Ireland in 1913. She also gave him a shamrock.

The Prince, however, made amends for losing this race by winning the next two.

Beach-Borden Game Changed To Nov. 7

Secretary Harold Bailey of the O.R.F.U., has announced that the Balmy Beach at Camp Borden senior game, scheduled for November 10 will be played on Wednesday, November 7. This change has been made so that event of a tie in the group the sudden-death play-off engagement may be played on November 10.

If Varsity defeat Kitchener here Saturday the O.R.F.U. will endavor to arrange the Kitchener at Sarnia game for November 7 in order to give the clubs leeway in the case of a tie in this group.

The story of "The Fox" ended in a hangman's noose when William Edward Hickman (above), who signed the name of that animal to ransom letters while holding Marion Parker captive in Los Angeles last December, paid the penalty at San Quentin prison for her murder. After his body was embalmed in the prison mortuary it was borne a few miles away to a cemetery near San Rafael, almost within sight of the walls of San Quentin. His father, Thomas Hickman, picked out the burial plot before leaving for his home in El Paso, Tex.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND LIMBERS UP STIFF JOINTS

Pharmacists Call It "Joint Ease" Because Its For Swollen, Sore, Painful, Creaky Joints Only.

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain rubduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain racked joints as good as new.

They call this new and wonderful preparation "Joint-Ease" because the medical men who turned the trick, worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint-Ease" is prepared only for people who have swollen, painful, creaky, distorted or stiff joints whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it is caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You can use it several times in the evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing. It surely is a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

News From the Mines

Through

Solloway, Mills & Company

Central Manitoba.

The average daily tonnage for October is expected to be 160 tons, with bullion recovery of $65,000 for the month. Recovery for September was $55,000 with 4,200 tons milled, or at the rate of 140 tons daily, for 30 days. Tailings for October are running 34 cents as against 30 cents in September. The company's bank loan is now cleared off. On the Tene 6 claim the shaft has been sunk in ore to the 250 foot level, the grade being better than $12 per ton. An aerial tram is to be completed this winter which will permit carrying the ores mined to the mill on the Kitchener.

Big Missouri.

President J. T. Gregory, when interviewed at Tacoma yesterday, stated that the 200 feet of drifting in each direction had been carried out at Big Missouri on the high grade orebody recently intersected by the tunnel 1,700 feet from the portal, with both faces still in ore. General assays, as reported some time ago in our bulletin service, ran $85 to $90 per ton. Surface indications have shown that west of the present body there are several high grade veins. In order to cut these veins at depth, a tunnel is being driven further west. Big Missouri is being operated by the Buena Vista Mining Company, the operating company for Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, in which Big Missouri owns 47 per cent. and the smelting company 53 per cent. of the stock.

Tough-Oakes.

From sources which cannot be ignored we understand that Tough-Oakes will shortly start diamond drilling on their Kirkland Lake property. Some $60,000 is to be raised for financing and drilling. It will be remembered that Tough-Oakes ceased operations a number of days ago, and it was thought at the time that it was quite possible the treasury would be revamped for the purpose of continuing development work. Evidently the directors have been successful in obtaining the necessary wherewithal to continue operations.

Abana Mines.

A special general meeting of the shareholders of the Abana Mines Limited will be held in Room 129, Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on Saturday, November 10th, at 3 p.m. for the purpose of confirming the resolution passed by the Board of Directors on the 20th of October, 1928, increasing the board of directors from five to seven, three of whom shall form a quorum.

Mayland.

Mayland now at 3,335 feet. Casing at 3,510 feet. Geologists think that lime should be struck in about another 300 feet. The well continues to look most promising.

Corn Prices High Despite Crop Reports

CHICAGO, Nov. 1 (Canadian Press). — Corn prices displayed strength early to-day in face of unofficial crop reports showing available supplies of 70,000,000 bushels larger than that of last season. A leading expert, however, figured the yield per acre as one half a bushel less. Opening 1-8 to ¼ higher, the corn market afterward scored decided additional gains. Wheat and oats were also firmer, wheat starting 1-8 to 3-8 up, and then re-acting somewhat but later outdoing initial gains. Wheat, Dec. 116½, March 121¾; corn, Dec. 82.5-8, March 84¾; oats, Dec. 43¼, March 44 3-8.

Noranda Gains 3.25 In Brisk Session

TORONTO, Nov. 1 (Canadian Press).—Trading was brisk on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning. Sherritt Gordon was active and sold up to 7.00, but reacted at five to 6.95. Norands gained 3.25 in active trading to 55.75. Jackson Manion dropped eight points to 49, with transactions of 113,823 shares during the morning session. McIntyre was down 75 at 20.25, and Malartic 5 at 1.10. Amulet fell four to 3.14, and Bidgood two to 43. Dome Mines gain of 5 to 8.35, and Goldale three at 22 while Howey Gold dropped 2¼ to 97½. Hollinger Consolidated rose ten points to 9.10, and Newbec 2½ at 32. Lake Shore advanced 25 cents to 21.00, while Teck Hughes dropped 15 to 8.55. Sudbury Basin was down five at 8.10, and Wright Hargreaves 19 at 2.75. International Nickel rose four to 194, while New International Nickel stock advanced 80 to 33.80. Mond Nickel was 35 cents higher at 33.25.

High Prices Feature On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (Canadian Press)—Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment reflecting nervousness on the part of large and small traders, characterized to-day's stock market, but major operations were again on the side of rising prices. As in the most recent sessions, a wave of selling swept through the market before midday, touching off a number of "stop loss orders" and bringing about a few sharp declines, but supporting orders were quickly supplied and new leaders brought forward by pool operators. Railroad shares assumed increasing prominence when a brisk demand developed for several of the high grade issues.

Banks called $30,000,000 in loans during the morning, but nearly an equal amount of new money appeared in the market from large corporations and out-of-town banks, the call rate holding steady at 7½ per cent and an easier undertone was apparent in time money market.

Prices Remain Firm On Active Market

TORONTO, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Prices were firm in active trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning with the trend towards higher values. International Nickel, new stock, being traded in on "when issued" basis, was the market leader, and on sales of more than 16,000 shares, held as high as 34, the price at noon being ¾ lower. Demand for the old stock continued unabated and at noon a gain of 3¾ was recorded at 193¾. Oils provided the other feature of the market, with International Petroleum,the centre of popularity, reaching a high of 48½ where profit-taking brought about a reaction to 47¾ for a gain of a good fraction. The other oils were also active, and showed slight rains, excepting British-American and McColl-Frontenac, which had fractional recessions.

Carling's recorded a gain of 1½ at 34½, but elsewhere fluctuations were limited to fractions. Hiram Walker's recovered ; to 82¼. Seagram's and Massey-Harris declined fractionally to 22 and 49¾ respectively.

ANNUAL RE-UNION HELD BY MASONS

Peterborough Lodge of Perfection Holds Sixth Re-union.

The sixth annual re-union of the members of Peterborough Lodge of Perfection, A. & A.S.R., was held yesterday in the Masonic Hall with members in attendance from the city and district in large numbers, and it proved to be the most successful assembly since Peterborough Lodge was formed. Hastings, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Lakefield, Norwood and other cities in the district were represented.

Twenty candidates were received and had degrees conferred on them.

Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander Ill. Bro. Alfred F. Webster was received with grand honors and his address to the gathering was highly appreciated.

At the conclusion of the degree work a banquet was held at the Empress Hotel, presided over by Ill. Bro. Duncan Walker, at which speeches were made by Bros. W. R. Morris, Dr. Waite, Ill. Bro. Alfred N. Webster and others.

Spencer's Orchestra and the Scottish Rite Octette furnished the music, bringing to a close a day long to be remembered by all in attendance as one well spent.

Republic of Peru

Dated December 1, 1927 Due December 1, 1960

Interest payable April 1 and October 1. Principal and Interest payable in United States gold in New York City. Denominations of $1,000 and $500.

Peru is the third largest country in South America with an area in excess of that of the Province of Ontario and having a population equal to that of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec combined.

The Republic has shown a substantial growth in industrial production and in the volume of its foreign trade. Mining and agriculture are the chief industries. For many years the country has exported large quantities of low-cost copper. The principal United States mining companies operating in Peru are the American Smelting and Refining Company, and the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation. The petroleum reserves, considered of great potential value, are being rapidly developed by capital from the United States and other foreign countries. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, through its subsidiaries, is active in this field. A wide range of climatic conditions result in diversified agricultural production.

It is estimated that more than $400,000,000 of foreign capital is invested in Peru, of which about $250,000,000 is capital from the United States.

The revenues applicable to service charges on the bonds of this issue in 1927 amounted to 3.26 times the annual service charges.

Peterborough Association is 94 per cent. self-supporting. Much of its work brings no income, and it is for this work and certain overhead expenses in the way of repairs that the Board of Directors appeal to the citizens of Peterborough for their support during the Y.W.C.A.

The fire department answered two minor calls yesterday. At 11.58 a.m. it was called to 498 Murray street, where a defective chimney was the cause for the roof catching fire. The fire was extinguished, by the use of chemicals, before any real damage was done. The damage was estimated at about $50.

At 3.05 p.m. it was called to the corner of Rubidge and Brock, where a pile of leaves was being burned without permission.

Salvation Army Honors City's Old Folk

Old People Guests of Army

TOTAL AGE 6,438

Mayor Denne Speaks in Favor of Old Boys' and Girls' Re-union.

"If I ever had any doubt as to the desirability of an Old Boys' and Old Girls' reunion it is gone now" declared His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, last evening as he stood before one of the most unique gatherings ever held in the history of Peterborough—a gathering at which average age of the one hundred and twenty odd people, from youngest to oldest, was sixty-seven and a half years— and at which the guests of honor had a total age of 6,438 years.

To the local Salvation Army temple, all the old people in the district (if 65 years or over may be considered old) were invited by an elderly Salvationist from Montreal, and at 5.30 p.m. almost one hundred of the old folks, twenty of them from the Protestant Home, the majority from the vicinity of Peterborough, sat down to a most appetizing supper, having arrived in motor cars supplied by Peterborough Rotarians and Kiwanians. Also present to greet the old folks were His Worship Mayor Denne and Mrs. Denne, George A. Gillespie, Alderman Walter Stocker, Miss Lancaster, Superintendent of the Protestant Home; and the Rev. and Mrs. Poulter of Bethany; Brigadier and Mrs. Fraser, of Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough; Ensign and Mrs. Ellis of Toronto; Adjutant Pollock of Cobourg; Mrs. Col. Jacobs and Ensign and Mrs. Green, of this city.

Who Was Responsible?

Perhaps the meaning of it all is not quite clear to the reader and the reason is that the man responsible for this gathering—the man who bore the expense and assisted in many other ways, in sincere modesty, insisted that he be kept in the background, so far as the press was concerned. Observing his keen pleasure and interest last night, it was evident that he derived his full measure of satisfaction from the gathering for the joy that it brought to the old folks. He went among them and had a word with everyone present

An Interesting Character

No more honored guest was there last night than "Granny" Beare, of Cobourg, who motored all the way from that town to enjoy the gathering. On October 20, last, she had observed her one hundredth birthday, and while suffering deafness, her other faculties remained apparently unaffected by her age. In a clear voice, prompted by an accurate memory of events that occurred more than an half century ago, she told of leaving Lenivet, a little town on the Cornish coast, when a girl of twenty-one years. "It took us eight weeks or more to come out to this country" said the old lady. "We left there, aboard the little sailing vessel "Belle" on April 1, and on June 10 we landed at the Cobourg wharf. Cobourg did not even boast a town hall in those days."

"Granny" has had her full share of the trials and hardships of life but an implicit faith in her God has kept her cheerful always, and it was a glorious thing for her to do when later in the evening, she stood before that gathering, singing of how we shall all meet again on that great judgement morning, and then giving her testimonial in clear ringing tones that could not but have inspired

Two Thousand Strikers Make Attack On Volunteer Dock Workers.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—Four persons were wounded to-day at Port Melbourne, when the police fired into a crowd of two thousand trade unionists who were advancing to attack volunteer dock workers.

When the situation became threatening the police at first fired over the heads of union men, who continued to advance, armed with stones. After firing into the crowd, the police used their batons freely and cleared the

English Stage Actress May Lose Her Title

LONDON, Nov. 2. — Another shattered romance between the peerage and the stage was placed on record with the announcement by Lord Ashley, heir of the Earl of Shaftesbury, that he will no longer be responsible for the debts incurred by his wife.

In February of last year, Lord Ashley deeply distressed his parents, the Earl and Countess, of Shaftesbury, by marrying Miss Hawkes against their strongest opposition. The father and mother objected to the marriage, but were unable to dissuade their son.

Miss Hawke's parents were of humble origin. She had been first a mannequin, then a dancer in musical comedy, and finally an actress of note.

POLICE DOUBT GIRL BURNED SELF FOR LOVE

"I'm Feeling No Pain," Mutters Badly Tortured Sunday School Teacher.

SCIENTISTS MARVEL.

Authorities Decline To Accept Girl's Story, Secret Love Affairs.

LAKE FOREST, Ill., Nov. 2. — Learning that Miss Elfrieda Knaak, pretty Sunday school teacher and book agent and former university co-ed, had carried on "continuous secret love affairs," teh authorities last night declined to accept her story that she tortured herself in the furnace of the Lake Bluff Police Station, Monday night.

"See ——. She will tell you all about it," whispered the dying girl last night. Efforts of hospital attaches and relatives to catch a name failed. The name of this woman Miss Knaak sought to name was believed to be the key to the mystery of her burns.

Little Chance to Live

Physicians hold little hope the girl will live.

Watchers at the girl's bedside heard her mutter:

"I am feeling no pain. My faith in God is strong and Christ will save me —I love him, I love him."

Police questioned Charles F. Hitchcock, the Beau Brummel of the village police force, who has been giving Miss Knaak instruction in salesmanship for several weeks. Hitchcock broke his leg a week ago, and has been confined to his home since. He denied knowledge of the girl being in love with him, though, according to an alleged statement of the girl a few hours after her nude body was found, she was in love with him and intimated she had inflicted the torture because of him.

Police sought three suspects for questioning last night. One was a police circles as a "peeping Tom," former college student known in Another was a former Princeton man and the third was of a distinct moronic type.

Experts Divided

Meanwhile, physiologists were of opinion whether or not it was possible or even probable, that the girl had inflicted such torture on herself.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith, of Lake County, said last night, that to believe the girl burned herself was an "insane idea." He was joined by attending physicians and Dr. A. J. Carlson, physiologist at the University of Chicago. Smith said:

"No one can convince me the girl stood on one foot while holding the other one in the fire until it was burned until the bone began to crumble—and then stood on that burned foot while the other one was burned, and then finally stood on both those charred feet and held her head in that furnace door until it was charred, too."

Dr. Carlson said:

"The only way in which a scalp burn of such seriousness could be inflicted would be for someone to hold the body in position. It is conceivable, but highly improbably, for a person to have been laboring under such emotional stress as to cause temporary insensibility to pain."

Dr. Francis Gerty of the Psychopathic Hospital, declared:

"The hearing of spirit voices and the failure to suffer physical pain, even after terrible burning, indicate dementia praecox."

Dr. H. Douglas Singer said:

"If Miss Knaak was in a self-hypnotic trance, she would not have felt pain even when the flames ate away her flesh. But, self-hypnotism is not necessarily a form of insanity, or even of dementia praecox."

APPRECIATIVE TRAVELLING IS REMEDY FOR ALLEVIATING RACIAL PROBLEMS IN CANADA

Rev. C. V. McLean Outlines Some of Canada's Problems To Kiwanis.

URGES CITIZENSHIP.

Speaker Deplored Sectional Consciousness Which Is So Prevalent in Canada.

When the Rev. C. V. McLean, M.A., B.A., of St. Andrew's United Church, addressed the Peterborough Kiwanis Club at noon to-day, he suggested more appreciative and sympathetic travelling and less re-active or competitive travelling as a means of lessening sectional consciousness and alleviating industrial and racial problems in the Dominion of Canada. In addition, he urged a greater emphasis of the privilege of citizenship, particularly as it applied to young Canadians and naturalized citizens, and pointed out that the Peterborough Kiwanis Club might play its part.

The attendance at the weekly luncheon meeting was not as large as usual, due, in part, to the fact that many of the members have departed for hunting camps, but those who turned out enjoyed a happy meeting that was far from being boresome. President Joe John was right on the job, and with Vernon Morphet and Martin Chenhall leading the singing, there was plenty of enthusiasm, while the appreciation of all was expressed to the speaker by Jack McNabb previous to dismissal.

Art Moffat's booster prizes went to Dr. Ray Scott, Colonel Miller and Jack McKone, while announcement of several events to take place in the near future were made during the meeting. Carl Brown was around enlisting members to a Peterborough club delegation that will go to Lindsay on Tuesday night for the big Kiwanis show being put on by the club of that town, while Joe John called attention to a communication from the Peterborough Harriers' Club relative to the Thanksgiving Day races in which Lindsay and other teams will compete. Joe Wearing had an important announcement to make. He urged the members to turn out to-night at the Canadian Legion Hall, where the distribution of prizes will be made to winners in the harmonica contest held in connection with the Made-in-Canada Fair. The harmonica band will furnish music for old time dancing as well.

The Speaker.

It was John I. Allen's happy privilege to introduce the speaker, and in so doing, he referred to the extensive travel in the Holy Land that the Rev. Mr. McLean had been privileged to enjoy. The members were not disappointed, for they listened to a clean cut discourse that was sufficiently thought provocative without approaching "weightiness."

They are William C. Knoell, former captain of police and his two former district detectives, John W. Sells and Herbert Layre. Knoell and Sells pleaded guilty and Layre was convicted by the jury of 104 bills of indictment containing 716 counts charging conspiracy, bribery and extortion from 18 saloon men in their district.

Zeppelin Stowaway Is a Business Boy

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Nov. 2 (Associated Press).—Clarence Terhune, adventurous youth who came to Germany aboard the Graf Zeppelin as a stowaway, has begun to manifest a keen business sense. Two large American syndicates are reported to have started bidding for the exploitation of this unique youngster, and he apparently has some idea of what he is worth to them.

ILL HEALTH AND HARD LUCK PUT DAMPER ON COUPLE'S ENTHUSIASM FOR NEW HOME

Immigrants Left Little Home in Kent County, England, Last Spring.

IN SORRY PLIGHT.

Things Went Fairly Well Until Father Took Ill Early in August.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., November 2 (Special to The Examiner). — Ill-health and grim hard luck are the spectres that have stalked the path of Frank Kenwood and his wife since they left their comfortable little home in Benend, Kent County, England, in April of this year, and with their two small children, set out to seek their fortune in the new country.

"I had not been enjoying the best of health," said Mrs. Kenwood, "and we had heard such glowing accounts of Canada that we decided to sell everything and migrate." But misfortune after misfortune befell them, till they found themselves this morning dispossessed by the bailiff of the stone house which they occupied while Mr. Kenwood was working as a farm laborer for Mr. Everett Little, a farmer, residing about a mile west of Trenton. With their scant possessions they and their children were taken to Trenton this morning.

Here people became interested in their sorry plight; without home, or friends, or money, and after some investigation they were finally reinstated in their former home on the little farm where they will remain till their case has been thoroughly taken up with the immigration authorities at Toronto, when it is expected they will be sent back to their old home in England.

Arrived in April.

The Kenwell family arrived in this country in April of this year on the immigration plan. They had no friends in this country whatever, but had made some coming out on the boat. They were separated from these, however, and from Toronto sent to the above-mentioned farm. Here they spent some of their scant savings buying necessities for the home and making out fairly well, when in August Mr. Kenwood took ill, and after several severe hemorrhages he was removed to the Toronto General Hopital. He remained for a month, and upon coming home was ordered to rest by his physician, but when he endeavored to take up his old duties he was again stricken, and found himself utterly unable to do the work. Then he was informed that his home was required for another tenant.

Kenwood is an old Army man, having seen thirteen years' service with the Imperial Army. Before the war, he was stationed in India, and during the Great War he served overseas for four years with the Rifle Brigade, and was a German prisoner in Belgium for the last four months of the struggle.

PLUMBING SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

At Present Time There Are 106 Plumbing Jobs Under Way in City.

The month of October proved a particularly busy one so far as plumbing Inspector Metheral's department was concerned. This morning, he stated that at the present time there are no less than 106 plumbing jobs under way while during the past month, 54 certificates of completion were granted.

Permits for installation were issued to the number of 36, providing for the placing in use of 33 water closets, 19 baths, 26 basins, 22 sinks, 7 laundry tubs, 2 combination trays, 1 shower bath 3 urinals and 12 floor drains.

Relative to inspections Mr. Metheral stated that 42 water tests had been made as well as 39 smoke tests while eight plumbing layouts had been inspected. Miscellaneous inspections totalled 52, bringing the total of all inspections up to 141. Ten old houses were connected up.

PILLARS OF 7000 TONS

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The deepest dock wall in the world will necessitate the construction of 78 concrete pillars, weighing 7000 tons each. The wall will be 3800 feet long. It was started two years ago, and it is estimated that $65,000,000 will be spent in its construction during the next 25 years.

Eighty-two per cent of the cars manufactured in the United States during 1927 were of the closed type.

SLAIN YOUTH IS HONORED

Whole Town at the Funeral Service, Girl Prays Alone.

SEEKS DEATH PENALTY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The killing of Harold Johnston, nineteen, High School student, of Neptune City, N.J., by the father of Marianne Farruggio, sixteen, schoolmate of the boy, resulted in a dramatic scene Wednesday.

Funeral services for Harold were held at his home on one side of the railroad track, with floral tributes from the football team, the baseball team, the Junior Order of American Mechanics and friends and neighbors piled high about the oak casket. There were so many flowers that a truck of the Neptune Township Volunteer Fire Department was brought out to convey them.

On the other side of the track Marianne, in the rear of her humble home, washed clothes for her nine brothers and sisters. Occasionally she stopped to kneel down and pray for the repose of Harold's soul. She said:

"I would have liked to go to the funeral, but I think I had better not. I wanted to send some flowers, but we haven't money enough for that."

She asked pathetic questions of those who had come from the other side of the track:

"Were there lots of people? Were the flowers nice? Did the school close?"

Then she dropped to her knees and prayed again.

Live on Contributions.

Her older sister, Josephine, cooked simple food for the family. It was purchased with money contributed chiefly by newspapermen who had come to talk with Marianne.

Meantime, Joseph Farruggio, the father, waited in jail for trial on a charge of manslaughter or murder. Assistant Prosecutor John Giordano said the State was preparing to oppose the prisoner's plea of the "unwritten law" and temporary insanity, and to convict him, if possible, of wilful, premeditated murder. The grand jury will determine what the charge shall be.

Whole Town at Funeral.

The service for the boy was one of the most largely attended ever held in that part of New Jersey. There were services at the Johnston residence, and later at the Neptune City M. E. Church. The procession was led by hose trucks of the fire department.

High school classes were dismissed at noon, and teachers and pupils assembled about the Johnston home. Mrs. Ellen Smith, for many years truant officer of the school, said she had been called upon since the tragedy to assure many parents that the morals of their children were not in danger.

WHERE WORKA, FROSH

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa. Nov. 2. — This borough saved some money and freshmen in the local high school learned the meaning of "labor" recently. The seniors got the happy thought, corralled the lower classmen and put them to work repairing holes in the streets. But it didn't last long because the freshies had hands too tender for that sort of work.

TWO CASES BEFORE COURT

His Honor Judge Huycke Hears Two Cases in Division Court.

JUDGMENT GIVEN.

Two cases appeared before His Honor Judge Huycke in Divisional Court this morning. The first was J. C. McLaren vs. the Continental Casualty Company in which the plaintiff claimed a greater indemnity for a disability than the defendant had paid him. The other case was Joseph Haworth vs. Ross Ormond Crouter in which the plaintiff made claim for payment for board and care of the defendant's wife and baby.

In the first case the evidence showed that J. C. McLaren suffered an injury to his knee while getting out of his car on September 24. As a result he suffered total disablement from that date until November 5 and partial disablement from until November 23. The Continental Casualty Company in which he was indemnified paid him on November 5 two checks, one for $10 and the other for $90. Both checks were stamped with the statement that they were in full payment for the damage suffered by the claimant. The plaintiff crossed out the statement on the back of the checks and then cashed them. He wrote letters stating that he did not consider the amount paid as sufficient for the losses suffered through his disablement.

Nagel Phelan as witness for the plaintiff said that for the period from September 24 until November 23 Mr. McLaren could not perform his duties as agent in the North American Insurance Company. Dr. T. G. Loudon and Dr. A. W. McPherson said that they had attended the plaintiff during his disablement and that it was possible with his injury to be unable to work for the length of time stated.

The defence proved that accompanying the two checks was a letter stating that this amount was to be considered full payment for the disability of the plaintiff.

His Honor Judge Huycke gave judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $87 and costs.

Girl Dies Result Of Self Inflicted Burns

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—Elfrieda Knaak, 30, book agent and psychology student, died to-day, three days after she voluntarily thrust her arms, feet and head into the furnace of the police station.

While through the days she stuck to the story that she inflicted the burns on herself to prove "her spiritual exaltation," police have searched for some other explanation. Her death blots out all hope of finding out what actually happened.

Sells Whiskey At "Blind Auction"; Buyer Protests Seizure of Bottles

NEW YORK, November 2. — Alexander Jerome, a seaman, had a bit of good luck, a bit of bad luck, and a legal problem come to him on Wednesday. He attended the sale of effects of a dead or deserting sailors at the Barge Office, and his bid of $2.00 bought a heavy alligator suit case, sold with the contents unrevealed.

As Jerome lifted it an idea occurred to him, and he hurried into a corner to see what luck had brought him. Five bottles of William Penn rye whisky reposed within the suit case. That was his good luck. Over his shoulder peered a customs agent. That was Jerome's bad luck, for the five bottles were promptly confiscated.

Contending that his deal was legal and that he had bought his liquor from the Government, represented by the United States Shipping Commissioner, Jerome demanded the bottles or $5.00 for each quart. That was the legal problem which Colonel W. S. Conrow, in charge of the agents, adjudicated by handing to Jerome the two-dollar bill he had offered for the suit case. Jerome left saying he would see a lawyer about it.

The bottles were taken by the customs men and the suit case was reoffered. It brought an ironic bid of 33 cents, which was accepted. The auction netted $500, in bids from 13 cents to $1.90, and the sum will be turned over to the United States District Court. One man got a bag for $1.00 and found $3.00 in it.

Pedestrian Boss In Model Traffic

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.— The pedestrian has the right of way at all intersections not under traffic control under the model traffic ordinance for cities adopted by the Hoover national conference on highway safety.

He is boss of the crosswalk and is not required to make a series of flying leaps from curb to curb as honking motorists bear down upon him, under the model code.

Having thus cleared the pedestrian's status, the conference adopted the red, green and amber system of traffic light control, and declared for the "slow-moving-traffic-keep-to-the-right rule, which permits passing only to the left of the overtaken vehicle.

MISSISSAUGA INDIANS WERE QUIET PEOPLE

Were Brave and Fearless Hunters—Part of Huron Tribe.

TWO RESERVATIONS.

Peaceful Tribe Gave No Trouble To Early Settlers of This District.

The Indians of Peterborough County, their history, traditions and mode of life form an interesting study. Although living as close as we do to the Indians it is hardly likely that many people really know very much about them.

The Indians living on the two reservations in the county, one at Curve Lake and the other at Rice Lake, belong to the Mississauga tribe, a small division of the great Huron tribe that inhabitated the whole southern part of Ontario. The Mississaugas were a very peaceful people far different from the war-like Iroquois that take such a large place in the pages of Canadian history books. However they were brave and fearless hunters. Living on the shores of the Kawartha Lakes, which is Indian for "Smiling Waters" in lonely, isolated wigwams, they fished, trapped, picked wild berries and did little cultivation or work if they could get along at all without it. They travelled a great deal and swiftly in their birch bark canoes which they handled expertly. The present Chemong Road follows practically the exact course of an Indian portage from the Otonabee River to Mud Lake, thus cutting off about twenty miles in the journey from the river to the Upper Lakes.

The only evidence we have of any strife among the Indians of this district is on the south shore of Rice Lake where stone hatchet heads and arrow heads could be found until a few years ago. These may be evidences of a battle and again it may be the site of an old village or perhaps a burying grounds, because the Indians buried weapons with their dead braves.

Entered Into Treaties.

However the peaceful Mississaugua hunters gave no trouble to the early settlers of the district and readily entered into treaties with His Majesty's Government. Many of the old families still retain large copper medallions given to their ancestors when they entered into treaties with the government.

Lands were set aside in 1834 as reserve for the Indians and they were told to live on these lands. They received small payments of money for their treaty rights. This money comes from an annuity set aside for them. These lands formed an area for the Mud Lake reserve, of 1664 acres and included about 30 islands in the lakes. Additional lands were given to the Indians in 1898 when the land in the country formerly granted to the old New England Co. by Royal Charter in London early in the last century was taken away and transferred to the Indians. Many of the islands in the Kawartha Lakes have been sold by the Indians to the cottagers. Some of the finest cottages on the lakes are built on what was formerly Indian land. The band at Rice Lake received in their original grant 1120 acres but this has been greatly added to by the Indians buying up lands. So that now it is

FRED GETS GATE.

Receipts Fall Off

Provincial Treasurer Had Expected a Surplus of

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Northern Ontario is Demanding a Larger Expenditure in Road Building.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 2.— Ontario's surplus for the fiscal year which ended on Wednesday is likely to be less than $177,000, forecast by Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, in his last budget, it is understood at Queen's Park.

The reduced revenue from succession duties as assigned by some as a reason for anticipating a smaller surplus, even though such duties are always calculable a year in advance, and though Dr. Monteith last spring foreshadowed a falling off in the receipts from this source.

Expenditures in Northern Ontario were rigidly curtailed during the last year, but "abnormal expenditures" in that area are looked for in the next few months. Northern members, it is said, are demanding substantial investments in road construction and other development work, particularly in view of the expectation of a general election next summer.

Old Age Pensions.

Old age pensions are on the slate for the 1929 session of the Legislature and Premier Ferguson has said that apart from routine the legislative program will be light. As indicative of an approaching election, it also pointed out that the Ontario Conservative convention to be held in Toronto on November 21 and 22 is to have an unusually large number of addresses all of which will be collected and printed in pamphlet form as excellent material for party stumpers.

ONLY ONE BOOK WILL BE ISSUED

Sir Henry Drayton Hopes New Permit Will Help Control Sale.

234 SPACES.

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—(Special to The Examiner).—Sir Henry Drayton is aiming to put the Control into the "Ontario Liquor Control Board."

The Chairman of the Board said to-day that he hoped the new book-form permit would aid greatly in getting more control of the sale of liquor in Ontario.

His attention had been called to the despatch from Hamilton which told of the worry of the thirsty one there as to whether they could get another permit when the 234 pages for hard stuff in the little book were all filled up.

"No, they can't get another permit" was Sir Henry's definite word. "We think there is plenty of space in one of those permits for any man's buying for a whole year."

The case in Toronto police court yesterday where a foreigner, with a wife and six children was found to have bought 2,340 quarts of beer and 58 quarts of spirits in a year, and to have spent $745 on his liquor purchases, was cited as an instance of the absurd lengths possible under the old form of permit, with the leaves added as the earlier ones filled up.

As for the Hamilton story that there were complaints about permit buyers having to mark in their applications their occupation and name of employer. Sir Henry laughed at such an objection. "Any persons who want permits should be satisfied to give us that information" he said.

BUILDING PERMITS AMOUNT TO $39,720

Total Building Undertaken in City Since January First Amount To $579,452.

Providing for the expenditure of approximately 39,720.00 in building throughout the city, 45 permits were issued at the City Engineer's office during the month of October, thus bringing the year's total up to $579,452.00.

The permits were for the erection of 9 garages at a total cost of $1,150; nine dwellings, $27,200.00 in value and miscellaneous work costing $11,370.00.

PUBLIC LIBRARY REAL ASSET TO CAMPBELLFORD

Building Was Erected in 1912, Partially From Carnegie Funds.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASES.

Last Year 609 Volumes Were Added To Book Shelves of Library.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 2.—Citizens of this town are proud of the library. Not only is the building one of the show places of the district, but the wealth of volumes which it contains amply repays the hours which any book lover or student may spend within its walls. The building itself is of brick and stone construction, and its slate roof shelters many thousands of volumes of the best fiction, authorities and histories that can be procured anywhere. They are catalogued in several different ways so that anyone may find any book, provided that he knows the name of the book or its author. Should they not happen to know either, Miss Helen Campbell, the librarian, possesses an uncanny knowledge of the books that line the shelves, and the generous way in which she assists the patrons and friends of the building when they come searching for books or knowledge of books has won her many hundreds of friendships.

The building is a two-storey structure, with the library on the main or second floor. The tiers of books are arranged along the full length of the rear of the building. At the front on either ide of the entrance are reading rooms. Here may be found all the leading magazines and periodicals. The daily and weekly papers are also on the tables for the perusal of any who desire to read them. The north-east room is more suited to the requirements of ladies, while on the west are the magazines which are of more interest to men. Next to the ladies' reading room is the librarian's room. As well as serving as a cloak room and private office, some book repairs are carried on here as well.

Reference Library.

The reference library is directly across the hall and next to the men's reading room. Here are to be found tiers of books, authorities on history, science, and the affairs of the world generally. Noticeable on the shelves are The Makers of Canada, presented by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson; Twenty Volumes of Great Events by Famous Historians; Library of the World's Best Literature, a thirty-volume set, Cassels' Romances of Famous Lives; The Everyman's Encyclopedia; Universal History; The Canadian Census 1911-1921; the fourteenth edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica in thirty volumes; books on sciences, arts, and practically every topic known. But the books in this room are not all that are available for the use of the student or book lover. Any book may be requested from the lending shelves and taken to the quiet room for study or perusal.

Of interest to the citizens of the towns is the picture which hangs over the mantel in this room. It is that of Major David Campbell, the founder of Campbellford. There were, of course, no bridges over the Trent River when Major Campbell first located here. It was necessary to ford the river at a point near the northern corporation boundary. The settlement was known as Campbellford, and gradually grew to its present status of an incorporated town. The picture was presented to the town by Lt.-Col. John Vance Graveley. From the inscription on the card in the corner of the picture, it is difficult to tell who is being referred to, Major

2,500 BUSHELS OF GRAIN THRESHED BY ONE FARMER

Ernest Eagleson Has Largest Crop in Burnbrae District This Year.

TURNIP TOPS FROZEN

Cold Weather Has Affected the Milk Flow on the Farm.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Nov. 2—Ernest Eagleson recently threshed the largest crop in this locality, having well over 2,500 bushels of grain. Several farmers who could not get buckwheat dry enough to thresh or draw into the barn, have found that the frost has dried it more quickly and better than sunshine. Threshing is still in full swing particularly in the Menie district.

It is very seldom that frost stops the farmer from plowing in October, but this has happened during the past week, when farmers found the ground almost too hard to plow before noon. Many farmers who have mangels still in the field are wondering just what effect this severe frost will have. Turnip tops are frozen, but the roots, of course, will not suffer as this crop thrives on frost.

Milk Flow Set Back.

The cold and disagreeable weather has caused a decided set-back in the milk flow and the making of cheese is declining as a result. In spite of high cheese prices, farmers who have not a surplus grain hesitate to buy much for feed, as grain prices are still rather high. Other years oats could be bought at 45 to 50 cents a bushel at this season, but this year very few are offered at 55 cents.

United States buyers have been making inroads in the dairy cattle supplies in this district, and two carloads of springers have been shipped out during the week.

The hog market is not promising, with prices down to $9.25 a cwt. This figure hardly covers winter feed costs, without counting anything for work, investment or other overhead charges. The wise farmer will bank on the dairy until the hog market comes back within reason.

SPECIAL SERVICE ON ARMISTICE DAY

Legion Will Hold Poppy Day and Memorial Service.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 2. — Arrangements for the memorial service and the sale of poppies to commemorate the signing of the armistice were the chief attractions that called forth the large attendance at the meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Legion in their club rooms in the armories last night. Two new member were accepted into the ever-increasing ring and renewal memberships from several of the older members were paid to the treasurer. There are still about twenty memberships which have fallen due during the last few days.

This year the sale of poppies will be carried on under the direction of chairmen of the committees for each of four wards. J. R. Wilkinson will have charge of the sale in ward one. A. G. Morgan in ward two, James

Crash Ruins Engineer's 40-Year Record In Last Five Minutes At Throttle, Man Killed

CAMDEN, N.J., November 2.—For nearly forty years William R. Hammill, of Gloucester, had been at the throttles of Reading Company locomotives and never had his engine caused or figured in a fatality. Last night more than 200 officials of the railroad, fellow-employees and friends sat around tables in the Reading Y. M.C.A. here awaiting Hammill's arrival at a testimonial dinner which was to climax his career as an engineer.

The Boardwalk Flyer, the Reading Company's crack train to Atlantic City, was pulling into Camden for the last time with Bob Hammill at the throttle. Five minutes later he would climb from the cab, pull off his gloves, and write "finis" to a perfect record.

At Ninth and Bulson Streets a motor car appeared suddenly on the crossing. Hammill cut the steam and threw on the air and emergency brakes, but too late. After the crash the body of a man was pulled from the wreckage, and his woman companion was taken to the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital in a critical condition.

The train was permitted to proceed to the Camden terminal a few minutes later. Hammill, badly shaken, stepped down from the cab with his shoulders drooped and his hand trembling.

The waiting celebrants at the banquet had not learned of the accident. Hammill went to the Y.M.C.A. and explained why he was late. The dinner proceeded as it had been planned.

"Just five minutes, that was all I had left," he said. "Why did it have to happen?"

Company officials figured that the engineer had driven locomotives about 2,500,000 miles during his long service.

HON. JAMES MALCOLM SPEAKS TO AUDIENCE IN CARDIFF, WALES FROM HIS OFFICE IN OTTAWA

10,000 People Listen To Minister's Address on Canada Day.

INTRICATE HOOK-UP.

Cost of Transmitting the Speech Amounted To $175 Per Minute.

CARDIFF, Wales, November 2 (Canadian Press Cable). — Yesterday was Canada Day at the British Empire Trade Exhibition, and a crowd estimated at 10,000 persons listened to an address by Hon. James Malcalm, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce. Mr. Malcolm spoke into a microphone in his office at Ottawa, and every word was carried by an intricate hook-up of wireless and land wires to the Exhibition Grounds. Loud speakers made the address clearly audible to the listeners, who cheered Canada to the echo when the Minister had concluded.

It was estimated that the cost of transmitting the speech amounted to $175 a minute. It proved valuable as an experiment in transmission, and as a result wireless officials believe more direct communication with Canada can be worked out. Experiments will be conducted to that end.

Relayed to New York.

Mr. Malcolm's speech was relayed by telephone from Ottawa via New York to Rocky Point, L.I. From the wireless station there it went to the station at Cupar, Fifeshire, Scotland. This station passed the speech along over land lines to the General Post Office at London, where it was amplified for the last stage of the journey which was completed when the loud speakers carried the Minister's words to the exhibition crowds. At one stage when the wires failed temporarily a gramophone record of the incoming speech was made, while a special line was run from the Cardiff broadcasting station to the Exhibition Hall.

It was hoped that the cheers of the crowd had been heard in Canada, efforts having been made to transmit the sound back across the route used to transmit Mr. Malcolm's address.

Immediately after the conclusion of the speech, wireless officials at Cardiff got into communication with Canada over a more direct line, and it was stated that as a result of the success attending the effort to transmit a speech clearly over the vast distance between Ottawa and Cardiff, further experiments would be made to improve the service.

Collie Follows His Master 500 Miles

HASTINGS, Neb., Nov. 2.—When the James Davis family moved from Huntley, Neb., to southeast Missouri, they took along a collie dog—a family pet.

The collie seemed homesick in the new location and disappeared, presumably to return to Huntley. He never reached that place and nothing more was heard of him.

Then the family moved to Clay Center, 500 miles away, where the dog had never been. A few days ago Davis heard a familiar bark in the yard. He opened the door and there was the collie — thin and worn, eagerly waiting a welcome.

LAKEFIELD HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 2.—Responding to a call between 9 o'clock and 9.30 last night on what was believed to be a chimney fire at the house of George Sanderson, on the corner of Chippawa Avenue and Strickland Streets, the Lakefield fire brigade were effective in saving the residence from being totally destroyed by fire. The house was of bungalow type, and as the fire was in the upper storey of the house, the firemen were forced to break through the roof in order to combat the blaze.

The upper floor with its contents was completely wrecked, while the furniture in the downstairs was damaged by water. The fact that the ceiling was metallic was a great factor in combating the blaze. Although partly covered by insurance, it is estimated that the damage will cover over half of the property.

DIVISION COURT IN CAMPBELLFORD

Judge Huycke Presided Over Five Cases Heard Yesterday Afternoon.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 2 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There were eight cases listed on the docket for the November session of the division court here this afternoon. But only five came to trial. The hearing was before Judge E. C. S. Huycke of Peterborough, in the council chambers of the public library building.

The first case was Turner vs. Rightmyre and Gillespie. It involved an amount of $12.80 and was adjusted.

Sampson vs. McMullen was the second on the list, and when it developed that Sampson was, in the eyes of the law, an infant, the action was dismissed without costs.

The third case was adjourned till a future sitting of the court.

Tait vs. Kerr was the next item to demand the attention of the court. The dispute was between T. S. Tait and Son, hardware merchants of the town of Campbellford, and Thomas R. Kerr, farmer. The claim was for $23.48 and centered about a pair of sheep shears, a horse hide and the interest on the account which had been running for about ten years. From the evidence, it appeared that the shears had been purchased for thirteen dollars and they did not prove satisfactory. Later they were returned to the Tait Hardware and sold to another customer for nine dollars. A horse hide which Kerr had brought to Tait had not been credited to his account until he had drawn the dealer's attention to the fact and then, it was claimed that the price was too low. The shears had been reported as not in the proper working order, but not returned to the store for some time. Kerr claimed the time was about two years. Tait set it at three and a half years.

After hearing the evidence and the arguments of N. A. MacColl, counsel for Tait and D. J. Lynch, counsel for Kerr, Judge Huycke expressed the opinion that the evidence had been contradictory and hazy with regard to dates, and believed that there were errors on both sides, in regard to the business methods. He thought Kerr should have returned the shears immediately and that the dealer should have seen that they were either made to work properly or other satisfactory adjustment made. Judge Huycke pointed out that there had been no agreement between the parties regarding interest on the account and it was therefore not collectable. After deducting the amount of interest entered in the account and allowing the price of the shears to be set at eleven dollars rather than nine, judgment was given for the plaintiff for $17.05. Of this $7.80 had already been paid into court.

Kerr vs. Crosson was the next case called, but Crosson was not in court. The bailiff was sent in search for him but he could not be located. The judge issued an order which makes the absentee liable to fifteen days in the common jail for contempt of court.

Kerr vs. Dunk offered several complications and dated back over a number of years. There was a dispute of claims for numerous articles including a baby carriage, turkey eggs, harness and work done. The principals in the affair stated in court that they were first cousins, and the judge suggested that they make an agreement between themselves, which would not make it necessary to air the case in court. The suggestion was adopted, but after some consideration, all the items in the two accounts could not be satisfactorily adjusted to both parties. Judge Huycke gave judgment for the amount of $40.50 which was due on a note and permission to either party to enter suit for either of the contrary accounts.

Reindeau vs. Towns was a suit for rent due and was soon adjusted when the defendant agreed to terms of payment. The case of Scott vs. Fitzgerald was transferred to the Warkworth court.

Population Increases.

The population of the Indians living on the reserves is on the increase. The earliest records that can be conveniently found are those of December 1897 which give the populations as Mud Lake, 165; Rice Lake, 76. The population at the present time is Mud Lake, 282, and Rice Lake, 79. This is an increase on the Mud Lake reserve of 187 and 3 at Rice Lake. The population of the reserves is kept down by the Indians seeking infranchisement as British subjects thus giving up their payments for treaty rights and privileges. There have been no great epidemics among the local Indians such as often wipe off whole tribes in the North because they have lived so long in contact with the white man as to be almost as immune to his diseases as he is himself. At the present time there are reported several cases of mumps on the Mud Lake reserve.

The Indians live almost wholly in the open. During the summer is when they make the biggest part of the yearly income as guides for the tourist fisherman. Then they also do a little farming and a few do nothing else but farm and do very well at it too. In the winter they trap and some go into the woods as wood cutters. Some of the more primitive go deep back into the woods and gather medicinal roots such as the Ginseng roots. The squaws weave baskets and pick berries to help.

There are many social gatherings among the Indians. There is the annual fall fair when they dress in their tribal costumes and do many of their native dances. Then there are the many dances held during the winter and summer when they dress in the latest Parisian fashion to reach the reserve and do the latest fox trot and collegiate steps. Many of the tourists like the free Indian life so much that they lease property on the reserves and spend their summers with the Indians. This has led to some few marriages between American tourists and some of the Indian belles.

Many of the houses are fine brick structure and then some of them are only shacks often far from clean. Most of the Indians have, however, one steady abode but some still have the wandering nature of their forefathers and move from place to place—these are known as "swamp" Indians.

Education is beginning to rank high among the Indians and the school house is gaining in importance. Some of the sons of the more prosperous Indians have gained or are trying for their matriculation certificate and have strong intentions of entering university.

Indian affairs are handled by an Indian agent who acts as Justice of the Peace in all their minor criminal offences. The Indian Agent for the Peterborough Indians is Vincent Eastwood, M.C. There is also a medical officer appointed for each reserve who looks after the general health. The Indian offices of chief and band leader are filled by election among the Indians. Elections are held every three years.

Names Are Long.

Some of the original Indian names are long and have strange meanings. Here are a few of the old families names: Og-Ec-Mah-Heg-Wa, Kul-Be-Je-Ze-Qud meaning All Day); Obec-Mem-Aun(e-Quad-Oocke. Of course all these names have been changed to English names or altered until they resemble English names. At the Rice Lake reserve one of the oldest and most respected names is that of Paudash, which is Indian, and means "A sail in the distance" or "Away Off."

One of the things which is causing a good deal of comment among the Indians of the Rice Lake reserve is the recent barring of Indians off some of the marshes Marshes on which they and their fathers have hunted and trapped the muskrat for centuries. Now great syndicates have bought up the marshes and barred them to outside trappers. The yearly catch of furs of the Indians is suffering as a result. An Indian will trap a marsh for years and hardly lessen the number of rats but a white trapper generally completely wipes out the rats after a season's trapping by the use of modern traps.

NUMEROUS PARTIES FOR HALLOWE'EN

Sunday School Classes Are Entertained by Their Teachers.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Nov. 2.—Hallowe'en was marked by the holding of various parties. At the room adjoining C. W. Gladney's store, the members of the C.G.I.T. under supervision of Mrs. Dr.) D. L. Curtis and Misses R. Kennedy and E. William enjoyed indoor revels. Miss M. Topper entered her Sunday school class in the Oddfellows Hall. Night had scarcely set in before the usual outdoor pranks were started. Grotesque figures promenaded the sidewalks, far outnumbering those in regulation attire. At the Town Hall "Ladies Night" was the title of the special picture shown before a good attendance.

LIVERPOOL, November 2. — Mrs. Mary Powell fainted while bathing her three-months-old baby. The infant fell into the tub, containing three inches of water, and was found dead near the unconscious mother a short time later.

PUBLIC LIBRARY REAL ASSET

Campbell or Lt.-Col. Graveley. The inscription reads:

"Major David Campbell, the founder of Campbellford, 'Circa 1823' Presented to the 'Town of Campbellford' by Lt.-Colonel John Vance Graveley, late 40th Regiment, and senior ordinance officer, 2nd Division. Ex-Mayor of Cobourg Oct. 1st, 1912."

The ground floor of the building contains three rooms, the council chamber, a wash room and the furnace room, which contains the hot water heating plant and the coal supply. The council chamber has many uses. It is also the division court room. Various organizations hold their meetings there. The Daughters of the Empire charter once hung on the wall of this room. The tennis club and bowling club hold their annual meetings in the big room and practically every social or sporting organization have met within its walls on some occasion.

The building itself was erected in 1912 as may be seen by the lettering on the corner stone. It was erected largely from the funds from the Carnegie Institution and is known as the Carnegie Free Library. The opening automatically closed the mechanic's institute library which had functioned for many years in a large upper room in the Ferris block. The improved conditions and accommodations made possible the increase in the volume of the library. At the present of these 164 joined during 1927. The sent time there are 1166 members and increase for 1928 points to an even larger number. The number of books loaned averages more than two thousand each month and during 1927 there were 28,636 volumes taken and returned to the institution. This was an increase of 1,235 volumes over the circulation of the previous year. The circulation to date this year is 24,257, slightly in excess of the figures for the same period during 1927.

It is the rule of the board that fifty dollars each month is to be spent for books. Last year there were 609 volumes added to the shelves, 485 for adults and 124 for younger readers. So far this year there have been 464 volumes added. New volumes arrive each month and are read and either accepted or rejected by the board. The members of the board at the present time are: A. J. Jenkins, chairman; E. H. Greig, B.A., secretary; Richard Weston, treasurer; Harry Townsend; the Rev. Father Phelan; George Nicol; and C. S. Haig, principal of the Public schools. Two members are elected by the Board of Education, two by the Council, two by the Library Board itself, and one by the 'Teachers' Federation. Their term of office is two years. Miss Helen Campbell has been librarian since June, 1918. Miss Ora Haig, now Mrs. James Watters, occupied the position previous to her marriage.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc. are due, to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurate Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas, or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach. Inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

REGULAR SERVICE

Watters in ward three, and E. Claverly in ward four. The sale will follow similar lines to that of last year.

There was considerable discussion of the article appearing in this month's MacLean's magazine, entitled, "The Truth About the War" and the second article which appears in the same periodical. The local branch instructed its secretary to procure two hundred copies of the article which has been published in pamphlet form.

After deciding on a special meeting for November 8th to complete the arrangements for the memorial service and for the sacred concert in the evening, the business of the meeting was closed, and the social hour began. In connection with this part of the meeting, it is of interest to note that bridge has constantly increased in favour and that the old-time favorite, cribbage, is a close second. Very little euchre is played now in the club rooms.

The "Mona Lisa" at the Louvre, Paris, and "The Last Supper" in the refectory of Santa Maria delle Grazie, Milan, are Leonardo de Vinci's two most famous paintings.

HUNTING LICENSES.

The license fee for non-resident hunters in Ontario this fall is $41.00, and there are some complaints that this figure is excessive and will tend to keep American hunters out of the Province.

The era of rapid transportation by automobile and the building of better roads into the hunting sections of Ontario, makes it necessary, however, that the charge to non-residents should be fairly stiff.

Otherwise it is to be imagined our reserves of deer would rapidly disappear.

The automobile has brought Ontarios deer within a few hours of the guns of American hunters.

With a good car on good roads it is an easy matter for the sportsmen across the border to pay a flying visit to the hunting country, and were not the annual charge heavy enough to make such an excursion expensive, the invasion from the United States would be a serious menace to the provincial supply of deer.

That supply is dwindling rapidly enough without inviting the hunters of the continent to come in and complete the job.

THE FISH COMMITTEE.

Hon. Charles McCrea's Game Fish Committee, appointed to investigate conditions in Ontario in regard to fishing and to bring in, if possible, a plan for propagation and conservation, has a very important mission, and apparently has made every effort both in this country and by enquiries in various parts of the United States to secure all the information available.

There will be a general hope among all those who realize the value of our fishing resources from a tourist-bringing viewpoint that the committee may be successful in drafting a program that will materially improve conditions.

If their findings help to conserve the game fish we have left and provide a way of adding to their numbers, they will be enthusiastically received.

Certainly, unless this can be done, the time has come to consider the alternative policy suggested in the letter from a Cleveland sportsman which appeared in last evening's Examiner, that is to substitute other kinds of fish—pickerel, for example—for our rapidly disappearing bass and maskinonge.

If the depletion of our waters continue our tourist traffic is sure to suffer, with decidedly bad results from the standpoint of business.

LET THE PUBLIC KNOW.

There seems to be much force in the contention of Canadian Aviation that when an airplane crash is the subject of a governmental inquiry the findings of the board should be published.

Public confidence in the safety of aviation is not going to be fostered by a policy of silence as to the cause of flying accidents.

The public is entitled to know the facts.

When a crash happens it should be stated if possible whether the mishap was the result of defective equipment, a mechanical weakness in the plane, carelessness on the part of the pilot, unsafe weather conditions or some oth cause.

It is the belief of most flyers that aviation is safer under present conditions than is motoring on a main highway.

They feel that, given a capable machine operated with reasonable care by a good pilot, there is less chance of accidents in the air than there is on the road.

The public will not share this belief, however, unless all the facts in regard to accidents are made known.

So long as the findings are not published there will be a feeling among many people that aviation is a most hazardous occupation.

EARLIER MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Interest in the earlier holding of municipal elections is aroused by the fact that Mayor McBride, of Toronto, has called a meeting to discuss the advisability of the Queen City adopting a date early in December for its annual election, which, as in Peterborough, is now held on New Year's Day.

Undoubtedly there is much in favor of the change, even although the experience of other municipalities which have tried the early campaign has not revealed a striking increase in the vote polled.

By holding the election in the first week in December, the campaign is out of the way well before the worst of the Christmas rush, and, therefore, does not interfere with holiday business.

Women are as a rule busy, too, on New Year's Day, the entertaining and family gatherings that usually mark the day making a demand upon the time of the housewives, and they would probably prefer the December date as likely to save them from inconvenience and provide them with a better chance to exercise their franchise.

The suggested change has been under discussion here from time to time, but no effort has been made to bring it about, and at present neither the civic rulers nor the public generally, show any desire to see an earlier election day arranged.

TAKE AWAY THEIR CARDS!

(From the Border Cities Star)

Attorney-General Price denies reports that it is the intention of the Government to amend the Liquor Control Act in order to tighten the punishment for second offenders on charges of drunkenness. The Government believes that the Act is a good one and will allow it to work itself out, Colonel Price says.

In this connection it is interesting to note the comment of Chief of Police Wigle, of Windsor. The chief believes that that section of the law dealing with drunken motor car drivers needs strengthening. At present, he says, the man who is drunk on a public street goes to jail for 10 days if he is unable to pay his fine. The drunken driver, however, gets only seven days in jail. "I honestly believe," Chief Wigle adds, "that the minimum sentence for drunk driving should be not less than 30 days. They are the worst problem we have to deal with."

Colonel Price might well give ear to the Windsor chief's suggestion. It does seem unfair that an "ordinary" drunk, who has harmed no one, should get a stiffer sentence than the man who, intoxicated, drives a motor car and endangers the lives of himself and everyone else with whom he comes in contact. Perhaps, instead of lengthening the jail sentence, it might be well to have the law read that any person found guilty of driving a motor car while under the influence of liquor, should be deprived of the right to operate a machine for at least a year. A corrective of this kind would make people think a lot before offending in this way.

HIDEOUS ROADSIDE STANDS.

Motoring through New England not long ago, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., noticed so many attractive landscapes marred by ramshackle resorts devoted to the sale of that national institution, the hot dog, that she determined there and then to do what she could to bring about their disappearance or, at least, such an improvement in their appearance that they would no longer prove an offence to the eyes. She succeeded in interesting a number of important organizations in her campaign and these, with her support, offered prizes for the most attractive refreshment stands along the highways of New England. The prizes have just been awarded for the first time and the announcement accompanying these awards says that there has been a noticeable improvement in the general run of refreshment stands, their owners, spurred to eliminate hideous signs, to apply paint and to cut grass and unkempt vegetation by the terms of the competition, having made a sympathetic response to the appeal directed towards them.

There are said to be fully 25,000 of these refreshment stands along the principal highways of the United States, and it cannot be said that Mrs. Rockefeller's complaint was unfounded. Many and many a time a pleasant landscape is completely marred by the shacks which stand in proximity to it, and the same thing is in danger of happening in Canada if pains are not taken to prevent the encroachment of hot dog and ice cream stands upon beauty spots. The various oil concerns have sensed the demand for preservation of the highway's beauties by making their filling stations as attractive as it is possible to make such establishments. They have done so without regulation and simply to have their buildings conform with the surroundings. But the same anxiety has not been exhibited by the proprietors of refreshment stands. They are, in general, hideous eyesores, and to prevent the repetition of the situation which has arisen in the United States, it may be necessary to bring about some regulation that will make them fit into the picture a good deal more harmoniously than is now the case.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

AN EVENING WITH RADIO.

A United States technical journal informs us that an inventor has discovered a means of eliminating static. If he has, then 50,000,000 people on this continent will bow down and call him blessed. For static, we are convinced, is an invention and a weapon of the Evil One, an infernal thing that is desolating more homes and losing more immortal souls than all the terrible sins and temptations the preachers keep denouncing. Static, in fact, is like missing a two-foot putt on eighteen successive holes, or like foozling your drive just when that charming young thing you wanted to impress seems to be taken with the hang of your plus-fours. It is all of that, and worse.

For a month now we have been sitting up at night, borrowing from our sleep credit, and neglecting our work and family, trying to find out something about this presidential race in the States, or to hear some soothing music, and this, usually, is the result:

"This is station H-I-A-T-U-S, Alice McMonogle, the world's most tenderest soprano, will now sing 'Ramona.'".... "The time has come when all men who love the Republic must strike a blow."...."Let us see what Helen McShuster, the world's most famous operatic star, says about Ever-Clean toothpaste....obtainable at all."...."It is a well-known fact, attested by the most reliable authorities, that Al Smith sits up at night in Albany with."...."Hazel Carruthers will now sing 'Ramona.'".... "This is station W.O.P."...."The alligator vacuum cleaner which leaves rugs and carpets free of ashes, clinkers, old newspapers, icicles, and."...."Ah, my fellow-countrymen, only once in a century are the free and intelligent electors of any nation afforded the opportunity of voting for a Heaven-sent genius, a noble patriot, a mighty statesman, a loving father like Herbert."...."Edith Skinner will now sing 'Ramona.'".... "This hour is presented by the courtesy of the Gold Diggers' Magazine for tired business men who have to stay at home and mind the baby."...."We present to you now, ladies and gentlemen, Alfred E. Smith, the next President of the United States, the Happy Warrior, the new Lincoln."...."A package of this corn cure, known the world over, will be sent to all who write."...."Gladys Smart, America's celebrated and beautiful soprano, will now render that haunting song, 'Ramona.'".... "And if you cast your vote for any other than Herbert Hoover, then I say to you that this country is doomed, and we shall have nothing but"...."the world's greatest tires"...."Moran and Mack"...."cigarettes"...."lemon squeezers"...."'Ramona.'"...."It is now.... mountain standard time"...."and, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman."...."'Ramona.'"...."This is Bernard McSwizle bidding you 'G-o-o-d Night.'"

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Governor Al Smith may not be elected, but at least he has a lot of wonderful receptions upon which to look back.

And another reason why gates are no longer carried off on Hallowe'en is that there are not so many gates to carry off.

Hon. R. B. Bennett and Premier Ferguson had a little chat "about this and that" the other day. It is not known whether the Brien charges were "this" or "that."

Ontario reports an epidemic of missing boys. But there was only one stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin, and he was not a Canadian.

Noting that there are 2,958,360 barrels of apples in Canada this fall, the Globe remarks that while this is a quarter of a barrel for every Canadian, "the chances are we will continue to buy them by the dozen."

No move to air the Brien charges is apparent. But they will be heard of again when the Ontario Government goes to the country.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—All grain, especially corn, went up yesterday owing a good deal to threatened blizzards and to 57,000,000 bushels curtailment of estimates of corn yield. Wheat gains, however, failed to hold well in the face of hedge selling from the northwest.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, 1 to 1⅜c net higher. Wheat finished nervous at same as Wednesday's finish to ¼c advance, with oats showing ¼ to ½ to ⅝c gain, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 50c.

Fears were expressed that storms travelling eastward over corn belt would tend seriously to interfere with husking and with the movemnt of new corn. Besides, country offerings yesterday of corn to arrive were relatively meagre, and corn downstate in Illinois available for shipmnt to New Orleans was commanding 1⅜c a bushel over the current bids from Chicago. Meanwhile, too, export purchasing of corn at the eastern seaboard continued.

Substantial buying of corn future deliveries accompanied unofficial November crop reports issued here yesterday from leading authorities. An outstanding feature of these reports was that the average of the estimates of production was 2,912,000,000 busheles, compared with 2,969,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,969,000,000 was construed as being much more than a counter-balance for the fact that the estimates were larger than was the case on November 1 last year. One expert figured the yield for 1928 as one-half bushel less per acre than was estimated October 1, ears being smaller than expected and other ill effects showing as a result of untimely dry weather at a critical stage west of the Missouri River.

Reactions from the day's top prices came just before the close. Earlier, the wheat market scored sharp advances because of active buying of future deliveries for houses with eastern and foreign connections. Talk was heard that Canadian official wheat crop estimates are likely to be reduced, and that interesting farm relief developments are near at hand. There were also reports of further unwelcome rains in northern Argentina. Oats followed corn rather than wheat.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 2 (Canadian Press). — A fair amount of business was done in cash grain in the local market yesterday, there being an improved demand from both local and export buyers. Sales of No. 3 Northern wheat were made at 6⅜c a bushel over the Winnipeg November option, and No. 3 Canadian Western barley was sold to New York exporters at 13⅜c per bushel over the October option, c.i.f. Montreal, while No. 4 barley sold at 79½c, and feed at 71c per bushel, c.i.f.

Owing to the strength in wheat at Winnipeg spot prices were advanced 1c per bushel, with car lots of Manitoba No. 6 wheat selling at 91, and feed wheat at 95c per bushel.

The market for all lines of millfeed was active and steady. The tone of the market for rolled oats was steady with a fair demand.

Prices for all grades of fresh eggs were firmly maintained at the late advances noted. The demand was good but little business was done owing to the continued scarcity of supplies. Receipts were 261 cases.

The tone of the potato market was firm. Green Mountains sold at 85c per 90 lb. bag, and Cobblers at 75c per 90 lb. bag, while in bulk Green Mountains sold at 70c per 90 lbs, and Cobblers at 65c, ex-track.

An active trade was done in butter under an improved demand from local and outside buyers. Receipts were 687 packages.

There was some inquiry from English importers for cheese and some further business was done in current receipts of Eastern No. 1 colored. The spot trade was quiet and prices were unchange. Receipts were 5,949 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—Receipts of fresh eggs are falling off fast and current production is now at the lowest for the present season. Prices are firmer, particularly on extra grades, and further revisions in an upward direction are expected today from large dealers. Some market operators advanced their prices yesterday for deliveries next week. Dealers are quoting for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned, extras, 48 to 50 cents per dozen; fresh firsts, 42 to 43 cents; seconds, 31 to 33 cents. Pullet extras range from 38 to 40 cents a dozen in a competitive market.

Storage eggs are moving into consumption more freely, but prices remain easy. One car of British Columbia fresh has arrived on consignment and another car is rolling here. The car that has arrived is composed of extras, pullet extras and firsts, and the one rolling is all extras. The shippers are asking for extras 51 cents, firsts and pullet extras, 43 cents f.o.b.

Finest creamery butter was moving yesterday at prices steady with the week's advance. Highest grade creamery solids were quotable at from 39½ cents to an extreme range of 39¾ cents per pound, with buyers in the market more often in order to obtain supplies for immediate needs. Undergrades are moving readily and finest grades of butter are being well cleared in a market which is beginning to show healthy improvement.

Cheese prices are holding steady at a quotable range of from 21¼ to 22 cents per pound for No. 1 large colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered basis. The volume of business was again small yesterday.

There has been a noticeabue in-crease in poultry receipts and a larger proportion are coming dressed. Chickens are a little easier, but fowl are in good demand and fairly firm. Some dealers are now quoting for geese and turkeys, and a few are arriving, but the quality is only fair.

Thanksgiving demand is expected to be brisk next week and only slight reductions in prices have been made by local dealers.

FAVORS EMPIRE TRADE.

Future solidarity of the British Empire depends largely upon some form of free trade within the Empire, according to John A. Sinclair, chairman and managing director of John Sinclair, Ltd., one of the largest English tobacco firms, who is visiting Canada. Mr. Sinclair is the third of the name to control John Sinclair, Ltd., having succeeded his father and grandfather. The firm was founded at the time of the Crimean War. The present factory at Newcastle-on-Tyne is located on the original site.

A Thought

TREASURES OF THE MIND.

There is nothing which so adds to the treasures of the mind and increase its power as its own thinking. Learn to think of yourself. It is all very well to hear and to read the wisdom of others. But one should not let this take the place of his own thought. Many persons are like cisterns, they are good to hold the thoughts of others. But when the time comes that they are forced to rely on themselves, they have no power to do so. The outside supply is cut off and the cistern runs dry. But if one, like the river, is constantly fed by its own springs, then, as the learning of others comes to him, it unites with his own waters and the stream widens and deepens.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States, where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage, to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland he meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But, after he realizes that he really loves her, he finds out that she is a cousin of the JULIE FARROW whom his brother loved. He tells her the truth—of his mistake, and that because of his marriage, he cannot marry her. He meets her later in London, to find that she is leading a wild, gay life, and is apparently heartless. One night Julie meets an older man, whose wife has recently died, named SCHOFIELD. He has just inherited a good deal of money. He decides he wants to marry Julie. She goes out to lunch with him next day.

"I tell you who I did like," Schofield said, "that tall fellow—what was his name?—Chittenham?"

Julie caught her breath.

"Oh, yes— I forgot that you met him!"

"You introduced us just before we left."

"Did I? I forgot."

"I liked him," Schofield said again meditatively. "I believe I've met him before somewhere, but I can't quite remember. If I were a woman, he is the kind of man who would attract me."

"He detests all women."

"Nonsense! A man like that—"

Julie broke in excitedly.

"I tell you he does—ask anyone who knows him! He's a woman hater."

"Then there must be a good reason for it."

"Conceit, I should think!" Julie said flippantly. "He imagines that all women are running after him."

Schofield looked surprised at her vehemence.

"It sounds rather as if you dislike him."

Julie shrugged her shoulders. There was a little hard look in her pretty eyes.

"I don't dislike him," she said. "I'm just quite indifferent."

Giles Chittenham found that once he had launched his mother on what she considered her voyage of discovering life she was insatiable. Although she no longer wearied him with her tears and reproaches, she wearied him in other ways.

She was on the telephone to him morning, noon and night. Would he take her here? Did he think she might go there?

"Not that I'm a prude, Giles—you know that! But one has to be a little careful where one is seen. It's not as if I had a man of my own to look after me. And I know I am apt to be reckless! Your dear father often said so—or was it Rodney's father? I really forget, but I know it was one of them. If you are quite, quite sure that the Palais de Joie is the sort of place really nice people may go to, of course it's all right."

"Nice people can go anywhere nowadays," Giles answered uncompromisingly. "Who is taking you?"

There was the barest hesitation at the other end of the 'phone before the answer came.

"Oh! Well, you'll be quite safe with Doris. Now I come to think of it, she asked me and I refused."

"Oh, Giles, how unkind! Why did you? Doris likes you."

Giles was quite well aware of that, and it was the chief reason for his refusal. Since his introduction to Doris at the Faun he had seen a good deal more of her than he wished to see. It was not that he disliked her, but that he had no wish to be identified with any particular woman.

At first, although he would hardly admit it to himself, he had accepted her invitations in the hope that perhaps Julie might also be included, but he had always been disappointed.

Once, when he had mentioned her name to Doris, she had frowned.

"Oh—Julie! I think I've shown her at last that her room is preferable to her company. She's really too impossible. You know who she is running about with now?"

"No."

"Lawrence Schofield."

"I don't know him."

"You do. You were introduced at the Faun that night. He's a harmless sort of man with heaps of money, but his wife has only been dead about a month, and it's a bit soon, don't you think?"

"Soon for what?"

"To get married again."

There was a little silence, then Chittenham asked quietly:

"Is he to marry Miss Farrow, then?"

"So people say. He's years too old for her, of course, but he seems absolutely devoted, and she says it's only his money she wants, and as it's what we all want I suppose you can't blame her."

"I suppose not! Though I understood Miss Farrow to say that she never intended to marry."

Doris laughed.

"We all say that till we get an opportunity. I've said it myself, but I dare say if I were free—and a man I liked asked me—I might reconsider the question."

She spoke quite impartially, leaning back in her chair, her eyes half closed, but Giles had the impression that she was watching him from under her lids, and he moved restlessly.

It was the day after this conversation that he refused to join her party at the Palais de Joie.

From the other end of the 'phone Mrs. Ardron was still talking.

"You might come, Giles. If...it's only for my sake. It won't do for people to think I am always unchaperoned! Not that anyone really believes we are mother and son—"

Giles laughed.

"My dear, you will be perfectly safe, especially if your fat friend is going."

"Oh, Giles! Whom do you mean by my fat friend?"

"Marco Esen!"

He heard the little sound of annoyance she made.

"Darling, he isn't so very fat."

"Well, we won't argue about it."

"Change your mind, then, and come."

"I can't. I've got another engagement."

"But you can put it off! Everyone puts engagements off nowadays, and nobody minds! Tell them you have a previous engagement with your mother."

"I'm sorry, dear. It's impossible."

"Is it something so very important?"

"To me, yes."

"With a lady, Giles?"

"Yes."

"Tell me her name. I am beginning to think you are not such a woman hater as you pretend."

"I'll tell you afterwards."

And with that she had to be content.

Giles wondered as he hung up the receiver what his mother would have said had he told her that his engagement was to meet the other Julie Farrow whom his brother had loved.

The invitation had come about in quite a casual way.

Only the night before, Lombard had called in at the hotel where he was staying.

"Run to earth at last, then!" he said with rather a nervous grin. He had felt a little afraid of Chittenham since they parted in Switzerland.

"I've not been hiding," Giles answered.

"No, I know—but I've written to you twice from Paris and had no reply."

"I hate writing letters."

"Well, will you come along and have some dinner with me this evening? Quite a small party."

"Ladies?"

"Two—one of them Julie Farrow—the real Julie this time," he added rather maliciously.

Giles frowned.

"I don't know that I'm particularly anxious to make her acquaintance," he said.

"I thought you were. However, if I'm mistaken—"

"Oh, very well, I'll come! Where, and what time?"

Lombard mentioned a new and momentarily fashionable restaurant in Soho.

"Julie chose it herself."

"Did you tell her I was coming?"

"I said I should ask you if I could find you."

"And she made no objection?"

"None. I think she was entertained at the thought of meeting you."

There was a little silence which Chittenham broke.

"There's one point I can't get quite clear," he said. "This Julie—the famous one—isn't she a married woman?"

"She was. There was a divorce."

"I see, and she still calls herself Farrow?"

"It was her maiden name. She went back to it when the case was over."

Giles laughed shortly.

"It seems to be the fashion," he said, and he remembered that Sadie had done the same thing after he and she had agreed to go their separate ways.

"Well, I'll be there at eight," he said.

"And—Chittenham—"

"Yes?"

"What about—do you ever run across the other Julie?"

"I have met her once or twice."

Lombard looked relieved.

"I'm glad to hear that. I thought—well, you seemed so upset when we were in Lausanne—"

"What the devil are you driving at?"

"Oh, nothing, nothing! Only you cut up rough with me, if you remember, You cut up rough over that mistake I made. And it was quite pardonable on my part. You'll see for yourself tonight. They're very much alike—especially if you don't know them very well."

Scout News and Notices

SIXTH PETERBOROUGH TROOP.

The Sixth Peterborough Troop has resumed its weekly meeting. Monday, October 29th, saw a good crowd of scouts present. Four patrols are now in action, the Beavers, Foxs, Chickadees, Bobwhites, the latter being the new-comers. So far this new patrol, headed by P. L. N. Mackenzie, and with P. MacPherson as second have set the pace for the other patrols.

During the evening all of the tenderfoot work was reviewed. The latter part of the meeting was given over to scout games, including dodge ball, earth air-fire and water and other inter patrol games.

Visitors during the evening were the president, Mr. Dickin, and one of the committee men, J. E. Sullivan. The former gave a short talk to the scouts speaking on different scout items. He also told the boys of several events that were in store for the scouts. The first of which is a visit to the waterworks on Saturday afternoon. The scouts will hike out to this place at two o'clock and all scouts of the city are expected to meet at the hall on Simcoe street. Mr. Sullivan then said a few words to the boys speaking of the fine work that had been already done and urging them to keep it going strong.

The council fire was spent singing songs and by the report of the standing by the scoutmaster. The Bobwhites are in front with Foxs and Beavers following while the Chickadees are last, five points separating them from the leaders. The meeting closed with God Save the King and the scout silence.

ENTERTAINER GIVES CONCERT

Rev. George Morley Delights Audience in Bethany United Church.

ANTICIPATES HYDRO.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, November 2. — This community received a rare treat on Tuesday night, when Rev. George Morley, entertainer, of Toronto, was present at the Town Hall, and entertained his audience with his elocution, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church.

Mr. Morley, for his opening numbers, gave some of Robert Service's poems, which were well rendered. Miss Alma Blanchard, of Peterborough, sang a number of beautiful solos, accompanied by Miss Helen Patton at the piano. For over two hours, Miss Blanchard and Mr. Morley entertained with song and verse. Among the works used by Mr. Morley were some written by Henry Drummond, Mrs. Nellie McClung, and Robert Service.

During the evening Rev. Alfred Poulter, who acted as chairman, called upon Miss Helen Patton for an instrumental solo, and after receiving applause and before she could leave the platform, Miss Verna Bell Lee and Miss Patricia Poulter, bearing a large sheaf of mauve 'mums, came on the platform. Miss Lee stepped forward and in a few words expressed the pleasure of the people of the United Church in Miss Patton's recent achievement, when she carried off the gold medal at the Kiwanis Produced-in-Canada Fair held in Peterborough. Miss Lee expressed the hope on behalf of the people, that she would press onward to more and higher things in the musical world. Miss Patton was then asked to accept the sheaf of flowers as a slight reminder that the people of Bethany appreciated her work. Although she was taken by surprise, she received the flowers with a smile, and after thanking those present, left the stage amid more applause.

Movies in three dimensions, a problem on which several fortunes have been spent in recent years, is achieved in an entirely new way by an English inventor who has developed a movie screen which has for its surface 900,000 tiny glass lenses, each barely a quarter of an inch across. The screen is made by first coating the usual surface with a thick layer of white lead and then affixing the glass globules by hand to this coating. The stereoscopic effect is then obtained with ordinary film and a standard projector, for the myriad tiny lenses split up the light into hundreds of thousands of minute beams which are individually magnified on the screen so that each lens gives depth in relief and produces the illusion that the spectator is looking around the object photographed.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

There were no deer native in Australia or New Zealand, but when they were introduced from England, they multiplied very rapidly till now one of these islands is estimated to have at least 10,000 of the red deer.

A STUDY IN ANCIENT HISTORY

(By Jeanette)

"O happy days, for it was so. One hundred weary years ago!" So sings "The Nightingale of Lincoln's Inn," the old song with its reiterated refrain that tells of the sweetness of long-forgotten times and manners.

"The Ladies' Monthly Museum; or, Polite Repository of Amusement and Instruction; being an assemblage of whatever can tend to please the fancy, interest the mind, or exalt the character of the British Fair" is one of those old volumes (printed in 1815), that bring us a breath of bygone fancies. The pages are yellowed and time-worn and the boards of the covers are worn with many years and many hands, but it tells to modern generations the story of "other times and other manners." Anyone who has read "The Vicar of Wakefield" will recall in this volume the dignified, careful utterances of that worthy, in the days when conversation in polite circles centred about "Shakespeare and the musical glasses."

Maintaining throughout a personal form of address to the reader which yet has a very elegant flow of words, there is little of humour or mirth in its pages. Life to people who dwelt in the year 1815 must have been a very serious matter, if this volume is any mirror of the thought of the time. For instance, imagine a ladies' monthly magazine of the present age containing articles plentifully besprinkled with Latin quotations.

The editor, who subscribes himself simply as "A.B." speaks of the "unwearied exertions" which "have inspired him with a persuasion that the Volume now completed is not unworthy the patronage it has experienced. Opposition, neither silent nor contemptible, has been in vain exerted; the Museum has triumphed over its opponents, and progressively acquired additional repute and circulation."

Mournful Poetry.

The poetry throughout is of a most mournful tone. "To Mary in Heaven," "A Melancholy Fact" (the latter having to do with the slanderous tongues which hurled "poor lost Eliza" to an early grave) and "Reflections in the death-chamber of a revered Parent" are some of the effusions in rhyme which grace the volume.

Fashions have a place every month in colored plates which show the lady of that day in the modes of the moment. A morning dress that was evidently the latest word in style is described as a "white cambric high gown, with pelisee of fawn-colored kerseymere with lining of sky blue silk and blue epaulettes." A hat and feather correspond and gloves of light blue are worn, with boots of the same colour as the pelisse and a white swansdown muff.

One turns to "The Gossiper's" column for a little relief from the prevailing atmosphere of gloom, but the "Gossiper" too, takes life very seriously, and says: "My lucubrations, as formerly, will be directed to the manners and fashions of the day; and to whatever is calculated to 'raise the genius and mend the heart.' The Gossiper is also addicted to Latin quotations. Women of that day must have liked Horace and Virgil.

Spelling is odd in some instances, as in the case of "uncontrouled," "Thuileries," "expence," "antient," "equivalent," "smoaked" and "phrenzied."

A maddening story (because unfinished) is entitled "The Child of the Battle," and is written by "H. Finn." This is a curious affair which opens with letters from "Cohenberg to Albert," the former reproving the latter for some mysterious fault. Albert replies with dignity, then Katherine appears on the scene, and, in equally dignified phrases, conveys to her mother, Madam Rosenheim, a confession of her great love for Albert, who, it seems, does not return the tender passion, and is infatuated with a damsel of great beauty and stern incognito. This lady lands from a wrecked ship and captures Albert's heart.

Thereafter, divers characters appear, like a monk masquerading in courtier's garments, while a dreadful oath sworn over the child of the battle, which is Albert, comes in to complicate matters. We leave Albert and Katherine in the clutches of a political intrigue at the end of the volume, with "To be continued" as an irritating closing sentence. To think of trying to continue in 1928 a story that appeared in a monthly magazine in 1815 is to achieve the impossible and the fate of Katherine and Albert will forever remain unknown to present-day readers of this volume.

Grave and Dignified.

Still speaking in the grave, dignified fashion that characterizes all the weighty utterances of that day, "The Female Tourist," a French lady travelling in England during the summer months, remarks on various matters coming to her notice. The advertising of the day was crude in character, evidently. She mentions the women in coarse blue cloth dresses who surge forward to tourists on the beach at Brighton, pressing into their hands cards advertising the merits of rival bathhouses.

She speaks of the English houses of brickwork covered with black varnish that, by moonlight appears of various hues, and of "inferior" houses made of round, smooth stones called "bowlers."

Ladies rode about on donkeys in those days, "and displayed to my manner of thinking, more humility than grace," and the libraries of Brighton were crowded during the evening hours with people dressed as for a theatre. Another observation has regard to a dinner given in the fields to the poor of the town, at the expense of the housekeepers of the place.

A little sidelight on the similarity in women's methods, then as now, is afforded by the remark anent the "encouragement given to my hopes" by the Englishman who speaks of the charms of his countrywomen and then criticizes them and flatters the French lady, who has come to England with the avowed intention of meeting once again a certain gentleman of Albion who had captured her fancy at a former meeting.

Moralizing on various evils was evidently a favorite occupation of the writers of that day. A dissertation on the evils of Envy is very eloquent. "Envy in itself is so depraved a passion," says the oracular volume, "that it is seldom awakened by intrinsic merit, but the gloss of a tinseled exterior is the magnet that draws forth its malignant spirit into action."

Woman's Equality Rejected.

A gentleman who has very positive ideas with regard to females speaks of the fallacy of ideas with regard to their equality with man and says: "The visionary systems supported by Mary Wolstonecraft, and the favorers of Liberty and Equality, are justly censured; the fallacy of their arguments exposed; and the pernicious tendency of their principles explained."

The same gentleman, who would doubtless stand aghast if confronted with the woman of the present day, says: "The presence of a woman in her own family is always so salutary, that she is not justified in withdrawing her attention from home, except in some call of plain positive duty."

"The advice to Mothers is extremely good. The following is an extract: 'Compassionating the claims of those numerous young women, who found their expectation of being supported on their total inability of helping themselves, I would advise, by way of experiment, that some few mothers would show a wish of furnishing the next generation with wives, by cultivating those qualities in their daughters which will prevent them from being converted into mistresses'."

Evidently the mothers of that day were also regarded as contributing towards their daughters' undesirable qualifications.

A Little Leeway.

However, there is a little leeway allowed to youth in the mild criticism levelled at this same volume by its reviewer, who says "the dark side of things has been too much sought after; the effect produced on young minds by such a representation is not always answerable to the expectation. We must also be allowed to remark, that we consider the work sufficiently voluminous; and in parts too digressive. Subjects of a didactic, or instructive kind, particularly those addressed to youth, cannot, we conceive, be too concisely treated."

A "New Invention in Printing" speaks with much awe of an innovation which prints "no less than eleven hundred sheets in an hour," and there is an account of the adoption of gas lights in the streets (which, by the way, is also headed by a Latin quotation), and ends with a reference to a by-product of gas in "many tons of tallow, which might be used in the manufacture of soap, which would tend to lower the price of that necessary article, and enable our poor to become more cleanly, more healthy, and more happy."

There is a very careful article recounting the life and adventures of Lady Hamilton, the inamorata of Lord Nelson, in which a truly charitable tone is maintained throughout, the writer deploring the broadcasting of various matters regarding the lady and her famous admirer.

It has been said there is no humour in the volume, but there is one ponderous exception in an anecdote, as follows:

"Mrs. Macaulay having published what she called Loose Thoughts, Mr. Garrick was asked if he did not think it a strange title for a lady to choose.

"By no means," replied he, "the sooner a woman gets rid of such thoughts, the better."

Defends Fair Sex.

There is one memorable piece of literature in the way of a letter addressed to the editor and signed by "Alphonso." It must have created considerable discussion in that day, for it sets out in no uncertain terms to breathe the author's indignation toward men who persist in regarding feminine intellects as inferior to their own. "Alphonso" rushes chivalrously and wordily to the defence of the fair sex and ends with the convincing paragraph:

"Having thus endeavored briefly to rescue that lovely sex from unjust and illiberal aspersions, I shall conclude, Sir, by exclaiming how much that infatuated, or guilty, being excites my compassion, either for his ignorance, or his prejudice, who, as he mingles with society, does not perceive innumerable instances of female excellence daily unfold themselves to his observation; who is not delighted with examples of fidelity, attachment, benevolence, modesty, and religion, in the maid, the wife, the mother, the friend, and the benefactress; and who can suppose but for a moment, that the several duties and trials of those sublime and affecting relations can be respectively discharged and supported with the most exemplary constancy, and amidst all the corrupt blandishments of society, unaided by an excellent understanding, a solid judgment, or by eminent and enlarged faculties!"

Another writer, signing himself "The Father of a Family" writes with much feeling of an adventure in which he rescued a milliner's apprentice from an unwanted admirer. He says: "It appears that the box of the millinery apprentice, that badge of industry and application, is viewed by the fop and the libertine as a licence for impertinence," and goes on to recount the tale. A young maiden of hat-making proclivities had attracted his attention one evening by the beauty and dejection of her countenance and the sigh which burst from her laboring bosom. These attributes had also attracted the notice of a youth who remarked audibly on her charms and tried to force her to accompany him. With commendable agitation, the young female did nothing but speak mildly and exasperatedly to the gallant, who thereupon renewed his importunities. The timely arrival of "The Father of a Family" saved her from further annoyance. He accompanied her to her destination, where she at once fell in a swoon at his feet.

Fiction Moralizes.

The fiction articles and stories also incline strongly toward the moralizing tone. Apparently, no opportunity was lost in that day and age of placing before the youthful maiden a realization of her frailty and weakness. Perhaps that is why she insisted on swooning at every possible moment.

"Iniquity; a Tale" deals with the meeting of the writer with a young lady who occupied a park bench and attracted his notice, as in the previous instance, by her attitude of extreme dejection. As an opener to the conversaion, he spoke of the weather, and the damsel replied:

"The smiles of that bright luminary are not able to enliven a heart sinking under misfortune."

He rejoined: "That misfortune has oppressed, and adversity assailed you, I apprehended; and this apprehension induced me to address you; and as providence has blessed me with the means of alleviating your afflcitions, I beg that you will unhesitatingly disclose the sorrows which press so heavily upon your mind."

"Merciful God!" she exclaimed, clasping her hands together, and directing towards me a look in which loveliness and sensibility were combined; "yet surely my senses must have deceived me. I could not, I did not, hear perfectly right."

On his assurance of the correctness of her hearing, and on further representations of assistance, the damsel revealed the story of her life, an affair which took many pages to unfold and had to do with the misfortunes of a sad love affair by a designing swain who cared more for the lady's money than for herself.

Curiously enough, although the writer described himself as being only twenty-five years old, he was contented with returning the sentimental daughter to her mother's side, and then bidding her farewell, closing his narrative with a reference to the mental joy experienced in this kindly act.

"Practical Hints to Young Females" has a section devoted to the attention of "The Stepmother," concluding with an adjuration to women to stay at home, in the words: "What a melancholy catalogue would our newspapers exhibit, if, besides the ravages of the devouring flames, and the midnight murderers, those made upon the human mind by the habitual absence of mothers were faithfully recorded!"

Reading for young females, as recommended by a mother to her daughter, includes such volumes as Bossuet's Universal History, Tytler's Elements of General History and Goldsmith's History of England! But the lady concludes her letter to her daughter with the words:

"The only plausible objection I have heard against a lady being learned is, that it tends to make her vain, conceited, and impertinent; and to neglect those qualifications and accomplishments which are distinguishing ornaments of her sex."

INDIAN WORK IS DISCUSSED

Women's Christian Temperance Union Holds Regular Monthly Meeting.

HOSPITAL OPENED.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Wednesday afternoon with the new president, Mrs. George Patterson, in the chair. Mrs. A. I. Brown had charge of the devotional exercises, taking as her subject "Prayer."

Mrs. A. Throop, provincial secretary of Indian work, gave a comprehensive report of that important department, showing that 16 bales of clothing had been sent to the needy Indians in the Kenora district. Letters were read from the workers there, showing that, because of the decrease in trapping and hunting of the fur-bearing animals, more help was needed. In Brant county the government has opened a hospital for Indians, manned by Indian nurses, and to this work the Peterborough young women had sent a layette.

A committee consisting of Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, Mrs. G. Helson, Mrs. A. Throop and Mrs. J. Plunkett, was appointed to prepare a bale for this year.

Mrs. Moore gave a report of the scientific temperance work in the Sunday schools. During the summer she and other members of her committee had visited most of the superintendents of the Sunday schools in the city. Letters had been sent to the schools throughout the district. The results were gratifying as many schools were taking up the lessons arranged by the Northern Messenger beginning the second Sunday in November. The local Union decided to give additional prizes to those who successfully pass the examinations at the close of the lessons.

Mrs. W. McLaren sang a solo very sweetly, accompanied by Mrs. F. B. Elliott.

Mrs. George Rowe gave a concise report of the general sessions of the Provincial meeting held in Toronto early in October.

The convenors all reported great activity throughout the province in educational work along temperance lines.

Congratulates Drayton.

They congratulated Sir Henry Drayton for his serious efforts to carry out the provisions of the Liquor Control Act. They also regretted the increased amount of drunkenness, and also the number of motor accidents through the use of liquor. The meetings were characterized by their enthusiasm, inspiration and spiritual atmosphere.

A new committee, Peace and Arbitration, was formed to study the League of Nations.

Mrs. E. Wand followed with a report of the statistics, and asked all members to support their provincial officers.

Members were present from Lakefield.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

PILOT IS KILLED.

Two Airplanes Collide in Mid-air While Engaged in Maneuvers.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A. J. Archibald, Marine corps pilot, was killed yesterday when the plane which he was flying collided with another machine over Harpersville, five miles north of Newport News. Captain Delford, army airman, who was in the other plane, escaped injury when his ship crashed.

Captain Archibald jumped after the collision but his parachute is said to have failed to open properly.

The two airmen were engaged in manoeuvers at a height of between 2,000 and 3,000 feet when they came together.

FAMOUS DIPLOMATIST.

The famous Chinese diplomat, Dr. Chao Chu Wu, who is visiting Canada, is the son of a father equally celebrated under another regime. Dr. Wu's father was the late Wu Ting Fang, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary at Washington for the Chinese monarchy. Mr. Wu was also accredited to the Cuban government and on the occasion of his return from Cuba, he presented Cesar Baranco, now Cuban consul at Toronto with his autographed photograph. To receive Wu Ting Fang's photograph was signal honor. There are supposed to be only three originals of him in the world.

TO SUCCEED BIRKENHEAD.

Viscount Peel, chairman of the Empire Parliamentary delegation that toured Canada recently, is to succeed Lord Birkenhead as Secretary of State for India in the British Government. Lord Peel's post of Commissioner of Works will be taken by the Marquis of Londonderry. This is a "favored" caricature of the viscount.

CHURCH CONCERT GREAT SUCCESS

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 2.—An excellent concert was held on Monday evening by Knox United Church in connection with their anniversary. Rev. T. M. Wesley acted as chairman and gave a brief but hearty address of welcome to the audience. The first item on the program was an anthem by the choir, led by Mrs. Bell, with Miss Etta Garbutt at the piano. Little Evelyn Grant played a piano solo, showing a remarkable mastery of the instrument for so young a child. Mrs. Bell sang, "When the Heart is Young" and in response to an encore, sang that stirring war song of "Auld Scotia," the "Hundred Pipers." The Scottish selections drew specially good applause. Mrs. Greenslade was Mrs. Bell's accompanist. Mr. Huston, of Lakehurst, gave a reading, "Mince Pies" a humorous selection. He responded to an encore with "Laska". Robert Hendry, "Peterborough's Harry Lauder", and an old favorite in Lakefield, sang "When Mackay Comes Home". He was obliged to give an encore and responded with "I Love Ma Jean." Henry Batten is another favorite with Lakefield audiences, and his solo was well received. He responded with "Boy of Mine." By special request, Mr. and Mrs. Greenslade sang "Under the Greenwood Tree" and in response to a recall sang, "In the Starlight", Mrs. Greenslade playing the accompaniment. Again Mr. Hendry received great applause for his songs, "Your Ain Wee Hoose" and "Oh Bella McGraw." "Down Boxhall Way Upon a Summer Morning" was sung by Mrs. Bell, who gave as an encore a pretty number in lighter vein which dealt with the romance of a Japanese maid on a fan with a Chinese gentleman on a packet of tea. Mr. Huston again gave a remarkably fine selection entitled "The First Settlers." He is gifted with a sympathetic voice which added to his splendid memory and dramatic talent, makes him an acquisition to any program. Mr. Batten sang another selection "Danny Boy" and Mr. Hendry generously gave another number, "She's the Lass For Me" and in response to an encore recited a poem by Harry Lauder, "Granny's Laddie." Before calling for "Oh Canada", the closing number on the program, Mr. Wesley thanked those who assisted in the program, on behalf of the session, managers and congregation of the church. Mrs. Greenslade played the accompaniments for Mrs. Belle and Mr. Hendry and Mrs. Taylor for Mr. Batten.

Anniversary Services.

The anniversary services of the Regent Street United Church will be held on Sunday, November 11, and will be conducted by Rev. William McDonald of Knox United Church, Peterborough. It is nearly twenty years since the new church was opened, replacing the frame structure which was one of the landmarks of old Lakefield.

Euchre.

At the regular weekly euchre of the A.Y.P.A. held on Thursday evening last, the prizes were won by Miss Dell Watson and Frank Pringle, the consolation awards being won by Mrs. Louis Sabatino and Wilfred Dyre.

Egypt is nearly twice as large as the state of Texas, but only a small part of its immense area is settled and cultivated.

(Please 'phone items to 1600 or 1601)

A delightful and well-attended reception was held at 317 Elias Avenue yesterday afternoon from four to six o'clock, when Mrs. W. F. Butcher received for the first time since her arrival in the city. The charming rooms were bright with softly-shaded lights and chrysanthemums in the russet and bronze of autumn tints. The tea table was done with a lovely cloth of Alencon lace, centred by a bowl of Spanish glass in amber, holding big yellow 'mums. Green candles were in low candlesticks of amber glass. Mrs. Butcher received her guests in a French gown of cherry red chiffon, with a corstage bouquet of Ophelia roses. The guests were ushered into the tea-room by Miss Mary Mara of London, Ontario, who wore a gown of brown georgette trimmed with brown lace, and a small brown hat. Tea was poured by Mrs. James Brandon of Foxbar Road, Toronto, wearing a black and silver Parisian dress with little hat of black and silver. Mrs. Edgar Price of Toronto, in brown georgette trimmed with cream lace, and brown hat, cut the ices. Tea-room assistants were Mrs. Neil Oakley, Mrs. Arthur E. Cambridge of Toronto, and Miss Helen Ross. Small Isabel Butcher was a dainty little door attendant, in a frilly frock of yellow crepe de chine.

CITRON PRESERVES

Someone was asking for Citron Preserve the following is one we like very much as it is not as rich as the old-fashioned way of doing. Cup up citron into small squares and put in kettle and cover with water in which 2 tablespoons of salt has been dissolved. Let stand over night and in the morning drain off water and rinse fruit. Put on fresh water and boil until nearly cooked, then add ¾ pound of sugar to every pound of citron. Weigh the citron before putting in salt water. Flavor with preserved ginger and lemon as desired. Hope this will appeal to someone as it is real good.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

GRAPE NUT PUDDING

(Contributed by E.R., Peterborough.)

1 pint sweet milk
2 eggs
¾ cup grape nut
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Beat the eggs, mix all together and bake slowly at first until set.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE

(Contributed by "Margareta," Birdsall.)

1 cup white sugar
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup cream (not pure)
2 tablespoons cocoa

Boil the sugar and cream in a well-greased saucepan for two minutes. Then boil eight minutes, stirring constantly. When cooked flavor with vanilla and add nuts and raisins.

ORANGE CAKE

(Contributed by M. W., Lakefield.)

1 orange
1 cup raisins
1 egg
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon baking powder

Put whole orange and raisins through the meat chopper. If orange is large it is almost too strong and it would be better to remove part of rind before chopping.

TWEED ENSEMBLE

The usual lifeboats on ocean liners may, some day, be replaced by mattresses of kapok, a floating floss resembling cotton, obtained from tropical trees.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

No hat is smart this season that is not soft and pliant and of the utmost lightness of weight. These new hats keep their shape not by means of wires and canvas or stiffness of the hat fabric but by reason of precise shaping and clever manipulation. Essentially their form consists in the form of the head which they cover. The rest consists of draping of the material, manipulation of the brim, the extension of ear pieces, the curve of the line across the forehead, incrustations and appliques of contrasting fabric, soft overdrapery of velvet or silk or a band and bow of ribbon.

And no hat is smart this season that does not have about it some sort of downward draping or drooping toward the back. I have before me sketches of some dozen of the season's smartest hats—representing the creative genius of Agnes, Jane Blanchot, Camille Rober Rose Descat, Marie Alphonsine, etc., and about each and every one there is some instance of this downward line.

Berets are as good as ever and many of these are pulled down toward the back at one side. This characteristic cloches, pokes, skull caps, berets and toques all have in common. For sports wear the soft felt shape with brim drooping at the sides and very short at the back is still in favor, but the beret made of soft felt, so soft as to seem more like a cloth than felt, is rapidly coming forward as a rival for sports wear.

To accent the downward droop at the back the beret may have a band of ribbon round the crown with a bow with ends left at the back behind one ear. If perchance you have any sort of soft beret in your possession I would suggest bringing it up to date by a ribbon band and bow of this sort. Then when you put it on let it droop a little backward and arrange the front so that it shows just a little forehead. But remember that this patch of forehead to be really smart should not be very wide.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

Just a line to let you know that I am also one of your many readers. I think the Women's Page is wonderful. The Whatnot is just fine and I certainly enjoy it.

Please send the instructions which I have asked, also if you have on hand the instructions for a farm wedding.

Thanking you in advance, I am,
Yours very truly,
Betty."

I'm glad to have you as one of the neighbors, "Betty," and I hope you write soon again.

'Dear Marion:

I must tell The Examiner what a wonderful page you have created. I have for twenty-five years read the Women's Pages in the great big city dailies. I know and have read all the big papers from New York and Chicago and many from the Old Land, and I must say your page beats them all, it is wonderful.

Elizabeth."

Thanks a lot, "Elizabeth." I'm glad to have you as a neighbor. Probably those other papers you read did not have the same loyal neighborly support that I find in Peterborough.

"Dear Marion:

Thanks for the patterns which you sent me. I enjoy your page in The Examiner very much; and am glad to contribute one of my favorite recipes, Grape Conserve.

Thanks for the recipe, "Mary Ellen," which I will use this week, and for your appreciation. I'm going to try some of your grape conserve.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I HAD a most unusual request to-day, and to help me out I am passing it on to the neighbors. The Examiner is, I am told, preparing a wonderful Armistice number this year, with a rotogravure section and several pages of contributions from ministers and others.

I am asked to prepare for this number two Women's Pages with a decided Armistice anniversary flavor!

Now, that's quite a task for one with as little experience as I, and it just occurred to me that the neighbors might write letters on some such subject as "What Armistice Day Means to Me," or "How I Heard About the Armistice." Of course, the letters might be on any other Armistice subject you desired.

• • •

I will give the usual prizes of stationery and correspondence cards for the best Armistice letters received.

One of the difficulties (editors are so unfeeling!) is that time is short. I have been asked (and that means I MUST do it!) to get all the Armistice material in by Wednesday at the very latest. I simply CAN'T do it alone—so DO rally around and send me in a real big bunch of letters for the special page, over the week-end.

I believe there are to be more than forty pages in the special number, including sixteen pages of pictures of local men who served overseas. I don't know whether the editor wants this told or not, but it's so mean of him to give me this last-minute big job that I'm telling anyhow.

• • •

One of the sad things about a party such as we had on Hallowe'en night is the number of little children who have not the wherewithal to "dress up," and yet one is cheered by their hearty enjoyment of the little they have.

Surely, in many cases, a little ingenuity on the part of some elder in the family would result in more fun for the youngsters! In every house there are old clothes that can be cut up and made over; there are corks to supply black faces; strips of goods from which masks may be made; rouge for pale cheeks—it's SO easy to "dress up" a child!

Probably the trouble is that people don't look ahead, and then when the exciting night is right on top of them they can't think. Why not plan well ahead what can be done for each child?

Just as outstanding as these cases, but more to be expected in a city like Peterborough, were the large numbers of really cleverly dressed children. There was real artistry in some of the costumes, and originality, which is more rare.

Hallowe'en is children's time, and even if we must have an organization of women to look after the costuming of those who would be otherwise neglected, there shouldn't be a child in Peterborough next Hallowe'en without a make-up of some kind.

I nearly cried, on Wednesday night, when I saw two little girls on George street with pieces of silver paper pinned on their ordinary dresses—their only masquerade costume. If some of us had only thought, what a wonderful time we could have given them in some of our old dresses!

Now, don't forget the letters about Armistice or Armistice Day. I'll be on pins and needles awaiting them.

• • •

Really, you know, it just occurs to me that this is another recognition of woman's place in the world, when the editor condescends to ask us for the special pages. None suffered more through the war than women; the agony of waiting is more terrible than whatever pains DOING may entail.

• • •

Please hurry, because if ever I sent out a real SOS, this is it.

YOUR HEALTH

A STRONG SPINE

The back bone is considered by many anatomists as the most important structural part of the body. To the thirty-three bones of the spinal column are attached the skull, the ribs, the pelvis and, indirectly, the bones of the legs and arms. The spine also forms a safe bony canal for the protection of the delicate spinal cord, and between each two vertebrae of the spine there emanate two sets of spinal nerves.

Because of the normal curves of the spine, and because of the cartilage separating each section of the bone, the jars of walking, running and jumping are largely absorbed and prevented from reaching the brain.

From this brief description you will understand what an important relation a strongspine has to health. The powerful muscles attached to the spine must be strong, elastic and evenly balanced, one side with the other.

The old expression, "plenty of backbone" implied in a crude way the value of a strong spinal column. People with strong spines and necks are usually independent in spirit, self-reliant and courageous. Any spinal irritation produces a disastrous nervous drainage which may lead to serious disorders

The only method of strengthening the spine is through using bending and limbering exercises. The spinal column not only contains nerves and the spinal cord, but small arteries and veins. A stiff spine means that the blood circulation of the spinal cord is impeded.

It is a well known fact among diagnosticians that an irritation of an internal organ, such as the stomach or liver, is also indicated by an irritation at the spinal column. Many cases of backache are only reflex pains from internal congestion, and there is no doubt that this process is frequently reversed—that pressure upon the nerves and blood vessels coming out of the spinal column will produce disease tendencies in the organs supplied by those nerves. This fact has had much to do with the success of various schools of manipulation whose principal method of treatment consists of loosening and manipulating the bony and ligamentous structure of the spinal column.

Spinal irritation can easily be detected by pressing and searching for sensitive spots along the spine. Sometimes these pains are very severe, and in the past many peculiar and often cruel forms of treatment were evolved, such as blistering, cupping the skin, burning with a red hot iron, etc. How much more sensible to relieve the tightened muscles and ligaments by the application of comforting heat, and straighten the vertebrae and ribs that are slightly out of position by manipulation, or strengthen the spine by well planned exercise.

Most cases of pronounced curvature of the spine are due to improper feeding which deprived the child in its growing years of bone forming elements. Usually the use of braces and other mechanical supports for curvature of the spine is not advisable because this condition can be handled more satisfactorily from the standpoint of permanent results with the methods which I have just outlined

I have a special article describing exercises for strengthening the spine which I will be very glad to send if you will write to me care of this paper, and enclose a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Poor Hearing.

Question: Teddy O. writes: "From lying on my right side my ear seems to close up, and again it will seem to open. The hearing is not good in that ear. Would sleeping on that ear cause that, and what could I do?"

Answer: It may be that sleeping on your right side tends to close the eustachian tube because it can more easily fill with catarrhal mucus in that position. Living on a diet comparatively free from starches, sugars and fats should bring about a change in the overproduction of catarrhal mucus and relieve you of your trouble.

Are These Vegetables Starchy?

Question: Reader writes: "I would appreciate your opinion regarding the following vegetables, especially as to their starchy content: varieties of summer squash, egg plant and French artichoke."

Answer: The amount of starch contained in these vegetables is so small that they may be classed as non-starchy vegetables. This is not true of the Jerusalem or root artichoke, however.

Pimples.

Question: Jack C. writes: "I have pimples on my face. Can you do anything for me? I drink about fifteen glasses of milk a day, and take epsom salts once a week. Besides this, I scrub my face every night with soap."

Answer: The pimples are caused more by intestinal uncleanliness than from not washing the face often enough. The salts will help temporarily but you must overcome intestinal putrefaction and constipation. The excessive fat from so much milk will only make your trouble worse. Write again, giving me your full name and address on a large, stamped envelope, and I will send you a special treatise on the dietetic cure of acne.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

This is read as rather a threatening day in planetary direction, for, according to astrology adverse aspects are strong.

There is a promising sign for those who travel and it should be a fairly auspicious time to begin a sea voyage.

The stars seem to promise clarity of judgment and wise decisions while this sway continues. Political questions should be less puzzling than under other directions of the stars.

Oil again is subject to a lucky sway which should bring profit to operators and holders of stock while it benefits consumers.

Some sort of distressing report may be expected in the newspaper at this time when the press will command its greatest audiences.

Industrial problems, which will be widely discussed by both employers and employees are subject to a sign indicating the most satisfactory solutions.

Recurrence of general interest in food and diet will be evident in the coming winter when physicians will become famous as dietitians.

Neptune at this time may cause confusion of thought and dissensions among residents of southern states.

Crimes of extraordinary horror will not abate until long after the end of this year, astrologers foretell.

Women should prepare for a winter in which many housekeeping difficulties must be met, for food and fuel will be costly, if the stars are rightly read.

Clothing for cold weather should be sensible rather than showy, the seers warn.

Persons whose birthdate it is should develop their business and professional interest in the coming year when women should be most careful to be experts in any calling they choose.

Children born on this day probably will be inclined to follow a studious vocation. These subjects of Scorpio are usually fond of the good things of the earth and exercise good taste in dress.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

Why We Do What We Do.

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

"No?" is your first reaction to the announcement that your favorite team has lost. You do this as a stall. The news is undesirable. You had hoped and expected the opposite result and therefore are not prepared. You need time to gather your thoughts and to get used to defeat. Sometimes it is not an easy matter to make these adjustments. It may involve the loss of money or of pride or of prestige. In any case you don't want to believe it.

The next thing you do is to question the source of the information in the hope that it is a mistake. This is why we invariably use the expression "Who told you?" when we hear something that is undesirable or incredible. In either case the statement does not fit in with our ideas, our wishes and our prejudices.

The statement "Who told you?" also questions the authority of the person making the pronouncement. Without meaning to be insulting we are virtually calling our informant a liar, or at least we question his knowledge of the matter if not his veracity. Thus while we all use the expression "Who told you?" we dislike to have it used against us. A professor who was being constantly challenged by the statement "What is your authority for that?" finally retorted in his exasperation, "D—— it. I'm authority myself." That is just about how we all feel when we hear the familiar expression "Who told you?" Nevertheless we keep on asking others the same question when what they say is not to our liking or is too strange or too good to be true.

In addition to the motive of questioning the authority and stalling for time to adjust ourselves to the new condition we ask for the source of information in order to get the gruesome details. It is a bid to continue the discussion, to get more light. It is evidence of deep concern.

When any one springs that "Who told you?" you may be sure he is very much interested in what you have said. Perhaps this will reward you in part for the resentment you feel in being called upon to verify your statement.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson, write him care of this paper, send stamped envelope for reply. (Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

LABOR CONDITIONS MOST FAVORABLE

Fifty-two Applicants Have Their Names in at the Employment Bureau.

Labour conditions are very good in the city at the present time. This conclusion is drawn by the comparatively few number of applications for jobs at the local Employment Bureau by men out of work. There are only 52 applicants on the books at the present time and there are a number of jobs vacant for men who can do farm work or work in the bush.

The present conditions are much better at the present time than they were a year ago now.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUNTY'S BOOST

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

"Do you know what I'm going to do?" asked Baby Bunty one afternoon when she and Tingle and Tangle, having come home from school, were playing in Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. "Do you know what I am going to do?"

"You are going to ask Nurse Jane for a piece of cranberry pie," was what Tingle guessed.

"Maybe you are going to play tag," said Tangle.

"No," said Baby Bunty, looking at the other two little rabbit girls who were almost like sisters to her. "I'm not going to do either of those things. I am going up the chimbley."

"Up the chimbley!" cried Tingle and Tangle. They meant chimney, of course and so did Baby Bunty. But it was rather a hard word for them to say.

"Yes," said Bunty again, "I am going up the chimbley," and she pointed to the big chimney of the fireplace in the room where Uncle Wiggily sat to read the Bedtime Story in the paper each evening. There was no fire, now, on the hearth.

"Why are you going up the chimbley?" asked Tingle.

"And how are you going to get up it?" asked Tangle.

"I am going up," said Bunty, "to see if it's all right for Santa Claus to come down. Next month is Christmas, you know, and Santa Claus will be coming down our chimbley. But if it's all stopped up he can't climb down."

"That's so," said Tingle.

"But how are you going to get up our chimbley, Bunty?" asked Tangle.

"I think I can climb up if you will give me a boost," said Bunty, by which she meant she wanted Tingle and Tangle to give her a little push, or shove, up the chimney.

"Oh we'll do that," said the other little rabbit girls. "But you'll get all black from the soot in the chimbley, Bunty."

"I have old clothes on," said Bunty. "Now come on and give me a boost up the chimbley."

She crawled into the fireplace, which was a large one, and, standing on the andirons upon which the logs of wood rest when they blaze so merrily, Bunty thrust her head and front paws up the black opening of the chimney.

"Is it stopped up?" asked Tingle.

"I can't see yet," Bunty answered. "I can see a little bit of the sky out the top of the chimbley, but I better crawl up it a ways to make sure it is clear. Give me a boost!"

So Tingle and Tangle gave Bunty a boost, or shove, up the chimney and then, climbing to the rough bricks, the little rabbit girl began to climb by herself. And when she had disappeared from sight Tingle and Tangle heard their brothers Buster and Custer shouting outside the bungalow. Wanting to know what it was all about, Tingle and Tangle ran away after having boosted Bunty up the chimney.

Up and up crawled Bunty, finding the chimney quite open ready for Santa Claus to climb down. And then, finding it so snug in the little house of bricks, Bunty thought she would go to sleep.

Not long after this Uncle Wiggily came home from having been out after adventures and feeling cold, the rabbit gentleman said:

"I will build a fire on the hearth and warm my toes."

So, knowing nothing of Bunty having been boosted up the chimney, Uncle Wiggily laid some logs on the andirons and set them blazing. At first there was only a little fire, but there was some smoke which floated up the chimney. It tickled Bunty's nose and made her sneeze and then she screamed. She smelled smoke.

"Oh, Tingle! Oh, Tangle!" she cried. "Don't make a fire when I'm up the chimbley. Stop it!"

"Bless my pink nose!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Bunty is up the chimney. Goodness me! And I've made a fire!" Quickly he kicked aside the logs which were just beginning to burn and soon the fire was out. "Come down out of the chimney, Bunty!" called Uncle Wiggily.

Bunty tried to slide down, but, dear me! She was stuck! Yes, as true as I am telling you that little rabbit girl was stuck up inside the chimney where she had been boosted to see that all was clear for Santa Claus.

"Oh, Unkie Wig!" cried Bunty. "How am I ever going to get out?"

$20 TO KILL CAT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—It cost John Murphy $20 to kill a cat. Agen Price of the Anticruelty Society told Magistrate Cozens that Murphy threw the cat against the wall of a church with the remark "it won't annoy me again."

LYRICS OF LIFE

HIC JACET

I'll leave the old tree where it fell
And travel farther for the wood
To feed my fire. I know full well
How here a gray old monarch stood
And watched above his realm of green,
A white-limbed birchtree for his queen,
A thousand wild things at his feet
He sheltered from the cold and heat.

Yes, here he lived, here let him lie,
And let him here to earth return,
And up the valley I shall hie
And find me other wood to burn.
I shall find plenty in the vale,
Young trees that were the first to fail.
Only a few are ever king,
And they deserve some better thing.

Aye, here he fell, here let him stay
Among the things he thought so fair.
Around his head the vines shall cling
And tangle blossoms in his hair.
Here once a king once wore his crown:
Here now a king has laid him down;
Here let a king to earth return—
I can find other wood to burn.

COURT PREVENTS SON'S TESTIMONY

By NEA Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 2.—A 12-year-old boy was saved from giving testimony against his own mother by Judge William H. Smather in Domestic Relations Court here recently.

Counsel for Herman Meyers tried to substantiate a charge of infidelity against Mrs. Myers by placing the boy on the stand. But the court ruled otherwise.

"I will not allow this boy to give testimony that may harm his mother. The moral and human elements are stronger than legal right," said Judge Smathers.

Attempts to revive triangular-shaped stamps in South Africa have failed The stamps were not perforated and had to be cut with scissors.

OLD PEOPLE

those who listened. There she stood, a brave little figure, holding the beautiful chrysanthemum that her host had presented to her, and with the several roses fastened to her bonnet—everyone wondered at the glory of old age.

During the evening, photographers from the Roy Studio took a flashlight photo of the gathering while the Temple band quartette generously contributed several cleverly rendered numbers.

Mayor Denne

Ensign Green, of the local Army Temple, proved a jolly and entirely capable master of ceremonies, and his introduction of Mayor Roland Denne was a happy one. Mayor Denne expressed his pleasure at being present and extended his greetings to the old folks. "It is to you old people that we of the younger generations owe so much" he declared, "for you have been the makers of Canada. Perhaps you are aware that we are planning an Old Boys' and Old Girls' reunion for next year, and if I have ever had any doubt as to the desirability of such, it is gone now. I will do my best to bring home the boys and girls, and we want you to be the reception committee" concluded Mayor Denne.

Mrs. Denne

Ensign Green, not satisfied with having the chief magistrate speak, unexpectedly called upon Mrs. Denne. Taken momentarily by surprise, Mrs. Denne proved herself quite equal to the occasion, expressing her pleasure at this, her first visit to such a gathering in the Army Temple and hoping that it would not be her last.

George A. Gillespie

Referred to by Ensign Green as the man whose firm has supplied the ice cream, George A. Gillespie promptly came back, during his brief address, with the declaration that "its a poor doctor that won't take his own medicine." He too, was grateful for the invitation to be present and from a summary made earlier, quoted the statistics that appear above. "If you could sum up all the good works that have been done during those years, by you, for the happiness of the world, it would be a glorious picture indeed. You are the people who have built up Canada, just as those men whose pictures may be seen hanging in the Parliament buildings at Toronto," he concluded.

Perseverance Is Keynote

Alderman Walter Stocker was the next speaker. He spoke in glowing terms of the work of the Salvation army of which perseverance seems always to have been the keynote. Alderman Stocker expressed his pleasure at being present and referred optimistically to the Old Boys' and Girls' reunion planned for 1929.

Brigadier Fraser

Returning to the field of his labors of thirtp-three years ago when the Salvation army's Peterborough quarters were situated in the old church on Aylmer street, until recently used by the Gillespie Garage and now torn down, Brigadier Fraser, of Toronto noted great changes. "I have been fifty years a salvationist and in all those years I have never seen the like of this gathering. It is a credit to the City of Peterborough," he declared. He went on to refer to some of the good work done by the Army in saving the couls of condemnel men, and to recall happy relations with the Peterborough corps.

Other Speakers

During the evening, there were others who spoke briefly, to the credit of the army and all that it stood for, among them being Mrs. Colonel Jacobs, Mrs. Fraser and Mr. Poulter. There was a vocal duet that was unique in that Mr. Davey, aged 86 years sang beside his daughter, so many years his junior; a recitation by andsman Grieves Sr., and attention called to the fact that there was one man present who had been born on the very site of the army temple. G. Kingdon, George street, who is now eighty-six years of age, was that person.

Truly, it was a unique but most successful event in the lives of those present, and toward the man from Montreal there was a distinct feeling of gratitude. Across the east end of the dining hall, he had placed a large banner:

"Here the Rich and the Poor meet together; The Young and old greet each other."

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

Absolutely proves that stropping is essential to a perfect shave

THE new improved Valet AutoStrop Razor was introduced last July. It created a sensation. Small wonder, since it proved a vital fundamental of successful shaving.

Its automatic self-stropping feature demonstrated that all barbers are right—have been for 2,000 years. Because they always strop their razors before they start a shave.

The reason for this is that after the first shave the cutting edge of the finest blade that can be made is a row of minute needle points until it is properly stropped. This smooths out and re-aligns these tiny jagged hooks.

Not only the razor itself but the blades have been materially bettered. A new type guard enables you to use the full shaving edge of these keener blades. You insert or remove them instantly by pressing a button. Blades are locked in a firm, non-flexible grip that eliminates vibration and pull. No need to remove the blade to strop and clean it.

Try the new Valet AutoStrop Razor. Give it a fair test. You'll soon be fast friends with it.

You'll enjoy the most perfect and fastest shaves you ever knew. And you'll hold up your hand and say "Never Again!" to the use of an unstropped blade.

Gold Plated ELDORADO Set complete with Strop and Blades $1.00. De Luxe Models $5.00 to $25.00.

MINISTER DOUBTS CONVICTION WISDOM

Prison For Youths in Minor Offences Opposed By Attorney General Price.

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—When Attorney-General William H. Price told a Milton audience last week that young boys and girls should not be convicted on minor first offences, but should be taken home and given friendly but firm advice regarding their wrongdoing, he meant exactly what he said.

Attorney-General Price says he is a staunch believer that the youth of Ontario is the biggest asset of which this Province can boast. He is determined to go the limit to protect and encourage the growth of that asset. It is a great thing, he admits, to take a boy from within prison walls and rehabilitate him, but it is far greater a thing, he contends, to halt a youth on the prison steps, before he ever gets inside, about-turn him, and march him off with a chance to make good, free from the stigma that jail environment fastens to a person, and which in later years proves so difficult to live down.

In other words, Colonel Price doubts the wisdom of registering convictions against the youth of the country for first offences of the average small type.

"I have given two years of thought to this question," he told The Globe yesterday, "and I am deadly serious about it. I am prepared to make a fight for what I believe is right against any and all opposition.

"The gesture which the State makes to a boy on his first offence should be one of kindliness rather than a gesture of mailed fist and the clanking of prison doors, even before he is convicted.

"Stop these boys and girls! Stop them on the threshold of prison. They will prove greater assets for the future life of the country if stopped that way than if we convicted them and then suspended sentence, as it often done."

LABRADOR TO BE OFFERED FOR SALE

Canada and United States Syndicate To Get Opportunity To Purchase.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press Cable).—Sale of Labrador either to Canada or to an American syndicate will, in the opinion of Sir William Coake, leader of the Fishermen's Protective Union, and an ally of Sir Richard Squires, be among the results of Sir Richard's victory over the Alderdice Government in Monday's election.

In reply to a request by the Canadian Press for his opinion on the outcome of this election, Sir William sent the following reply from Port Union:

"The result of the election of the Liberal Government will be, in my opinion, a vigorous fishery policy; the sale of Labrador either to an American syndicate or Canada; a policy to encourage agriculture and road building, and the establishment of new industries."

Sir Richard Squires has not yet returned to St. John's, nor made any statement on the result.

Hon. Mr. Alderdice yesterday said the people of Newfoundland had had their choice of representatives, and he trusted they would be satisfied with the election's outcome.

TORONTO, November 1 (Canadian Press). — Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King will be tendered a public reception when he arrives this month to open the Royal Winter Fair, Mayor McBride announced.

ZEPPELIN HAD NARROW ESCAPE DURING STORM

Disaster Only Averted By Throttling Motors, Says Eckner.

DANGER OF BURSTING.

Must Have Stronger and Faster Ships For Regular Passenger Service.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Nov. 2 (Associated Press).—The Graf Zeppelin rested last night in its home hangar for the first time in many days, while its master, Dr. Hugo Eckener, planned mightier and faster lighter-than-air craft for the day when his dream of trans-Atlantic dirigible passenger air service will have become a reality.

"This ship is finished for me as far as general regular passenger traffic is concerned," Dr. Eckener said last night.

"We must have faster and stronger airships if we want to carry a regular passenger service.

"We have shown that the ship and motors are proof against any weather; but we must now set about building a constructionally stronger airship," he declared.

Dr. Eckener, who consented to discuss his trip only after he had rested through most of the day, said that had the weather been better on the return trip he might have beaten his own good time of just a few minutes less than three days by as much as 15 hours.

"Never in my life did I have such bad luck as on this trip," the constructor-pilot averred. "Going I got into the worst weather imaginable, and on the return trip from Lakehurst we found such a string of unusual wind, weather and other difficulties as to seem almost incredible."

At the banquet last night he pointed out that in one gale during the trip he avoided disaster only by throttling motors to a minimum. Continued high speed, he said, would have burst his airship asunder.

"All our energy and ability must be concentrated now on elaborating plans of the present Zeppelin to provide a more endurable, powerful dirigible to insure really reliable trans-Atlantic air service," he said.

Passengers Enthusiastic.

Passengers on the dirigible were unanimously enthusiastic over their voyage. The only woman aboard, Mrs. Clara Adams of Tannerville, Pa., asked to rest with the announcement she was "exhausted," but the men, Hans Nolde of Reading, Pa.; Donald Castro of Columbus, Ohio; Paul Marko of Brooklyn, and Joseph Jessel of New York, said they had had the time of their lives.

"We were so excited Wednesday night we stayed up and played cards as we travelled across France," one of them said.

Among the stories of life aboard the Zeppelin which are current here, is that of the amusement some felt at the vexation of one American passenger who tried to get a radio transaction through to Wall Street, but was unable to get his message delivered because it was after closing hour on the Stock Exchange.

All the passengers mentioned the severe cold which no amount of furs and woollen clothing seemed to counteract. The only comfort, it was said, was in hot coffee and the hot water in the washroom. There was only restricted space for exercise by which to keep warm.

LABOR GAINS AT COUNCIL POLLS

Conservatives Suffer Heavily In British Council Elections.

PARTIAL RETURNS.

LONDON, England, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press Cable).—Labor leaders are elated over gains made in the municipal elections yesterday in the cities and towns throughout England. Incomplete returns indicate that Labor candidates have made a net gain of 101 seats on municipal councils outside of London, while their principal opponents registered a loss of 71 and Independents a loss of 30

Returns from London were slow and the results in many of the boroughs will not be known until to-day, although counting of votes was still proceeding at a very late hour. What changes have been shown in London are in favor of the Laborites. The Municipal Reformers and the Socialists suffered losses.

Party.	Gains.	Losses.
Reformers	1	3
Labor	34	1
Progressives	6	4
Independents	1	0

Many Women Elected

A feature of the elections in London was the candidature of 450 women as compared with 343 who stood for office in 1925. The 1925 elections resulted in the return of 140 of the women candidates. While returns from yesterday's elections are far from complete, it is known that a number of the women headed the polls in their districts. Seven women have been elected to the municipal council of the Borough of Poplar. The 21-year-old daughter of the Mayor of Fulham, was elected.

Unemployed men ran for office in a number of the boroughs and this type of candidate fared worst at Southwark and Shoreditch. Three Communist candidates at Depworth were badly beaten. The Mayor of Bermondsey was defeated in his own division.

While the result in Twickenham is hailed as Labor's outstanding success in that the party obtained representation on the Twickenham Council for the first time, the party candidates scored an even greater success at Liverpool. At that city Labor gained eleven seats, six of which were taken from candidates of the Catholic party. Other substantial Labor victories were won in Stoke-on-Trent, where Labor won seven seats from Independents, and in Derby, where a gain of five was registered.

SAFETY FOR DEPOSITORS

To cities seeking a solution of the traffic problem, Cleveland offers this photograph, as to how she does it with safety zones. They are built of heavy iron stanchions embedded in concrete and protected by red amber signal lights which burn throughout the day. Autos are not permitted to drive between the zone and the car tracks.

P.C.I. Seniors To Play Cobourg Here Saturday

GROUP LEADERS WILL BATTLE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP TO-MORROW

Petes Will Go Into Play-offs If They Win and Oshawa Lose.

LINDSAY AT MOTOR CITY.

Play-off To Decide Group Winner if Two Leaders Are Victorious.

The Rugby schedule of the Central Ontario group of the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. is drawing to a close, and Oshawa and Peterborough Collegiates are still tied coming down the home stretch. If the Oshawa team drop their game with Lindsay C. I. to-morrow and the Petes win their game with Cobourg C. I. at James Stevenson Park to-morrow afternoon, P.C.I. are champions and will continue into the play-offs, but on the other hand if P.C.I. lose and Oshawa win the Petes are out of it. If both Oshawa and Peterborough win to-morrow there will be a play-off to decide the group winner.

This game here to-morrow afternoon is very important and Coach Brown has strengthened his team by adding some of the more experienced players from the Intermediates. He believes this Cobourg team is a hard fighting outfit and their crashing plunges may prove hard to stop to-morrow. The P.C.I. is a light, fast team but they will be playing against a brawny lot of boys and the game will be closely contested from the first whistle. The locals have been having some stiff workouts this week and Coach Browne has been stressing line work because it takes real effort to make a hole in that solid Cobourg front rank.

Hard Line Plunger.

This "Bernie" Hodgett on the Cobourg half line is a hard line plunger and a fine open field runner, somewhat after the "Ollie" Bookhout style, and if he ever breaks away it takes two or three tackles to bring him down.

The P.C.I. team will be chosen from the following players: Quarter, Gemmel; halves, Hewitt, Cuthbertson, Magee; flying wings, Green, Dunkerly and Young; snap, Preston; inside wings, Wiman, Hall, Doukas and Dearborn; middles, Johnson, Armstrong and Clayton; outsides, Glover, Westbrook, Reynolds, Wagar and Ward.

Most Valuable Player.

Mickey Cochrane, sturdy and brilliant backstop of the Philadelphia Athletics, who was declared the "most valuable player" in the American League by a committee of experts. Former winners, including Ruth, Gehrig, and others, were not eligible.

SWIMMING MEET HELD AT Y.W.C.A.

Eight Girls Take in Feature Event, Eighty Foot Swim.

Swimmers and audience were well represented at the Y.W.C.A. swimming meet last evening. Special feature of the evening was an eighty foot swim under water accomplished by Viola Harvey, Helen Cole, Verna Huffman, Jean Maconomy, Hazel Bradley, Grace Comstock, Jean Harvey and Jeanette Allin.

In the senior contests Jean Harvey stood first in speed and Viola Harvey second, while in the diving Hazel Bradley scored the most points with Viola Harvey second.

An announcement was given requesting all swimming cups to be brought in to the Y.W.C.A. this week.

Bowling Alley Gossip
By Pin Boy

ENGINEERS' LEAGUE.

The Lab. bowlers snapped out of it with a vengeance on Wednesday night by trouncing A.C. Engineers in every game, and thus pulled themselves out of the cellar position in this league. Given set a nice pace with two games 247 and 240, and also collcted high three with his score of 674.

Industrial Control Engineers applied the whitewash to Switchboard No. 2, taking three games and total pinnage, and worked their way up into third place in the league. With the exception of A. Gates, who rolled 247 single, the scores were rather common, but the losers were handicapped by a dummy score.

Mechanical Engineers divided the honors evenly with D.C. Section, each team taking four points. A very nice piece of consistent bowling was done by Jack Killoran, who made three scores of 197, 211, and 198 for the high three total of 606, being the only bowler on these teams to top the 600 mark.

Price Setting No. 1 are still at the head of the league as a result of their 8 point gain at the expense of Price Setting No. 2, who have not scored a point in three weeks, but were outlucked on Wenesday night owing to the fact that they used two dummy scores. The playing was far from spectacular, the score of 188 made by J. Adams taking high single, while 497 pins piled up by J. Barnes was high triple.

Switchboard No. 1 are bumping along at a merry rate, taking 6 out of 8 points from Induction Motors in an exciting duel that threatened the safety of the fern pots parked between the alleys. George Gore was going nice with both high scores 241 and 614.

Miss Ann Simpson was champion hardwood buster in Wednesday night's game among the feminine participants, making the very creditable scores of 170, 172, and 220.

SHOP LEAGUE.
Group No. 3.

The Engineers' team in the Shop League walked away from the Production crew in Wednesday night's battle, taking every game and having a majority of over 500 pins in total pinnage. Every man on the winning team turned in some nice bowling, especially Stewart, who rolled 198, 239, and 280 for a total of 717, while Adams spilled the bottlas for a single score of 293. T. Ryan on Production has a good score in his second game 274.

In a spectacular bowling battle that netted them a comfortable margin of 400 pins in total pinnage, the Coil Winders on Wednesday night blanked Test No. 4, winning every game. McGrath for the Winders set a new record in the Shop League with a triple score of 848, just three pins shy of the record at the Duffus Alleys, which is held by Joe Marsden with 851. With scores of 287, 281, and 280, this piece of bowling was probably the nicest demonstration seen this year.

Fitters took two games from Test No. 3, who are slow in hitting their stride. Convery made high single 240, while Musther of the Fitters was hitting them hard for a score of 607.

Nothing seems to hinder the progress of the Drafting Room in their headlong winning streak. Wednesday night's three game victory over Test No. 1 places them very close to first place. Dave Grant continues to bowl them over in big league style, amassing a total of 746 pins for the high three score and high singe also with 291. Jack Lesurf was next in line with 267.

Stores smothered Test No. 2 under an avalanche of pins, winning out with a majority of over 800 points, and taking three games from their hard-working opponents, who picked the headpin with a regularity that was disheartening. Bud Weese carried the two high scores by collecting 256 and 651.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The game to-morrow afternoon when P.C.I. Seniors meet Cobourg C.I. should be well worth a visit over the bridge.

Coach Browne has drafted some of the more experienced players from Coach Legon's Intermediates for the senior team which has been playing short on substitutes all season. In this way Coach Browne is rounding out his outfit to full strength for the championship game with Oshawa which will follow if P.C.I. win their game with Cobourg to-morrow afternoon at James Stevenson Park. Doukas, Clayton, Wagar and Ward are some of the good players that have advanced into the senior team.

* * * * * * *

The PC.I. team is well fortified in every position. Cuthbertson can take his place at quarter and Hall can fill the shoes of Preston at snap.

* * * * * * *

The Collegiate teams play hard and put everything they have into the game. Yet there aren't very many injuries. The big reason for this is because they play absolutely clean rugby, no dirty jabs, nor sly twists. Sport, as played in the Collegiates and High Schools of Ontario, is on the highest plan that could be found any where.

* * * * * * *

Last week in Cobourg "Bernie" Hodgett, the player on the Cobourg team and the one that was giving the P.C.I. boys the most trouble to stop, was knocked out for a minute or so. The P.C.I. players immediately began to pump his legs and give him first aid and they seemed much more solicitous about his condition than his own team mates. That is sportsmanship unadulterated.

* * * * * * *

When play was resumed both teams were in there fighting for all they were worth.

Doug. Loomis, the popular physical director at the "Y" was elected to the executive of the Eastern Ontario Basketball Association in Kingston yesterday. There is some splendid basketball materal in the "Y" this year and they ought to turn out a real quintette when they get down to business.

This Harrier Road Race for Thanksgiving Day is going to be a race. The Lindsay Monarchs and Collegiate are sending down a strong team of runners. The local runners are in fine shape and a large entry will hold up the city's honour in the race.

* * * * * * *

This year the champions of Western Canada will come East and play the Eastern champions. Three years ago when the champs of the West came East they showed up very badly. But sport seems to be coming into its own in the West now—the West had a large number of athletes on the Canadian Olympic team—and it may show the East something this year.

The other night in Paris there was truly a battle of the giants. The Italian Heavy-weight Champion, Canero, soaring 6 feet 11 inches and weighing 266 pounds fought another Italian who stood 6 feet 4 inches and weighed 215 pounds All the spectators felt sorry for the little fellow. Canero won and he is coming to America. He ought to land a job with Barnum and Bailey if he can't push them over in the ring.

CARTER INJURED IN PRACTICE GAME

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Howard Carter, crack kicker of the Queen's Senior squad, was injured in yesterday's practice of the tri-color, and fears are being entertained that he might not be able to play on Saturday. If he is unable to get in the game against McGill, the stock of the Montrealers will jump many points, for Carter was the outstanding star in the two victories of the tri-color this season.

Carter was thrown heavily in a tackle and had to be helped from the field, when it was found his knee was badly injured. Just how badly he was injured will not be known until to-day. Right after the inury, the practice was called off by coach Carson.

Mongevan, spare quarter, was also hurt but it is not thought seriously.

WINNIPEG PLAYER TO TRY FOR BERTH

Tony Baril Bidding For Right Wing Position With Les Canadiens.

MONTREAL., Que., Nov. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Tony Baril, for several years a member of the Royal Bank of Canada team in the Bankers' Hockey League and of other senior and intermediate clubs of the district is scheduled to try out with the Canadiens in their practice to-day.

The former Winnipegger, a tricky forward with a whistling shot and a fine hook check around centre ice, has asked for a chance to practise with the Montreal team. Baril will be bidding for a right wing berth for which Canadiens already have Art. Gagne, Larochelle and George Patterson.

Jean Pusie, the schoolboy defense player, who is on the preferred list of the Canadians turned out with the pro team yesterday for experience. With Pusie, there was also an addition to the regular list of players, Johnny Sorrell, Canadien rookie who is en route to Windsor Hornets also drilled with the major team. With a flock of players on hand manager Cecil Hart gave his regulars only 30 minutes of hockey and after securing an extra 15-minute period to the practice hour, sent out all the relief players and recruits.

Crowds Pack Forum

Yesterday was a holiday and crowds packed the forum for both the Maroon and Canadien practices. The desire of the fans to see the workouts appears so keen that it seems certain that Canadiens will drop the idea of secret practices starting next week. The team leaves Wednesday for two exhibition games at Providence and will return next Sunday for a final polishing up before opening the N.H.L. season against Maroons here on Thursday, November 15. Canadiens will not play an exhibition in Kitchener.

Maroons have been travelling at such a fast clip recently and are rounding into condition so well that it is probable a rest will be called this weekend, manager Gerard making to-day's drill the last until Monday morning, giving the squad two complete days of relaxation.

GENIE CAPTURES RIGGS HANDICAP

Man o' War Colt Covers Route in Fast Time To Win $25,000.

SORTIE SECOND.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 2.—The Riggs Handicap, a $25,000 added attraction for 3-year-olds at a mile and a half, was the feature event on yesterday's high-class opening day program. Clear weather and a fast track enticed a crowd estimated at nearly twenty thousand to the most beautiful of Maryland racecourses.

The Riggs Handicap was won by Gifford A. Cochran's Man-O'-War colt, Genie, ridden by Bill Kelsay, with A. C. Schwartz' Sortie second, and the Audley Farm's Princess Tina taking the short end of the purse.

Ten faced the barrier, and Genie negotiated the grueling distance in 2.31 4-5, returning his backers $7.70 for $2 in the mutuels.

Four-Length Margin

Princess Tina took up the early pace, with Genie always within striking distance. Kelsay began moving him soon after leaving the half-mile post, and the Man-o'-War colt went away into a good lead to increase it four lengths at the finish. Sortie, slow to begin, gained gound rapidly and was under punishment the entire trip. He put up a game battle, but could never menace the winner. Princess Tina began tiring after going a mile. J. P. Smith's ex-plater, Royal Stranger, ran an even race to take fourth money.

The victory was worth $22,775 to the winner, in addition to a gold cup value at $1,000; $5,000 to the runner-up; $2,000 to Princess Tina; and 51,000 to Royal Stranger.

Preakness To-day

A stake event will be decided each day of the twelve-day meeting to be conducted by the Maryland Jockey Club. The richest of all will be the historic Pimlico Preakness, a mile dash for two-year-olds, which should net the winner more than $50,000. The Preakness is down for decision to-day and has attracted a field of thirteen, among which are numbered some of the season's best juveniles.

GOTHAM SQUADS NOW COMPLETE

ICE PRACTICE NEXT WEEK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—All is serene in the camps of New York's two National Hockey League clubs, the Americans and Rangers. With Johnny Sheppard, late of Detroit, reporting to Tommy Gorman, manager of the Americans Thursday, the rosters are now complete.

Glowing reports are emanating from the Rangers' camp located in Springfield, Mass. The Cook brothers are reported to be in almost mid-season form and Manager Lester Patrick is also elated with the fine showing of the other players, Myles Lane, in particular. The former Dartmouth star is showing great promise according to Patrick, and he needed to in order to oust Patsy Callighan, from reserve defence duty. Frank Boucher, Thompson and Murdock are rapidly reaching peak form, but the others are coming to hand slower.

Hard At It Next Week

Both the Americans and Rangers will settle down to serious ice practice next week. The Americans have not yet been on ice, having confined their training to gymnastics, but the Rangers' have been on the ice for a week.

On Sunday, Rangers will go to New Haven where they will play the Eagles, "farm" team of the Americans, while on Tuesday the Americans will go to Springfield and play the Indians, "farm" team of Rangers.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

November 16, 1912, was a glorious football day for old McGill. She met and defeated Toronto Varsity at Ottawa 14-3 in the play-off game for the intercollegiate title. Shaughnessy's McGill team brought to the Montreal institution her first rugby honors in years. Varsity in 1911 won the Canadian championship and were holders of the Grey Cup.

The big blue team was tricked 3 times that afternoon by a simple looking punt formation out of which developed three beautiful onside kicks. The great Billington, McGill's most famous punter, was opposed by Jack Maynard, Varsity's ace. The McGill punter took his position in the formation 10 yards behind Quarter-back McEvenue from all appearances to punt. McEvenue, receiving the ball from his centre, Montgomery, faked a pass to Billington. Inside of passing he kicked a well-timed and well-placed onside kick into the waiting arms of a team, which indirectly resulted in a touchdown. McGill onside kick formation is shown below. McEvenue is No. 1, Billington is No. 4.

The teams were:

McGill—Lee, flying wing; Paisley Billington, and Draper, half-backs; McEvenue, 2b; Reid, Montgomery and Cruickshanks, scrim; Matheson and Timmins, inside; Bignall and Waterous, middle; Laing and Lewis, outside.

Varsity—Gage, flying wing; Cumer, Conter, and Maynard, half-backs; Campbell, 2b; Brown, Knight and Pearce, scrim; Clark and Cory, inside; German and Taylor, middle; Sinclair and Clarkson, outside.

Referee, Dr. Hendry; umpire, W. Molson.

Two local men, Ross Laing, for McGill, and Pete Campbell, for Varsity, were opposing players in this struggle.

YOUNG FOLK REQUIRE ELDERS' SYMPATHY

Less Fault Finding and More Help Needed Says Bishop J. C. Farthing.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Bishop J. C. Farthing, (of Montreal, addresing a meeting of Montreal, addressing a meeting sociation here, stressed the difficulty of the younger generation to find its bearing at the present time of political, social, moral and spiritual evolution, and expressed regret that older people sometimes were too censorious and fault-finding with the young people. The church's great young men and women, for if their purpose, he said, was to try to help Christianity were weakened they were apt to be carried away into paths that led to danger and disaster. The bishop pleaded for more sympathy with the youth of today, and he urged the young people to get out among those with whom they associated and influence their lives. "Do not be sanctimonious," he advised, "but be brave."

McGILL WILL PLAY AT QUEEN'S STADIUM

Outcome of To-morrow's Battle Will Virtually Settle 1928 College Race.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 2.—(Canadian Press)—The McGill University senior Rugby players concluded their final practice yesterday and will leave to-day for Kingston, where Saturday they encounter Queen's in a struggle that will virtually settle the 1928 college race. It is generally agreed that the team which wins Saturday will clinch the title, for if the locals defeat Queen's they will be overwhelming favorites to down Varsity here the following Saturday and so take the championship. The team will be accompanied by a number of supporters, whil the main contingent will leave on special trains Saturday.

McGill will present a shifted line-up against the tri-color. The line-up announced by the McGill coaches revealed last night. Bill Lowering has been shifted to flying wing as was promised midway through the week and Urquhart and Young are starting at outside. Swabey will get the call at snap, leaving Dave Munroe for relief purposes on the line where McGill was short on good substitute material. Normie Smyth takes Lowering's place at getaway half and Tremain will do the kicking. Otherwise the squad will line up Saturday much the same as when they faced the tri-color here two weeks ago.

RUGBY.

The Collegiate and Oshawa are tied for the group honors and the outcome of to-morrow's battles in the intercollegiate O.R.F.U. may decide the Central Ontario group leaders.

The local team and Cobourg C.I. play at James Stevenson Park to-morrow afternoon at 2.30, and as this is the last game of the season that will be played here, a goodly crowd of students are asked to be on the grounds to help cheer the team on.

At a recent meeting of the Literary Society of the P.C.I. the following officers were elected:

Presidents: Reginald Howden and Charles Kitney.

Vice-Presidents: Barbara Foster and Headley Vickers.

Secretaries: Gordon Braund and Howard MacDonald.

Treasurers: Jean Puttick and Florence Wedlock.

N.H.L. OFFICIALS MEET REFEREES

TOURING CIRCUIT.

TORONTO, Nov. 2. — President Frank Calder and Referee-in-Chief Cooper Smeaton of the National Hockey League are in the midst of executing a brilliant idea, one that will likely result in the N.H.L. games this season being played more in accordance with the rules and with less bellringing by the officials. The two chiefs are making a tour of the circuits and holding two meetings in each of the eight cities, one for the present league referee and candidates for positions on the staff this season, another for players, managers and coaches of the clubs. The business at each meeting is practically the same, explanation of the rules and a uniform interpretation of the rules by all concerned. They are assisted in a considerable degree by the fact that there are no great changes in the rules governing the play for the approaching campaign, and with the players knowing how the officials are going to interpret various plays and actions there will, or at least should, be fewer infringements.

The trip started on Wednesday when the present official from Ottawa and a number of aspirants had the various rules explained to them by the Chief Referee, and he in turn answered all questions regarding knotty problems. In the evening the Ottawa players attended a meeting after practice. Thursday morning there was a gathering of the local referees and candidates, including R. W. Hewitson, Alex. Romerill, Lou Marsh, M. J. Rodden, Ernie Collett, Bill Graham, Jimmy Douglas and Harold Farlow, along with President King of the Canadian League and his refereeing staff. As the Maple Leafs will not return from Fall training until this evening, Messrs. Calder and Smeaton will remain over until tonight and talk over the rules with the players. They will then return to Montreal and after sessions with the Maroons and Canadiens will make a jaunt through the American group, visiting Boston, New York, Pittsburg, Chicago and Detroit.

The president stated that indications point to the approaching season being the most successful in the history of the year. A number of the clubs that showed weaknesses last Winter have strengthened, and while some of the stronger ones of the 1927-1928 campaign have also added strength the league on the whole appears to be better balanced and most of the clubs appear to be championship contenders from the start.

When questioned as to the status of the holdouts, which are now limited to three members of the Pittsburg Pirates, Worters, Milks and Darrangh, the president stated that as soon as the players come to their senses and signed their contracts little time would be lost in reinstating them.

CANPRO CAMPAIGN IS READY TO START

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—With the opening of the Canadian Professional Hockey League just a little over a week away, the teams are rushing preparations for the start. Six of the clubs are almost ready for the face-off, but Niagara Falls and Hamilton are still in a state of organization.

Gene Fraser has gathered enough material to make a start, but the happenings in Hamilton have been kept under cover, although there is an organization being formed to put a team on the ice.

London, Windsor and Toronto Millionaires appear the teams to beat for the championship, and although anything is likely to happen before the long grind, the pre-season indications are that the trio will be somewhere near the top when March winds are blowing. Bert Corbeau has collected a formidable force for London, with Joe Ironstone for goal, and Voss, Moore along with Corbeau himself, for defence, which formed the late Falcon rear guard. White, Connacher and Lever will fill the midice position for London, with Brophy, Jackson, Filmore, McIntyre and Groh for the wings.

Corbeau's collection should be hard to beat, but the Toronto Millionaires also have the makings of a nice team, composed mostly of the pace-setting Kitchener club of last year. Bud Fisher has been signed for the goal guarding job, with the Cameron brothers, from Buckingham, Quebec, in front of him on the defence. Harry Holmes, the Millionaires' manager, has a fast-moving flock for front line work in the following: Steve Rice, Art Clark, George Clark, Stewart, Dunning, Ronnie Martin, Buster Huffman, Al Gauthier and Clarence Wedgewood.

At the organization meeting held in Buffalo, Herb Mitchell's Windsor roster seemed the best, and with Mickey Roach added the prospects look even better. Cox or Reid will protect the posts, with Fournier, Brown and Bellemer for defence men. The forwards are: Green, Hicks, Huard, McGuire, Gregg, Carson, Emms, Sorrell, Hinsperber and Roach.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"MADEMOISELLE FROM ARMENTIERES"

This is a peppy, entertaining picture that centres about the love affairs of the lady whose praises were sung by many hundreds of soldiers in war time. The petite French damsel who inspired the strains of the famous marching song with its "inky, pinky, parly voo" refrain, may never have lived at all, but she was quite a real figure, nevertheless, to the men who wove poetical fancies about her image. In this picture, she has come to life, and "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" proves to be a very likeable young lady.

Estelle Brody is the actress, new to local theatre-goers, who plays the part, and does it very delightfully. She gives it just the requisite touch of romance, but makes it principally a character of pert charm. "Mademoiselle" is the gay assistant at the estaminet conducted by her aunt, a typical French woman, and John, as he is called, falls in love with her.

He is one of the soldiers billeted near Armentieres and his love affair with the sprightly damsel progresses very satisfactorily until she becomes involved in the plans of the high command. Then she is used as a decoy for the German spy, Branz, and she is able to furnish valuable information to the English. Branz is made to overhear some information that the English wish conveyed to the Germans and the girl acts as the go-between. John, of course, misunderstands the affair and thinks she is fickle and untrustworthy. Later, the whole thing smooths itself out, but only after John ad his little sweetheart have walked many miles through the hell of war.

This picture is to be commended to a great extent for the unvarnished fashion in which it presents the stark facts of savage fighting. There is no gloss to the scenes filmed in the "zero hour" in the trenches, when the men go to the "bloody slaughter" arranged for them by their own officers, who have agreed to sacrifice so many men to enable their French allies to come forward and pound the Germans into submission. The men are sacrificed and the coup succeeds admirably. The victims do not share in the honor that falls to their officers, but lie quietly in the mud of No Man's Land or stumble blinded through the water-soaked trenches. There is nothing wonderful or heroic about this war picture. The only sane things about the actual scenes of fighting appear to be the immovable tanks, pressing serenely forward. The men who go out against the big suns seem not heroic, but foolish.

Through it is the music of those days, "Tipperary," that war time song for marching feet, "The Long Trail" and other composition dedicated to the soldiers.

The "New Collegians" series has a place on this week's program, with Benson of Calford engaged in a running race with Fleetfoot, the Indian runner of a rival college. Benson wins,, as usual.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

"West Point" An Exciting Picture From Every Angle—Glories of Military Life Filmed with Fidelity at U. S. Academy—William Haines Starred—Film Portrays the Making of an Officer in Dramatic and Entertaining Way.

West Point—the very name suggests romance, glorious traditions and patriotism. All these are echoed in William Haines' new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, in which, at the Regent Theatre, the audience follows his career as a cadet through the government's military academy.

It's a story of youth and romance—with the thrills of a great football struggle, the spectacle of parades and evolutions of Uncle Sam's future officers — and a delicate romance between Haines and Joan Crawford running through it.

Haines plays a "fresh" young man who comes to West Point to play football. The traditions of the corps mean nothing to him. He's conceited, selfish, wayward.

The remaking of the youth from this raw material into ideal timber for officership is strikingly shown in a dramatic and entertaining sequence. There are many comedy moments in his training— comedy moments of which Haines takes the fullest advantage; there are heart throbs as the cadet is put through the bitter experiences that must be his lot before he can learn the lesson of the corps; one has every sympathy with him even while realizing that he deserves his lesson and that it's all for his good. The love theme is wonderfully carried out by Haines and Joan Crawford who plays the heroine of the new story.

One of the outstanding characterizations is the work of William Bakewell as the timid young "Tex" adoring friend of the football hero, and Ralph Emerson and Nell Neely give clean-cut portrayals as student officers. Major Raymond G. Moses of the United States Army, who plays the role he plays in real life as instructing officer at West Point, handles his part cleverly.

C.G.E. GROUP 4

Office No. 1 team walked over the Office No. 5 for a three game win in last night's tilt at the Duffus Alleys. Every member of the winning team was hitting his stride in first-class style. F. M. Somerville setting a fast pace with both high single and high three, 256 and 590.

Handicapped by two dummy scores throughout the three game, the Office No. 4 bowlers were handed a jolt by the Patternmakers, who carried off the whole works. H. Fraser and Donovan were going nice with 271 and 236 respectively, while on the losing side only one member reached the 200 mark, this being Waldie.

Office No. 3 displayed their usual good form and hammered their way to a 2 to 1 victory over the Inspectors. Constable, on the Inspectors' team, carried off high three honors with the score of 543, while Archie Weir was hitting them hard for a score of 534. High single went to Sanderson with 227.

Dave Ahern and his gang of switchmakers on the Brass No. 3 clean up on the Office No. 2 in two games and lost the third by a rather close shave. The single score of 250 collected in this fracas by Ahern was high, while his three-game score of 589 carried off the honors also.

The Carpenters took the Production No. 2 aggregation into camp in two games, but were handed a thorough trouncing themselves in the third fixture, losing by more than 125 pins. The sharpshooters were R. Lewington with 245 and J. Patterson 244, and the trio of scores totalling 551 made by J. Patterson went for high three.

OFFICE GIRLS' LEAGUES

The Redwing flapper quintette played havoc with the Bluebirds, who lost every game in this week's engagement. Margaret Fife for the winners, gave the pin boys plenty of work with two high scores, 183 and 482, while Nettie Hardie was high for the Bluebirds with 173.

The Canaries were unable to withstand the onslaught of the Bobolinks and as a result dropped two games, but regained their punch in time to capture the third fixture. Dot. Pogue chalked up the strikes for a high single of 200, while her efforts in three games accounted for high three, 496. Dot. Collins was hitting them hard and piled up 452 pins.

The Blackbirds and Orioles staged the most hotly contested battle of the evening; the Orioles winning the first game by the narrow margin of one pin, but lost the next one to their hard-working opponents who battled gaily for a close decision. E. White for the Blackbirds made an exceptionally good showing with 234 single as did M. Constable, who collected 223 and high three 533. E. Spurway and G. Abbott of the Orioles hugged the centre of the alleys to advantage making 210 and 181 respectively.

The battle for supremacy in Group 3 of the Shop League is waxing very keen, but at present the Coil Winders are occupying the top rung. With four teams bunched together with only a difference of one point between each of their standings this ten team group will undoubtedly display some splendid bowling. The following is the standing to date of each team.

Men and women who are constantly annoyed and distressed by Bladder Weakness or Urinary Irritation should take immediate steps to combat their trouble before it reaches a serious or perhaps dangerous stage!

Backaches, Headaches, pains in feet and legs, nervousness, restlessness, frequent but scanty urination with burning and pain, getting-up-nights—these are some of the more troublesome signs of Bladder Weakness or Irritation that should have prompt attention.

DEPARTING MEMBER HONORED BY CHOIR

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Nov. 2.—On Friday evening, Mrs. C. L. Morcombe entertained the ladies of Trinity Choir and a few friends in honor of her niece, Miss Eda Morcombe who left this week for her home in Portage la Prairie. Contests and games provided plenty of entertainment for the guests. During the evening, Miss Morcombe was presented with a scarf as a slight rememberance of her associates in the choir. Miss Morcombe has made her home here for the past four years and her departure is regretted by her many friends in Omemee. She was faithful member of Trinity United Church, a Sunday school teacher, and in fact took an active part in all the young peoples' organizations of the church, where she will be greatly missed.

A.Y.P.A. Entertain.

The A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church entertained St. Paul's Lindsay branch at a Hallowe'en masquerade held on Monday evening. The program began with a grand march when the costumes were judged. Edward Nesbitt and Miss Lees, of Lindsay, were awarded the prizes for the best costumes, while Harry Burgess and Miss Mabel Rowan won the prizes for the funniest costumes. After several games and contests, refreshments were served.

At the weekly meeting of the Young Peoples' Union, lantern slides depicting country and village life in Korea were shown, which were enjoyed by those in attendance.

Ball Games.

The Millbrook school ball teams accompanied by a number of fans, motored to Omemee on Saturday afternoon, to meet the local teams in a friendly game in Athletic Park. The Millbrook teams were too much for the locals and soon piled up a big score much in advance of the Omemee teams. Before the visitors returned home, they were entertained a lunch in Coronation Hall.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT GIVEN LAFLAMME

Glengarry County Jury Finds Him Guilty of Manslaughter.

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—Raoul Laflamme, farm worker of Glengarry County, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Mr. Justice Raney early last night after an assize jury here found him guilty on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the shooting to death of his brother, Charles Laflamme.

Raoul, who was described by medical doctors testifying for the Crown as "a man with the mentality of an eight-year-old child," betrayed little emotion on receiving the sentence.

Charles was shot to death on the Laflamme farm at St. Raphael, Glengarry County, early on the morning of Sunday, June 10, last. Suspicion first fixed on Raoul when it became known that he had left the nearby farm where he was employed, early on the morning of the murder, and disappeared entirely until five days later, when arrested by a posse.

The prisoner had not lived at home for two years previous to the murder.

INTERESTING BOOK.

Chamber of Commerce Has the 1928 Index To French Production.

An interesting volume, "Index to French Production, 1928", has just been received and added to the library of the Chamber of Commerce. The volume is published under the patronage of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, honored with a subscription from the ministry of Foreign Affairs, and edited by L'Association Nationale d'Expansion Economique, 23 Avenue de Messine, Paris.

It contains a full list of French producers with an alphabetical index to trades and an index to descriptive matter. The volume, which is printed in English, may be seen at the Chamber by interested citizens. It is being published simultaneously in six editions: English, French, German, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish.

It is estimated that sleeping-car porters of whom there are 7000 employed by the Pullman Company in the United States, receive about $7,000,000 in tips during the year.

Unfavorable Weather Has Dullish Effect On Gain

CHICAGO, March 2.— (Canadian Press.)—Grain prices showed an early upward trend to-day Some of the buying of wheat was associated with the talk that Hoover's speech at St. Louis last night would deal with plans of farm relief. Unfavorable weather had a dullish effect on gain, opening 1-8 to 3-4 higher. Wheat afterward held near to the initial figures. Corn started 1-8 to 3-8 up and subsequently reacted a little. Oats were firm. Wheat, December 116⅜, March 121⅝. Corn, December 83⅜, March 86⅝. Oats, December 43⅜, March 44½.

Noranda Takes Heavy Drop After High Opening

TORONTO, Nov. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—Trading was active on the standard stock and mining exchange to-day with prices irregular. Noranda was in demand and sold up high as 57.50 but receded to 55.25 at noon, 75 cents lower than yesterday's close. Melartic was down three at 1.10 and Sherritt Gordon advanced 15 to 7.00. Sudbury Basin dropped 5 to 8.20, while Siscoe advanced one to 62 with large turnover. Capital Rouyn was exceedingly active with a turnover during the morning of 264,400 shares and selling as high as 26½ and dropping to 24 for a net gain of three. Mond Nickel at 32.40 and Pend Oreille at 11.75 suffered reverses of sixty and 25 respectively, while Hudson Bay went up to 10 at 18.50 and Coast Copper 50 at 52.25. Abana was up two at 3.80, Big Missouri one at 67.

Oils Lead Trading On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—Oils continued upwards with the heavy trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Imperial Oil made a gain of four during the morning to 90, and International Petroleum was up ¾ at 50, with a turnover of 24,095 shares. Service Station advanced 2¼ at 55, and Preferred went up four to 115. Super Petroleum was up one at 30½, British American Oil was down ¼ at 50, Northern Bakeries was up a half at 47½. Farmers' Dairy up 1½ at 25, while City Dairy was unchanged. There was little activity in brewing stocks. Carlings lost a half at 32½, while Canada Malt went up a half to 35. Seagrams was unchanged. There was not much activity among listed stocks.

Brazilian dropped ¼ to 71⅛, Cockshutt ¾ to 25½, and International Nickel one at 191. Massey Harris advanced one at 53.

Rubber and Oil Stocks Lead On Buying Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (Canadian Press).—The Stock Market to-day successfully withstood the flood of selling inspired by an unexpectedly large increase of nearly $135,000,000 in Federal reserve brokers' loans, while the price movement was by no means uniform and there were several weak spots in the list, major speculative operations continued on side of rising prices.

Buying again was selective in character, with the activity centering in a small assortment of rubber, oil, farm implement and communication shares.

The rise in Sinclair, which sold above 43 for the first time in five years, was attributed to buying by the Cutten interests which recently acquired a large block of treasury stock.

Kelly Springfield was bought by the same group, Common crossing twenty-four to within a fraction of the year's high, while both the Preferred issues moved into new high ground on gains of about 5 points each.

International Harvester and Advance Rumely were bought on the belief that the increase in total value of crops this year would be reflected in better demand for farm implements next spring.

Murphy Mines

Drilling from a point 250 feet east of the shaft at an angle of 52 degrees Murphy Mines has intersected at a vertical depth of 350 feet a body of ore which assays $4.50 to $24 per ton over a width of 40 feet. Two shafts are now down to a depth of 600 and 100 feet. At the main or north shaft, a station has been cut and a loading pocket is being prepared at the 600 foot level. The strength in Murphy Mines yesterday was undoubtedly due to the impressive discovery which rivals the discoveries of the leading producers in the history of their early development.

Standard Stock and Mining Exchange

N. C. Urquhart, president of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, announced to the Press last night, that the old Bell Telephone building on the south side of Temperance street east of Bay street had been purchased at a price of $265,000. Mr. Urquhart also stated that $100,000 was to be spent in remodelling the top floor into a modern Stock Exchange, while the other two floors will be equipped and rented as office space. It is thought that it will require about six months to complete these operations.

Falconbridge Mines

An official statement was issued Wednesday, putting at rest numerous rumors which have been floating around the Street in regard to Falconbridge Nickel Mines. The company have an authorized capitalization of 5,000,000 shares no par value. Of this amount, 2,750,000 shares have been issued for the property and $250,000 working capital, leaving 2,250,000 shares in the treasury. The company's property consists of the Long-year claims in Falconbridge, district of Sudbury, Ontario, having a continuous ore zone of 6,500 feet in length, blocked out by diamond drilling to a depth of about 500 feet. A shaft is now being sunk to develop this mine to depth.

Noranda.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Noranda made a new low on each successive day, breaking from $58 to $52 yesterday. We believe that liquidation is now over and that Noranda is an outstanding purchase at its present level.

Noranda's smelter is performing in a sensational manner at the present time. Thirteen hundred and fifty tons were put through the smelter in one day last week. Present production is averaging 1,200 tons a day of $23 ore, or approximately $800,000 a month, giving a gross yield of $9,600,000 per year. Fifty per cent. would be a conservative estimate of the net profit, or $4,800,000. This is at the rate of over $2 a share.

The new shaft is now down to a depth of 100 feet and rapid progress is being made. It is reported that the shaft sinking crew are averaging 6 feet a day.

Rufus Argenta.

Our Vancouver office reports that Mr. Reece, mining engineer, will have charge of operations on Rufus Argenta this winter. Contrary to a recent report that Rufus Argenta would suspend operations, it is now learned that development work will be continued on the tunnel during the winter months.

Duthie.

The Vancouver office of Duthie Mines reports that the face of the mill level advanced 30 feet during the week. The ore is reported to have continued without break. Construction work is now advancing rapidly. General conditions are reported to be extremely good. The present capacity of Duthie mill upon which it is earning its present dividend is 75 tons a day. The capacity is 150 tons a day and the concentrating end will now be brought up to the 150 ton level. Duthie lines are paying a dividend of 15 per cent. per year.

Meridian.

A despatch from our Calgary office states that the Meridian oil well, located 22 miles south of Lloydminster, has come in with 30,000,000 feet of gas. Details as to the wetness or dryness of the gas are not yet available.

APPRECIATIVE TRAVELLING

"I would speak to you to-day on some of our Canadian problems in the light of the world" said he by way of introduction, "for we have thought of them to such an extent that they actually exist. Yet we have wrestled with them without reaching a satisfactory solution." Mr. McLean first mentioned the "sectional consciousness" that is so prevalent in Canada, relating an incident wherein a resident of Northern Ontario failed to see the merits of the more southerly sections, because down there they cut hay and if it rains, the hay is spoiled, while up north, no amount of rain can harm a log." He pointed out that the rocky mining and lumbering country of Northwestern Ontario seems a barrier between this part of the Dominion and the west, and the Gaspe Peninsula serves to set apart the Maritime Provinces. Sectional consciousness exists in these several parts of the Dominion and only appreciative travelling can serve to eliminate this. The Japanese travellers were instanced, for their attitude is that of eager appreciation and as a result, they are carrying back the advantages of Western civilization in wholesale measure. "We should remember with Robert Louis Stevenson that it is better to travel pleasantly than to arrive," said Mr. McLean in concluding this phase of his address.

Industrial Problems.

The lumbering, mining and agricultural industries have their problems in Canada, for unemployment sometimes becomes serious during certain seasons of the year. For this reason, immigration is often looked upon from the standpoint of unemployment. Statistics show that 240,000 young Canadians are born annually as compared with the 105,000 old ones who pass on, and consequently, the 135,000 of a surplus must be absorbed into Canadan industry. A solution of this problem might be found in the little country school house which, in the western states and indeed western Canada as well, is helping to make country life more attractive and edifying.

Swiss life was held up by the speaker as an example to Canadians, for it is a well-known fact that the people of that country, living in a climate much the same as that of Canada, do not regard winter as a signal for unemployment, but turn their hands to the production, within their homes, of toys, clocks and fabrics. In Canada, there is too much of a tendency to consider one's self out of employment if unable to obtain work in a certain office or factory. There has been a tendency to believe that one should work away from home.

The matter of Canadian temperament was considered, for in a young country, there is a tendency toward booms and things novel. Canada's connections with Great Britain, sentimental rather than legal, should help to eliminate this unsteadiness for in the British Isles there is the tendency to work toward things substantial.

The Racial Question.

"On the plains of Abraham there stands a monument of Wolfe and Montcalm, signifying that the two great races of the Dominion are content to share its privileges. Canada seems destined to become the great receiver of Europe's overflow population, and in this regard, it behooves Canadians to lay a greater stress on the matter of citizenship and to give the new-comers as well as young Canadians proper appreciation of what Canadian citizenship stands for. The ancient Roman custom of a ceremony that brought these things most forcibly to the prospective citizen's mind was suggested when coupled with an incident which occurred in Rochester, N.Y., when at a dinner of honor, a party of new-comers to the country were shown that the process of naturalization meant more than freedom from military bonds of the country from which they had emigrated," concluded the speaker.

TORAL'S TRIAL WILL BE HEARD OVER THE RADIO

Mexican Court Room Only Holds 150 People—Admission By Ticket.

NUN'S TRIAL

Mother Concepcion Asks Attorney For Maximum Penalty in Prison.

MEXICO CITY, November 2 (Canadian Press). — A radio apparatus was installed to-day in the courtroom for the broadcasting of the trial of Jose De Leon Toral and the nun, Mother Conception, in connection with the assassination of President-Elect Alvaro Obregon last July. Toral is the assasin, the nun is accused of being an accomplice.

Thousands of persons asked to be admitted to to-day's proceedings at the Court House of San Angel, not far from where the slaying took place. The court room seats one hundred, fifty more can wedge their way in. Admission was by ticket only. Tickets were issued by the presiding judge.

Above the judge's bench and facing the space set aside for defendants was the picture of Obregon.

"I am ready for anything," Toral said. Then he spoke of the possibility that his crime might be considered political, and that death would not be his punishment, and his eyes shone with hope.

Mother Conception asked the prosecution attorney to do his utmost to have her sentenced to prison because this would enable her to devote herself to spiritual work among the women convicts in the penitentiary. The maximum penalty in her case is twenty years, in Toral's case death.

TWO CASES

Second Case

The second case arose out of Joseph Haword claiming a sum of $5 a week over a period of twenty weeks from Ross Ormond Crouter for the care and keep of his baby and wife.

The evidence of Joseph Haword brought out the facts that Mrs. Crouter was his daughter and that defendant had deserted his wife and small family while they were living in rooms in the plaintiff's home at 20 New Chamberlain street. The plaintiff claimed that he and his wife had kept the defendant's wife and paid the doctor's bills at the birth of the baby and supplied the necessities for the baby since.

Mrs. J. Haword, witness for the plaintiff, stated that her husband had cared for the baby and its mother. She also said that the defendant had abused his wife in a disgraceful way and he had once spanked the four-months' old baby until it was red from the whipping.

Mrs. Ross Haworth Crouter, witness for the plaintiff, stated that her husband had abused her. Often, she said, he had choked her and chased her about the room while wielding a carving knife in a dangerous manner. Her husband left her and her mother and father had looked after her and her baby, she stated.

On cross-examination by the lawyer for the defence Mrs. Crouter said that her husband had, through his lawyer, invited her to come and live with him, but she would not go because she was afraid of him and he had no place to take her.

The defence proved that the defendant and his wife had first lived with his people and then moved to a place of their own from where they had then moved to the Haworth home.

His Honor Judge Huycke gave decision in favor of the plaintiff, ordering full payment of the amount and the costs of the court.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff and V. J. McElderry for the defendant.

WEDDING BELLS

McLEOD—LEAHY

The wedding was solemnized quietly at the rectory of St. Peter's Cathedral at eight o'clock last evening, of Agnes Olive, youngest daughter of Mrs. E. Leahy, Charlotte street, and the late William J. Leahy, and Bert McLeod of Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. McLeod of Collingwood. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. Costello.

Mr. McLeod and his bride left for Kansas City, Mo., where they will reside during the winter months.

BOOKHOUT—BINGHAM

The wedding took place quietly in Toronto on Saturday last, at five o'clock in the afternoon, of Alden McLaury Bookhout, only son of Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, 516 Charlotte street, and the late A. F. Bookhout, to Patricia Bingham, daughter of Mrs. Matilda Bingham of Toronto and the late Mr. Bingham of North Bay. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Robert Pogue.

Witnesses to the signing of the register were Miss Georgie Clementi of Toronto, and Mr. Douglas Widdess of Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Bookhout are living at 31 Emerson avenue, Toronto.

TAIT—BERRY

A quiet, pretty wedding took place at All Saints' Church on Wednesday evening at five o'clock when Gertrude Martha Berry became the bride of Harry William Tait. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. D. Paterson.

The bride wore a dainty gown of poudre blue crepe de chine with hat of blue and silver, grey kid slippers and matching silk hose. She carried a sheaf of white chrysanthemums.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pulley, the latter wearing a dress of blue Canton crepe with hat to match and carrying a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding supper was served at the home of Mrs. E. A. Mann, Murray street.

Mr. and Mrs. Tait, who received a large number of pretty and useful gifts, will live on Young street.

McPHATE—WATSON

An interesting wedding that brought a pink-cheeked bride all the way from Scotland to make her home in a new land with the sweetheart who had been her suitor before he left the Old Country, several years ago, took place at eight o'clock last evening in Knox Church, when the Rev. William McDonald performed the ceremony which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Eleanor Mary Thom, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Watson of Partick, Scotland, and Ien Garroway McPhate, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John McPhate of 145 Stewart street.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Inspector James Reid, entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March, played by Mr. R. J. Devey, who also played softly during the progress of the ceremony. During the signing of the register, Miss Alma Beavis sang very sweetly, "For You Alone."

The bride wore an exquisite gown of ivory white georgette and Spanish lace. The top was made entirely of lace, which also formed the long sleeves, banded with georgette. A pointed neckline had a jabot of georgette, clasped with a brilliant buckle and ending in tassels of silver. Deep rows of shirring joined the skirt which was made of wide alternate bands of georgette and lace, with a hem of scalloped lace, and was fashioned in bouffant style.

A long veil of ivory tulle was embroidered in silk, in a design of flowers and horseshoes. This was arranged in a close cap with a wreath of artificial orange blossoms. White satin slippers and white silk hose were worn. The bride, whose only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, carried a shower bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses and maidenhair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Florence Taylor, was in pale green taffeta, trimmed with overyoke and skirt ruffles of cream lace and girdle design of flat beige velvet flowers. The same velvet flowers were used as trimming of her large hat of beige taffeta, with shirred brim and band of twisted taffeta. Green satin slippers and blonde silk hose were worn and the bridesmaid carried a bouquet of Columbia roses.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Thomas McPhate of Hamilton.

Ushers were Messrs. Archie McPhate and Robert Taylor.

After the ceremony a wedding reception, attended by forty-five guests, was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents, followed by a dance and midnight supper. Mrs. John McPhate was in navy georgette, with pleated skirt and trimming of cut-work embroidery. She wore an orchid shoulder flower and hat of black and gold.

The decorations of the rooms were pink and white streamers and bells, and the bride's table was centered by the cake with its ornament of tiny white asters and green fern. Bouquets of glazed pink wild roses and ferns decorated the long serving table.

Mr. McPhate and his bride left this morning at six o'clock for a trip to Toronto. On their return, they will reside at 145 Stewart street.

The bride travelled in a gown of black crepe de chine, made in tailored style with long rows of little orange glass buttons and collar and cuffs of rose beige crepe. She wore a small hat of brown silk crepe with metallic top, a coat of brown English broadcloth with Paquin collar and long cuffs of opossum fur, and brown shoes and hose.

The young people received a large number of beautiful gifts from relatives and friends here and in the Old Country, also two cablegrams of congratulation from Scotland and messages from Montreal.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a purse of brown leather; to the bridesmaid, a gold signet ring; to the best man, a pair of cuff links, and to the soloist, a silver compact.

IN MEMORIAM

FOY—In ever loving memory of our dear son and brother, Ernest Charles Foy, who died in Hamilton Sanitarium, November 2, 1922.

—Sadly missed by Father, Mother, Brother and Sisters.

He heard the call of his country,
And answered it brave and true;
"I'll be a man to do or die,
I'm going to help them through."
The Great Commander has written his name
On the roll of Him who gave His Only Begotten Son,
And died that we might live.
He paid the debt to his country
In the fight he has won;
And the King of Kings has spoken:
"Thou faithful one; well done."

FOY—In ever loving memory of Private Ernest Charles Foy, who passed peacefully away, November 2, 1922.

Gems snatched from earth are re-set in heaven;
Flowers which died here in their beauty's prime
Live there in endless summer-time;
And the dear ones, shrined in the trustful heart,
They shall meet again, and no more shall part.

—Lovingly remembered by Mr. and Mrs. P. Card and family.

IN MEMORIAM

CROWLEY.—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Timothy Crowley, who passed away, November 2, 1927.

Just a sad and sweet remembrance,
Just a memory, fond and true,
Just a token of affection
And a heartache still for you.

Schoolboy Arraigned on Murder Charge

Shooting Follows Fight

BROTHER KILLED.

First Believed the Shooting Near Millbridge Had Been Accidental.

BELLEVILLE, Nov 3.—(Canadian Press.)— Harry Henley, 12 years of age, whose home is near Millbridge, appeared to-day in police court before Magistarte W. C. Mikel, on a charge that "he did on October 31 unlawfully kill his brother, James Henley aged 15 years.'

The youth was not asked to plead and no evidence was taken, at the request of prosecution the lad was remanded until November 7, in the interim he will be confined in the Children's Shelter.

The shooting occurred at the Henley home when Mr. and Mrs. Henley were absent. In a statement made by James before his death, he stated the shooting was accidental, but the matter is being further investigated by the police.

Boys Quarrelled.

At first it was believed it was a case of accidental death, but a subsequent investigation by the provincial police yesterday resulted in the arrest of the younger boy. Sergeant Roy Clark of Belleville left for Millbridge, 40 miles north of here, to bring the youngster to Belleville.

According to the story told police here, the boys quarrelled during the afternoon of Monday, Oct. 31, and it is stated that James had thrown stones at his younger brother. The shooting is said to have followed the quarrel.

James died of the wound in the Belleville hospital eight hours after being admitted.

The inquest was opened Thursday night at Tickell's undertaking parlors and the father in his evidence, stated the gun was not loaded when the lads left the house for the field in the morning and further stated it had not been used for some months. Crown Attorney Bryson B Donnan at this juncture decided that a fuller investigation was necessary and he despatched the police to the scene of the shooting.

The funeral will take place at the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Henley, to-day.

The first story received from Millbridge was to the effect that the boys were cleaning the gun in preparation for a duck-hunting expedition. The mother was in Belleville attending a funeral when the shooting occurred. The father was absent in the fields.

Bishop's Pastoral Letter Asks Services at 10.45

A pastoral letter has been received by the Anglican clergymen of Peterborough from the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Bishop of the Diocese, requesting that morning services on November 11 start at 10.45.

His Lordship expresses the hope that the congregations will be in their places so that the two minutes' silence may be observed at 11 o'clock.

LECTURER VISITS CITY

"A Bag of Folks" Is Subject of Lecture in Murray Street Church.

HUMOROUS INCIDENTS.

Coming to Peterborough under the auspices of "The Others" Class of Murray Street Baptist Church Sunday school, Thomas McGillicuddy, Lyceum and Chautauqua lecturer, entertained a fairly large audience in the auditorium of Murray Street Church last evening with his happy lecture on human nature—"A Bag Full of Folks."

A brief musical program was given in connection with the lecture, including a solo by Miss Blanchard of Trinity Church and organ numbers by Arthur Collison; Walter Kidd, in the capacity of chairman, introducing them.

Of the speaker he said but little, in the belief that Mr. McGillicuddy would recommend himself through his lecture, and this soon proved correct.

Happy in a world of humorous incidents, his address took the form that its title suggested and from his "Bag of Folks" Mr. McGillicuddy drew the social man, who is cheery and hospitable, as the first example of human nature.

Different Men

Then followed the Grouch, the Conceited man, the Negative man (who never has a mind of his own on any question), the Man who will attempt things; the Suspicious man who would seem to have something crooked in his make-up; the Cheerful man who lives by the text found in Proverbs 17:22, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," and finally the Home, Church and Community Builder, who is capable of co-operating with his fellows; who is in step with them rather than maintaining his own independent opinion, right or wrong.

Mr. McGillicuddy advised his hearers of the merits and demerits of each of these examples of human nature, different as they are, and urged the Peterborough folk before him to be in step with all things for the good of the community, but most of all, in step with the great Captain in heaven.

Present among last night's audience was a deputation from Lindsay, as well as representations from the surrounding district of Peterborough, and all were sincere in their commendation of "The Others" class, for bringing such a speaker as Mr. Gillicuddy to Peterborough.

University Students Raid Subway Train

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Several hundred Columbia University students took possession of a subway train last night causing passengers to flee to the streets. Students extinguished lights in seven of the ten cars, ripped down advertising signs and terrified passengers with shouting.

Two students arrested but later released.

Friend's Confessions Frees Pal From Jail Receives Sentence Of Two Months In Jail

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Nov. 3.—A modern Damon and Pythias act was enacted in county police court here the other day when Joseph Von Poppell, a Belgian truck farmer, living near Port Stanley, was charged with having liquor for sale.

Von Poppell was in jail and was about to be brought before Magistrate Maxwell when his lawyer appeared and announced that the chief witness for the defense, Frank Verstraeten, had just admitted to him that he and not Von Poppell was the owner of the trouble-making liquor, and that he was prepared to assume the responsibility in court.

Two minutes later, Verstraeten was arraigned on a charge of selling, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two months hard labor in the Elgin County jail while Von Poppell walked out of the court house, a free man.

Three hundred bottles of home brew found in the double house where Von Poppell and Verstraeten resided has been ordered destroyed.

CONFEDERATION SQUARE TO BE RE-LEVELLED

Two Hundred Loads of Earth Will Be Put in City's Park.

PUMPS MUST GO.

Board of Works and Finance Committee Meet in Committee Rooms.

The levelling of Confederation Square, the opening of tenders for the plowing of the snow off the streets and the giving of final notice to the gasoline pump owners who have not removed their pumps from the city streets were the principal matters discussed at the meetings of the Board of Works and Finance Committee of the City Council last night.

The whole appearance of Confederation Square is going to be changed when the level of the ground is raised several inches to bring it up to the same height as the sidewalks. The gasoline pump men who have been defying the order of the City Council to remove their pumps from the street will be given a final notice to get their property off the sidewalk in ten days or legal action will be taken.

Snow Plowing.

Tenders for the removing of the snow from the various streets in the city were opened and the contracts let. In district one, which is in the centre of the city, it will be looked after as usual by the Board of Works. M. W. Beebe and W. J. Stinson submitted tenders for district two, and Mr. Beebe was given the contract for $220(which was $20 lower than the price submitted by the other tenderer. Number three went to A. Deal for $200; number four to J. H. Bennett for $185; number five to W. J. Collins for $250; number six to H. Monerief for $225; number seven to R. Mitchell for $149, and number eight to R. Mitchell for $144. In districts five and six there was only one man tendering in each, while in three, four and eight there were three and two each in two and seven.

Fred Rowan made application to have the sewer built on Roger Street between Hunter and Robinson in front of his property, as he is building three new houses. City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to have the same advertised under the Local Improvements Act.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to advertise for tenders for the machinery for the addition to the sewage disposal plant, and Mayor Denne was asked to make an appointment with the Minister of Highways when the Park Street drain can be discussed.

Must Remove Pumps.

Those in the city who have been ordered to remove their gas pumps from the streets will be given final notice that the pumps must be removed within ten days from the time of receiving notice or legal action will be taken. Mention was made of G. A. Gillespie and Vincent Eastwood to not give them the notice as at present they are constructing stations, and it is only a matter of a few weeks before they will have their pumps off the street. The others are still doing business and are making no movement to remove the pumps, although their lease has run out several months.

Alderman Hamilton, the chairman, instructed the Engineer and Street Commissioner to form some systematic way of sanding the streets in the city this year so that accidents may be reduced to the minimum. Alderman Green suggested that the city make representations to the Legislature to have the Act amended so that a person who is hurt in a fall on the street and intends to collect damages must give notice within two days of the time of the accident instead of seven as the Act now calls for.

Alderman Green brought up the question of re-levelling Confederation Square. Since the new sidewalks have been built, the level of the park is several inches lower than the sidewalks, and as the park is full of holes, he suggested that 200 loads of top filling be secured from the city's property near the Alladin Company and put in the park so that the surface will be levelled up. His suggestion will be acted upon this fall and the park put in excellent shape for next spring. The Mayor and Alderman Hamilton paid tribute to the manner in which the caretaker, D. Hayward, had kept the parks this summer. "Victoria Park was never in any better shape at this time of year. The leaves are all raked off and everything is ready for winter," declared Alderman Hamilton.

Several owners of illuminated signs in the city have failed to pay the taxes for the sign, and Mr. Parsons was instructed to give the owner final notice telling them that they must pay up before November 10 or action will be taken in the courts to collect.

Alderman Green was instructed to order shrubs to plant around the

LOVE ENTANGLEMENTS.

First Degree Murder is Charged, Heartbreaks and Entanglements Revealed.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 3.—South Bend's famous—and still unsolved—"torso murder" of years back threatens to be eclipsed in mystery and horror by what has been glibly designated the "fifty-dollar murder" of Genevieve Stults, beauty shop proprietor, and, there is evidence to show, something of a local Lorelei.

Three persons are in the Elkhart County jail at Goshen, charged with first degree murder. So far as the police and county prosecutor have revealed, only a filmy mesh of circumstantial evidence entangles these three. But in its pattern are the passion, repressions and heart-breaks which lead normal, controlled men and women into unaccustomed ways.

The Accused

Those accused of the murder are Charle Le Roy Reyher, who has admitted to a clandestine, though scarcely unknown, love affair with Mrs. Stults for the last four years; his wife, Janie, and Harvey Smith, whom Mrs. Reyher employed as a detective to trail her husband and Mrs. Stults. Mrs. Reyher charges, and Smith admits, she paid him a $50 retainer fee "to get Mrs. Stults out of town."

The story properly begins with that meeting four years ago between the comfortably well-to-do real estate broker and the pretty girl who earned a living for herself and her little daughter, Virginia, by her deftness with nail buffer and massage cream.

"Roy" Reyher was 37 years old then, the father of two stripping boys of high school age. His wife was seven years older than he, a woman, every other woman in South Bend will testify, wrapped up in her home, her husband, and her church.

Genevieve Stults was ten years younger than Reyher, and in course of terminating an unhappy early marriage by divorce.

"I don't know where we met," Reyher, now the bitterly self-reproachful penitent, said, pacing his jail cell. "We were both fond of life and gaiety. We liked to step out.

"I did only what every man does Only I got caught. And it's been a lesson to me. You can't violate the moral code and escape unscathed."

BOWLING CLUB BUYS PROPERTY

Organization Expects To Have Best Bowling Green in Eastern Ontario.

READY N 1930.

Peterborough Lawn Bowlers have purchased property for bowling greens from the Hatton estate at the corner of McDonnel and Walnut streets near the Bonner-Worth Mills. The purchase consists of twelve lots, six facing McDonnel street and the other six facing Walnut street. They have a frontage of 300 feet and a depth of 201 feet. Plans have already been drawn for the developing of the property into one of the finest lawn bowling greens between Toronto and Montreal.

The Club has endeavored for the last few years to secure new property. They waited for the city to develop James Stevenson Park, but there was such a hold-up and their property was getting too small at the corner of Aylmer and Brock streets, that it decided to purchase the lots in the west end of the city.

According to the plans a space of 50 feet, the entire depth of the lots, will be left for a club house. On

CHILDISH PLEA OF RAGGED BOY SAVES FAMILY

North Bay Is Stirred By Pitiful Tale of Half Starved Child.

FATHER IN JAIL.

Mayor Promptly Has Sick Mother and Children Put in Shelter.

NORTH BAY, Ont., November 3.—A childish plea of a rugged, barefoot urchin who walked a mile and a half through a bitter cold down to beg for food for a sick mother and four starving brothers and sisters has revealed one of the most pathetic cases in this vicinity in years.

The father has gone to Burwash for six months on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his children. He is George Boucher.

Last June the family moved into a miserable shack in West Ferris. Hard times came. Food? There was some, but it was rationed meagerly. The source of the next meal was always a question. Warm, sunny weather cared for the fuel problem.

Laughter Silenced.

July and August passed. The younger children played for they did not realize the serious situation confronting the struggling mother. And play took its toll of clothing. Everything went for food.

Voices lost their happy, childish laughter; little bodies grew thin. Maybe it would be a couple of crackers, a potato, and once in a while a bit of meat.

Mrs. Boucher lessened her own portions, gave all she could spare to her ravenous brood, for life was ahead for them and she had lived. More and more she gave that the terrible spectre of famine might be banished.

But even a mother's love is limited by bodily needs. September came, and with it illness, induced by worry and the lack of proper nourishment. Her spirit was crushed and she began to lose faith.

Unable to stand the pangs of hunger any longer, the boy, Charles, his feet unshod and the deadly damp of dawn penetrating his tattered clothes, started out for help. Hunger wracked his body at each step of the long mile and a half to town.

His appeal did not fall on deaf ears.

The pitiable condition of the lad and his tearful requests for help reached Mayor E. L. Banner. No time for red tape—the needs of humanity are above man-made laws; city boundaries do not exist in such cases.

Mayor Banner went at once to the miserable shack. He found the family living amidst absolute filth, with the self-denying mother bedridden and barely a vestige of food in the building.

The city magistrate broke the city regulations and ordered the Bouchers brought to North Bay. The mother was given medical care and much needed food. The children were fed, clothed and placed in the Children's Shelter.

DEATH REMOVES MRS. J. J. TURNER

Wife of Ex-Mayor J. J. Turner Passes Away This Morning.

FAILING HEALTH.

Fatal termination of a lingering illness early this morning, November 3, removed from the family of J. J. Turner, 515 Water Street, a beloved wife, and from the city, a woman whose endeavors in religious and community fields had won for her a lasting friendship and high regard among all classes.

The late Mrs. Turner, who, before her marriage, was Emma Todd, was born in Lakefield, and had lived in this district all of her life.

She was known to the many phases of the life of St. Luke's Church of this city, and it was only in January last that she was elected president of the Women's Auxiliary. The Y.W.C.A. and other community institutions knew her helpful influence as well.

Her sorrowing husband, ex-Mayor J. J. Turner, of Turner and Sons Ltd., mourns her passing, together with one daughter, Mrs. Kendall Doll, of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. Jas. Vincent, Harvey Street, Peterborough. The entire community extends sincerest sympathy to the bereaved.

The funeral will take place at 2 p.m. on Monday, November 5, from the family residence, 515 Water street, proceeding to St. Luke's church, where service will be conducted by the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, prior to interment in Little Lake cemetery.

Always Had Desire To Play Mouth Organ

That great men have their inhibitions, as well as lesser folk, was revealed at the concert in the Canadian Legion Hall last evening, when E. A. Peck, M.P., confessed to a suppressed desire to play the mouth-organ, cherished as a boy, and without any fulfilment up to the present time.

"I guess it's too late to learn now," said Mr. Peck, forgetting that Mr. Gladstone started in to learn Sanskrit at a much more advanced age than has yet been attained by the Member for West Peterborough.

BAND DELIGHTS BIG AUDIENCE

Harmonica Band Give Excellent Program in the Legion Hall.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

The zippy strains of "East Side, West Side," the romantic melody of 'Let Me Call You Sweetheart," the martial swing of "The Long, Long Trail," all echoed through the hall of the Canadian Legion last night, where the concert under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club was attended by a goodly crowd of people, almost filling the big hall to capacity and proving a very appreciative audience for every number on a very entertaining program.

There can be no doubt of the drawing power of a Harmonica Band, when one hears applause like that which greeted the efforts of C. S. Thompson's organization last night, getting repeated encores for their playing of popular music, that includes so many of the old favorites like "While We Go Marching Through Georgia," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "My Wild Irish Rose," "In the Good Old Summer time," "Pack Up Your Troubles," "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More" and all the other melodies that set feet tapping and heads nodding in rhythm as the bright, pulsating music poured out. From the tallest senior to the small lads of eight and nine years, they played manfully and well; their buoyant music, under the skillful direction of Mr. Thompson, was a very pleasing portion of last night's program.

President Joseph John acted as chairman, and during an intermission in the musical program, prizes for the contest in step dancing and harmonica playing, conducted in connection with the Kiwanis Club's Fair, were presented to the winners by E. A. Peck, M.P.

Congratulates Winners.

Mr. Peck, in a brief speech made in his usual pleasing manner, congratulated the winners of the prizes, and also spoke in laudatory terms of the excellent community work done by the Kiwanis Club, which, like other service organizations is doing so much good for the underprivileged child and for citizens who need assistance in various ways.

The musical program included accordeon selections by J. W. Parkins, who gave the snappy number, "Ukulele Lady," as an encore; a reading by J. John, in a very alliterative and amusing sketch about "The Two Bootblacks," and a harmonica trio composed of Joseph Wearing, C. S. Thompson and H. J. McCannon, with banjo accompaniment played by Frank Clarke. These gentlemen played the Hawaiian farewell, "Aloha Oe," and, in response to applause, gave a gay little Scotch tune, "There's Nae Luck About the House," singing and stepping in time to their brisk music.

New Rules Are Being Framed

Brokers May Be Required To Tell Names of Parties.

BLOCK LOOPHOLES.

Attorney General's Department Seeks Plan To Safeguard Unwary.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 3 (Special to The Examiner).—After a careful study into the methods of dealing in stocks on the Standard Mining and Toronto Stock Exchanges the Attorney-General's Department is understood to be preparing a number of trading regulations which will further help to protect the stock investing public.

One of the most important regulations that is being considered is one that will make it necessary for stock-brokers to notify their clients of all particulars regarding their transaction, including the person to whom the stock was sold or from whom it was purchased, and the time of the sale or exchange.

While this law operates in the State of New York and has worked out very successfully there, officials at Queen's Park state that brokers do not appear to be in favor of the plan.

It is unlikely that legislation regarding these changes will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature. The blue sky law, passed by the members of Parliament last February, will have these regulations added to it as soon as the registration of brokers has been completed unless some good reason is advanced why this should not be done.

Attorney-General W. H. Price has been devoting considerable attention to the methods of buying and selling stock in Ontario and is attempting to block any loopholes through which some dishonest broker might not give his client a fair deal.

At the present time the person who invests money in stock does not know who he traded with in securing his security or who he sold it to. Neither does he know what time the transaction takes place.

This information can be secured by looking up the stock exchange records but it necessitates a great deal of work and then the buyers and sellers of the stock dealt in are not always discovered.

Some complaints have also been made by investors that they asked for a stock to be bought at a certain time when it was selling at a low price. Frequently, it is claimed, the time they receive the next day will show that their stock was bought at a higher price than it was selling at when the order was given. The explanation given for this by stock-brokers is that they were unable to secure the stock at the low price. If the notice gives the time and individual whom he dealt with it would make him feel more secure and that his broker was not at fault, an official stated.

It is altogether likely that Ontario's regulation in this matter will be based upon that in force in New York at the present time.

This regulation reads: "A person engaged in the business of purchasing or selling as broker's stocks, bonds, and other evidences of debt of corporations, companies or associations shall deliver to each customer on whose behalf a purchase or sale of such security is made by him a statement or memorandum of such purchase or sale, a description of the security purchased or sold, the name of the person, firm or corporation from whom such securities were purchased or to which the same were sold on the day and the hours between which the transaction took place. A broker who refuses to deliver such statement or memorandum to a customer within twenty-four hours after a written demand therefor, or who delivers a statement or memorandum which is false in any material respect is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than one year or both."

Amnesia Victim Is Found in Houston, Texas, After Ten Year Search In All Parts Of Continent

COLDWATER, Kan., Nov. 3.—A strange mystery surrounds Clyde Guss, a young man who lost all memory of his past and is now learning all over that he has a mother and relatives, and that he was once a boy living here happy and carefree.

Guss left here ten years ago and joined the army. After the war he was in a wreck with several of his buddies and all were seriously injured. This occurred near Richmond, Va. Guss was taken to a hospital, where he remained for nearly a year. While in the hospital he forgot all of his past. In some manner he was given the name of Harry Miller by hospital attendants and that is the name he went by after getting out of the hospital.

He took up the trade of chef and worked at Pratt for nearly a year. During this time the sudden bid returned to him and he had many of his relatives.

Recently an uncle was in a cafe in Houston, Tex., saw young Guss and recognized him. He talked to Guss but the latter, while that was his name and could not speak a word German or make sense to his life prior to his injury in Virginia.

Shooting Follows Fight

BROTHER KILLED.

First Believed the Shooting Near Millbridge Had Been Accidental.

BELLEVILLE, Nov 3.—(Canadian Press).— Harry Henley, 12 years of age, whose home is near Millbridge, appeared to-day in police court before Magistarte W. C. Mikel, on a charge that "he did on October 31 unlawfully kill his brother, James Henle aged 15 years.'

The youth was not asked to plead and no evidence was taken, at the request of prosecution the lad was remanded until November 7, in the interim he will be confined in the Children's Shelter.

The shooting occurred at the Henley home when Mr. and Mrs. Henley were absent. In a statement made by James before his death, he stated the shooting was accidental, but the matter is being further investigated by the police.

Boys Quarrelled.

At first it was believed it was a case of accidental death, but a subsequent investigation by the provincial police yesterday resulted in the arrest of the younger boy. Sergeant Roy Clark of Belleville left for Millbridge, 40 miles north of here, to bring the youngster to Belleville.

According to the story told police here, the boys quarrelled during the afternoon of Monday, Oct. 31, and it is stated that James had thrown stones at his younger brother. The shooting is said to have followed the quarrel.

James died of the wound in the Belleville hospital eight hours after being admitted.

The inquest was opened Thursday night at Tickell's undertaking parlors and the father in his evidence, stated the gun was not loaded when the lads left the house for the field in the morning and further stated it had not been used for some months. Crown Attorney Bryson B Donnan at this juncture decided that a fuller investigation was necessary and he despatched the police to the scene of the shooting.

The funeral will take place at the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Henley, to-day.

The first story received from Millbridge was to the effect that the boys were cleaning the gun in preparation for a duck-hunting expedition. The mother was in Belleville attending a funeral when the shooting occurred. The father was absent in the fields.

LECTURER VISITS CITY

"A Bag of Folks" Is Subject of Lecture in Murray Street Church.

HUMOROUS INCIDENTS.

Coming to Peterborough under the auspices of "The Others" Class of Murray Street Baptist Church Sunday school, Thomas McGillicuddy, Lyceum and Chautauqua lecturer, entertained a fairly large audience in the auditorium of Murray Street Church last evening with his happy lecture on human nature—"A Bag Full of Folks."

A brief musical program was given in connection with the lecture, including a solo by Miss Blanchard of Trinity Church and organ numbers by Arthur Collison; Walter Kidd, in the capacity of chairman, introducing them.

Of the speaker he said but little, in the belief that Mr. McGillicuddy would recommend himself through his lecture, and this soon proved correct.

Happy in a world of humorous incidents, his address took the form that its title suggested and from his "Bag of Folks" Mr. McGillicuddy drew the social man, who is cheery and hospitable, as the first example of human nature.

Different Men

Then followed the Grouch, the Conceited man, the Negative man (who never has a mind of his own on any question), the Man who will attempt things; the Suspicious, man who would seem to have something crooked in his make-up; the Cheerful man who lives by the text found in Proverbs 17:22, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," and finally the Home, Church and Community Builder, who is capable of co-operating with his fellows; who is in step with them rather than maintaining his own independent opinion, right or wrong.

Mr. McGillicuddy advised his hearers of the merits and demerits of each of these examples of human nature, different as they are, and urged the Peterborough folk before him to be in step with all things for the good of the community, but most of all, in step with the great Captain in heaven.

Present among last night's audience was a deputation from Lindsay, as well as representations from the surrounding district of Peterborough, and all were sincere in their commendation of "The Others" class, for bringing such a speaker as Mr. Gillicuddy to Peterborough.

Friend's Confessions Frees Pal From Jail Receives Sentence Of Two Months In Jail

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Nov. 3.—A modern Damon and Pythias act was enacted in county police court here the other day when Joseph Von Poppell, a Belgian truck farmer, living near Port Stanley, was charged with having liquor for sale.

Von Poppell was in jail and was about to be brought before Magistrate Maxwell when his lawyer appeared and announced that the chief witness for the defense, Frank Verstraeten, had just admitted to him that he and not Von Poppell was the owner of the trouble-making liquor, and that he was prepared to assume the responsibility in court.

Two minutes later, Verstraeten was arraigned on a charge of selling, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two months hard labor in the Elgin County jail while Von Poppell walked out of the court-house, a free man.

Three hundred bottles of home brew found in the double house where Von Poppell and Verstraeten resided has been ordered destroyed.

CONFEDERATION SQUARE TO BE RE-LEVELLED

Two Hundred Loads of Earth Will Be Put in City's Park.

PUMPS MUST GO.

Board of Works and Finance Committee Meet in Committee Rooms.

The levelling of Confederation Square, the opening of tenders for the plowing of the snow off the streets and the giving of final notice to the gasoline pump owners who have not removed their pumps from the city streets were the principal matters discussed at the meetings of the Board of Works and Finance Committee of the City Council last night.

The whole appearance of Confederation Square is going to be changed when the level of the ground is raised several inches to bring it up to the same height as the sidewalks. The gasoline pump men who have been defying the order of the City Council to remove their pumps from the street will be given a final notice to get their property off the sidewalk in ten days or legal action will be taken.

Snow Plowing.

Tenders for the removing of the snow from the various streets in the city were opened and the contracts let. In district one, which is in the centre of the city, it will be looked after as usual by the Board of Works. M. W. Beebe and W. J. Stinson submitted tenders for district two, and Mr. Beebe was given the contract for $220(which was $20 lower than the price submitted by the other tenderer. Number three went to A. Deal for $200; number four to J. H. Bennett for $185; number five to W. J. Collins for $250; number six to H. Moncrief for $225; number seven to R. Mitchell for $149, and number eight to R. Mitchell for $144. In districts five and six there was only one man tendering in each, while in three, four and eight there were three and two each in two and seven.

Fred Rowan made application to have the sewer built on Roger Street between Hunter and Robinson in front of his property, as he is building three new houses. City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to have the same advertised under the Local Improvements Act.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to advertise for tenders for the machinery for the addition to the sewage disposal plant, and Mayor Denne was asked to make an appointment with the Minister of Highways when the Park Street drain can be discussed.

Must Remove Pumps.

Those in the city who have been ordered to remove their gas pumps from the streets will be given final notice that the pumps must be removed within ten days from the time of receiving notice or legal action will be taken. Mention was made of G. A. Gillespie and Vincent Eastwood to not give them the notice as at present they are constructing stations, and it is only a matter of a few weeks before they will have their pumps off the street. The others are still doing business and are making no movement to remove the pumps, although their lease has run out several months.

Alderman Hamilton, the chairman, instructed the Engineer and Street Commissioner to form some systematic way of sanding the streets in the city this year so that accidents may be reduced to the minimum. Alderman Green suggested that the city make representations to the Legislature to have the Act amended so that a person who is hurt in a fall on the street and intends to collect damages must give notice within two days of the time of the accident instead of seven as the Act now calls for.

Alderman Green brought up the question of re-levelling Confederation Square. Since the new sidewalks have been built, the level of the park is several inches lower than the sidewalks, and as the park is full of holes, he suggested that 200 loads of top filling be secured from the city's property near the Alladin Company and put in the park so that the surface will be levelled up. His suggestion will be acted upon this fall and the park put in excellent shape for next spring. The Mayor and Alderman Hamilton paid tribute to the manner in which the caretaker, D. Hayward, had kept the parks this summer. "Victoria Park was never in any better shape at this time of year. The leaves are all raked off and everything is ready for winter," declared Alderman Hamilton.

Several owners of illuminated signs in the city have failed to pay the taxes for the sign, and Mr. Parsons was instructed to give the owner final notice telling them that they must pay up before November 10 or action will be taken in the courts to collect.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

The zippy strains of "East Side, West Side," the romantic melody of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," the martial swing of "The Long, Long Trail," all echoed through the hall of the Canadian Legion last night, where the concert under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club was attended by a goodly crowd of people, almost filling the big hall to capacity and proving a very appreciative audience for every number on a very entertaining program.

There can be no doubt of the drawing power of a Harmonica Band, when one hears applause like that which greeted the efforts of C. S. Thompson's organization last night, getting repeated encores for their playing of popular music, that includes so many of the old favorites like "While We Go Marching Through Georgia," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "My Wild Irish Rose," "In the Good Old Summer time," "Pack Up Your Troubles," "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More" and all the other melodies that set feet tapping and heads nodding in rhythm as the bright, pulsating music poured out. From the tallest senior to the small lads of eight and nine years, they played manfully and well; their buoyant music, under the skilful direction of Mr. Thompson, was a very pleasing portion of last night's program.

President Joseph John acted as chairman, and during an intermission in the musical program, prizes for the contest in step dancing and harmonica playing, conducted in connection with the Kiwanis Club's Fair, were presented to the winners by E. A. Peck, M.P.

Congratulates Winners.

Mr. Peck, in a brief speech made in his usual pleasing manner, congratulated the winners of the prizes, and also spoke in laudatory terms of the excellent community work done by the Kiwanis Club, which, like other service organizations, is doing so much good for the underprivileged child and for citizens who need assistance in various ways.

The musical program included accordeon selections by J. W. Parkins, who gave the snappy number, "Ukulele Lady," as an encore; a reading by J. John, in a very alliterative and amusing sketch about "The Two Bootblacks," and a harmonica trio composed of Joseph Wearing, C. S. Thompjson and H. J. McCannan, with banjo accompaniment played by Frank Clarke. These gentlemen played the Hawaiian farewell, "Aloha Oe," and, in response to applause, gave a gay little Scotch tune, "There's Nae Luck Aboot the Hoose," singing and stepping in time to their brisk music.

New Rules Are Being Framed

BLOCK LOOPHOLES.

Attorney General's Department Seeks Plan To Safeguard Unwary.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 3 (Special to The Examiner).—After a careful study into the methods of dealing in stocks on the Standard Mining and Toronto Stock Exchanges the Attorney-General's Department is understood to be preparing a number of trading regulations which will further help to protect the stock investing public.

One of the most important regulations that is being considered is one that will make it necessary for stock-brokers to notify their clients of all particulars regarding their transaction, including the person to whom the stock was sold or from whom it was purchased, and the time of the sale or exchange.

While this law operates in the State of New York and has worked out very successfully there, officials at Queen's Park state that brokers do not appear to be in favor of the plan.

It is unlikely that legislation regarding these changes will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature. The blue sky law, passed by the members of Parliament last February, will have these regulations added to it as soon as the registration of brokers has been completed unless some good reason is advanced why this should not be done.

Attorney-General W. H. Price has been devoting considerable attention to the methods of buying and selling stock in Ontario and is attempting to block any loopholes through which some dishonest broker might not give his client a fair deal.

At the present time the person who invests money in stock does not know who he traded with in securing his security or who he sold it to. Neither does he know what time the transaction takes place.

This information can be secured by looking up the stock exchange records but it necessitates a great deal of work and then the buyers and sellers of the stock dealt in are not always discovered.

Some complaints have also been made by investors that they asked for a stock to be bought at a certain time when it was selling at a low price. Frequently, it is claimed, the price they receive the next day will show that their stock was bought at a higher price than it was selling at when the order was given. The explanation given for this by stock-brokers is that they were unable to secure the stock at the low price. If the notice gives the time and individual whom he dealt with it would make him feel more secure and that his broker was not at fault, an official stated.

It is altogether likely that Ontario's regulation in this matter will be based upon that in force in New York at the present time.

This regulation reads: "A person engaged in the business of purchasing or selling as broker's stocks, bonds, and other evidences of debt of corporations, companies or associations shall deliver to each customer on whose behalf a purchase or sale of such security is made by him a statement or memorandum of such purchase or sale, a description of the security purchased or sold, the name of the person, firm or corporation from whom such securities were purchased or to which the same were sold on the day and the hours between which the transaction took place. A broker who refuses to deliver such statement or memorandum to a customer within twenty-four hours after a written demand therefor, or who delivers a statement or memorandum which is false in any material respect is guilty of a misdeamenor punishable by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than one year or both."

Amnesia Victim Is Found in Houston, Texas, After Ten Year Sea rch In All Parts Of Continent

COLDWATER, Kan., Nov. 3.—A strange mystery surrounds Clyde Guss, a young man who lost all memory of his past and is now learning all over that he has a mother and relatives, and that he was once a boy living here happy and carefree.

Guss left here ten years ago and joined the army. After the war he was in a wreck with several of his buddies and all were seriously injured. This occurred near Richmond, Va., and he was taken to a hospital, where he remained for nearly a year. While in the hospital he forgot all of his past. In some manner he was given the name of Harry Milles by hospital attendants, and that is the name he went by after getting out of the hospital.

He took up the trade of chef and worked at Pratt for nearly a year. During this time the mother had searched in vain and so had many of his relatives.

Recently an uncle was in a cafe in Houston, Tex., saw young Guss and recognized him. He talked to Guss but the latter denied that was his name and could not recall a single instance or occurrence in his life prior to his injury in Virginia.

FOR GREATER SERVICE---UNITED TO SERVE

United Church Laymen Are Linked To Serve During Special Week

All Citizens Invited to Services With Opportunity to Hear Stirring Addresses on Spreading of Gospel Given by Prominent Visitors.

RELIGION NEEDED THROUGHOUT WORLD IS BURDEN OF MESSAGES FOR WEEK

Men's Associations of Six United Churches Hope to Have Edifices Filled by Citizens in Big Community-Wide Effort.

(By W.H.D.)

The Men's Association of the six United Churches in Peterborough hope to see several hundreds of laymen and women of this city filling our United Churches to the uppermost seat in the gallery each evening of the special week from Nov. 4 to 11.

The men behind this week are leaving no stone unturned to make this week as interesting as any other community effort held in this city in years.

When the audiences hear Charles H. Leslie, of Toronto, sing "Unto the Hill Do I Lift Up My Longing Eyes" as his opening number in Trinity Church on Monday evening, November 5, they will too resolve to attend every meeting until his closing hymn on Friday evening when he will sing "Faith Of Our Fathers" which will amply repay all for their earnest resolve.

Great Need For Religion.

Dr. Speer at the Laymen's Convention held in Toronto two weeks ago said: "We are told that the world does not want Christianity, and therefore we should not offer Him to the world. Is that a valid principle? Do we only trade where we are invited to trade? Did St. Paul wait for invitations to preach in the cities of the Roman Empire? he asked. "No and to-day we do not wait for an invitation. We are not imposing an alien religion on the people of the world. No matter of what race they have not their own religion now. No man has his own religion until he has Christ. We are carrying to all the world, all the world's religion. And their is no evidence that the heart of the world does not want Him. Never was there a day when the need of the world was clearer or more compelling."

Christianity Still Strong.

Come and hear the messages each evening beginning with Dr. Pidgeon on Monday night when he will deliver a special appeal to the young people of this city. Dr. Dimmett on Tuesday evening, has a special message to all church members, and on through the week each speaker in his own way will tell the story of a Christian religion that is reaching all people throughout the world.

We, the laymen of the six United churches ask for your heartiest co-operation during United Church Week. We hope you will plan to have your family represented each evening.

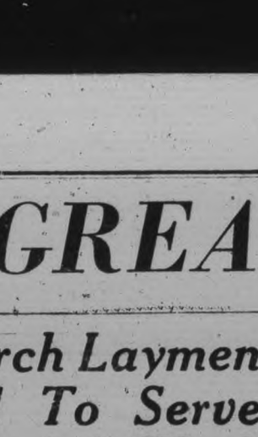
United in service to all.

Leader of the Congregationalis Churches of Canada for many year Rev. William T. Gunn, M.A. D.D., t the new Moderator of the United Church of Canada. His messages to the United Church, brief and personal, have been widely noted in the public press as models of simplicity and effectiveness and have created great anticipation wherever he is able to go in person.

Dr. Gunn is a quiet speaker, with a touch of humor in the midst of his seriousness, and his style betokens the editor rather than the orator. He combined the duties of secretary and editor in earlier days, and at present is editor of the United Church Record and Missionary Review. His duties also include the secretaryship of the United Church's committee on literature, publicity and missionary education. To all this his moderatorial duties are additional, but he is well accustomed to bearing many responsibilities without finding in that fact any reason for not bearing a heavy share of work on the platform and in the pulpit.

Dr. Gunn is thoroughly familiar with work in all parts of Canada, having travelled extensively, and recently made a tour of the United Church's mission in Central India.

FIRST MODERATOR.



In completeness of grasp of the life and work of the United Church of Canada, her first Moderator, Rev. George C. Pidgeon, D.D., of Toronto, is considered to have no superiors. In his presentations of the vision and task of the United Church, he has taken much time away from his important pastorate at Bloor Street United Church, one of the most strongly missionary congregations in the Dominion.

Chairman of several important boards of the Presbyterian Church, Moderator of the General Assembly and convener of the joint church union committee, he was well prepared by study of problems to give leadership in the first year of union. During his term as Moderator of the United Church he visited all parts of the Dominion and familiarized himself with the varied needsof home missions, social service and other undertakings which the Church had inherited.

In succeeding years and at the recent General Council the ex-Moderator was still a keen student of the latest phases of the work and proved himself willing to shoulder heavy responsibilities as administrator and speaker. His address on the mission and message of the United Church was one of the important utterances of the recent laymen's convention at Toronto.

A GIFT

We are drawing near to the Christmas season, and perhaps every one wants to make a gift. May we not consider as a gift one of the pearls of great price, the pearl of thinking courage for every one, the pearl of abandoning condemnation and pity for our fellows? Did not the universal Father speak through Jesus and say, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more"? Pity is like unto condemnation since it holds in bondage both the pitier and the pitied. It tends to make one attempt to excel at the expense of one's brother, rather than for the benefit of both. How many of us are being held back, through either pity or condemnation, from the true unfoldment of the divine in us? Sympathy, yes, but why pity.

Recently in this city there has been much ground broken for the erection of beautiful buildings. May not each one of us now in the closing days of 1928 break the ground of our hearts, the incrusted prejudices and fears of another's success, and be prepared at the beginning of 1929 to build therein an edifice of great beauty? This pearl of great price is a costly gift because of the great effort needed for permanent heart reconstruction. Yet who is to say that its fruits as a gift to humanity are not productive of lasting satisfaction and joy? Attend United Church Meet Peterborough and receive an inspiration for this Great Gift.

HIDDEN TREASURE

Dean Inge has a helpful suggestion in the idea that metallic ore is rarely found in a free state in nature. It is usually chemically combined with some other substance. Yet it is just as really present, and by proper processes of smelting it can be successfully extracted.

Your Christianity and mine is pretty well mixed with other and baser metals. With some of us it is one combination, with others another. The generous Christian is mindful not of the mixture which obscures the pure gold of Christian character, but of the fact that the gold is there, however covered up with other materials.

All of us have our faults. It is a good thing to think not about the faults of one another, but about that common striving after Christian character which makes it possible for us to supplement one another by our various Christian graces, and to offset the faults of one another by a process of friendly overlooking. Let us judge one another not by our foibles, but by the sincerity of our purposes, the genuineness of our aspirations.

The Measure of a Man.

True greatness cannot be covered up or concealed. It finds its way to the surface of him who possesses it, and it proclaims itself to all the world. Because it is so obvious, no man need declare himself great; no truly great man will make such a claim.

Greatness manifests in many ways. It shows forth in tenderness and in kindliness; it expresses in courage and in strength. Always it is a radiation from within and it is manifest in little things as well as in the great.

The true measure of a man is found in his ability to meet obstacles with confidence to overcome; in an inner spirit that shows consideration for others. In short, the measure of a man is his godliness.

Ministers Approve Week

Tell Great Opportunity That Laymen Have Prepared for City.

George Street United.

Two facts stand out worthy of mention, in the week of special services to be held in our City, under the auspices of the men's organizations of the United Churches:

First, that the movement is initiated, and is being promoted by the laymen of our church. Of course the minister is always interested in anything that promises a stimulus to the life of the Church; and generally speaking, the ladies of the Church also may be counted on for enthusiastic co-operation in anything that would give promise of human betterment; but when one finds the Laymen back of a movement such as we are about to hold in our city, it carries with it a significance and meaning that is full of rich possibilities.

Then, too, the list of speakers; there will be with us this coming week to address our meetings a group of clergymen so outstanding in character and so well known, nationally and internationally, as to give the man on the street pause. Surely we are being presented with an opportunity that should make a tremendous appeal to all who are interested in the great task of the building of the Kingdom of God in our midst.

S'g'd J. E. TODD.

St. James' United.

Accept a word of appreciation for this splendid suggestion that has come from the laymen of our churches. Suggesting a week of Prayer and Meditation—"A week with God and His great purposes."

We have had our week with our Industrial Fair and now a week Made-in-Canada Fair, or Kiwanis week. All very fine and have their place in making a great city.

But still there remains with us as we bend our ear to catch the cry of sorrow and anguish, of suffering and pain—not only from distant lands but from many of the homes and streets of our beloved city. This cry can only be answered by God. He alone is the Physician of all earth's woes.

2 Chron. 7:14—"If my people which are called by my name shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land."

Yes, we will join heartily with you in this great effort that God may get a chance.

Very sincerely
J. H. DUDGEON.

Trinity United Church.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, of international renown, is credited with the following statement—"If my Christ is not big enough to save the whole world He is not big enough to save me; if He is big enough to save the whole world, and if there is in my hand any power to help Him do it, I stultify my own faith, I deny my own discipleship if I withhold from the co-operation that I can give." That is a challenge from which for every professing Christian there is no escape. A few weeks ago the United Church ministers were asked by a group of young laymen for an opportunity to present during one week of preaching by outstanding ministers of our church, the supreme challenge of Jesus to meet the needs of our day and generation. With unbounded joy I will join with them in this great movement. The visiting clergymen for the week are among the most splendid leaders of our church. A better and a wiser selection could not be made. We pray that nothing may interfere with making these meetings a great success, that our whole church might join in all these services is our supreme wish.

D. WREN.

St. Andrew's United Church.

I am delighted to know that the laymen of the United Church in Peterborough are undertaking a week of special services in our city. This movement promises to be beneficial in many respects, of which space permits the mention of only a few.

1. The six United churches of the city will have it impressed upon them that each is a part of the life of the others and that all alike bear a common responsibility which extends beyond the boundaries of its own parish. This is an effort which can succeed only if each congregation assumes its share of work and of interest.

2. We shall have an opportunity to meet the men who are directing the policies of our church and our interest in any great movement is intensified when we are permitted to see and to hear and to shake the hand of those who, enjoying the confidence of their co-workers have been appointed to positions of leadership.

3. We shall have our thought directed to the larger aspects of the spiritual aims of our church. The speakers possess breadth of vision and loftiness of purpose so that, having been in their presence for an hour, we shall go away with an enlarged vision of the meaning of membership in the United Church of Canada and a new determination to assume the duties involved in our stewardship.

CHAS. V. McLEAN.

Mark Street United.

As ministers, we welcomed the advances of those earnest laymen who came to us with their proposal to commence the real progamme of our churches this fall with a special effort on their part at stirring our constituency to take a more direct and vital interest in the 'Big Business' for which all our churches exist, the building up of the Kingdom of God in our midst.

We commend most cordially the projected programme arranged by them for the week, November 4th-9th. It represents men's interest, particularly in men's spiritual welfare. They have enlisted the assistance of prominent and capable preachers to deliver the messages of inspiration, but we do not lose sight of the fact that it is a spontaneous movement of our laymen. Too often, perhaps, do our men excuse themselves by the reflection that this matter of religion is all very well for the women and the young folks. If so, they are challenged by this movement to consider if this is not the most important thing in life. The 'Work of the Lord' claims the attention and demands the loyal support of every man who desires the highest welfare not alone of himself, but of the world of people among whom he lives. Will men give heed to the call of other men? Let there be a genuine response to this challenge, and we will have this 'Big Business' set where it ought to be, foremost among life's chief interests.

United Church Week, in which addresses of an informing and inspiring character on the work of the United Church of Canada will be given each evening by one of four of the outstanding ministers of the church, and the singing led by Charles Leslie, an artist in solo singing and chorus leading, bids fair to be a long to be remembered week in the spiritual life of our city and surrounding community.

This was conceived and is being carried out by the Laymen's Associations of the six United churches of Peterborough. Had it been originated and undertaken by the ministers of these churches it would have been ordinary, but that the laymen should do so is extraordinary. The hearts of the ministers are warmed and stirred by this action of the laymen and it goes without saying that the ministers will follow the laymen's lead with wholehearted enthusiasm and high expectation and will do their best that all other functions may be sidetracked so that this week's program, November 4-11, will have the right of way.

A. E. THORNLEY.

The Love Of Christ

O Christ Thy love to all the world
Hath taught and conquered me,
Love makes obedience to Thy will
My perfect liberty.

O Christ that died for all the world
Teach me to sympathize,
That I too may love all mankind
In Godlike sacrifice.

O Christ that died for all mankind
Fulfil Thy victory
'Till all are subject to Thy sway,
And blest O Christ in Thee.

Peace Be Unto You.

Luke 24:36.

This would be a wonderful world if every one would carry the thought for others: "Peace be unto you." If each person sincerely desired that a radiation of peace should go forth from him he would pacify his own thinking and thus would speak only peaceful words and perform only peaceful deeds.

Too many of our words are uttered carelessly, without regard for the effect that they may produce on other persons. Often indeed the intent is to arouse people to anger or other forms of emotional expression, rather than to pacify them. Every transaction in human affairs will be handled with ease, harmony, joy, and mutual profit when each of the parties to it approaches the other with the fervent prayer, "Peace be unto you."

TELLS ABOUT MISSIONS.

First-hand knowledge of the world's mission fields is the basis of interesting and significant presentations of the present missionary situation of the Christian Churches by Rev. Alfred Gandier, M.A., D.D., LL.D., Ex-Moderator of the General Assembly and Principal of Emmanuel College, Toronto.

For fifteen years chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, the Principal acquired a vast knowledge of missions administration before going to the Orient on a tour which brought him into personal touch with the Christian and missionary leaders and with many leading Government officials. He visited China, Formosa, Korea and Japan in company with Rev. James Endicott, D.D., LL.D., then Moderator of the United Church of Canada.

Always an earnest and convinced advocate of Christian missions, Dr. Gandier has acquired a wealth of information which ranks him as one of the leading authorities on eastern problems in their relation to the Christian Church. He is of evangelical temper and an eloquent speaker, one who is ready to turn aside from important college duties in order to meet important calls for missionary addresses.

THE RING OF TRUTH

There is something about the sincere Christian that always rings true. His words carry conviction, because they spring from the spirit of truth within him, they are uttered with authority and they command both the attention and the respect of those who hear them.

The true Christian in his every act radiates an atmosphere of confidence and trust. He attracts good by his radiation of sincerity. His whole attitude corroborates and confirms the words that he utters.

To speak with authority one must be aware of a constant contact with divine principle. This realization in Jesus Christ was the foundation of the authoritative way in which He spoke. To the degree that His followers develop the same realization, they will speak as men having authority.

THE WAY

"Once as I toiled along the world's lone way,
I longed to lift each fellow-pilgrim's load,
I yearned to smooth all obstacles away
And make the journey one glad holiday.
Now, that so much of life's long path is trod,
I better know the purposes of God.
As I come nearer to the final goal
I grasp the meaning of the Over-Soul.

This is the message as it comes to me—
Do well the task thy Maker set for thee.
Cheer the despairing—ease his load a bit,
Or teach him how he best may carry it.
But do not lift it wholly, lest at length
Thy too great kindness rob him of his strength.
He wrongs his brother who performs his part—
Wake thou the sleeping Angel in each heart."

Teaching, Preaching and Healing.

The United Church of Canada is "Teaching . . . Preaching . . . and Healing" (Matt. 4: 23), in Angola, Portuguese West Africa. There are 24 Missionaries and 200 Native Workers at work in Three Central Stations (Chissamba, Camundongo and Dondi), 150 Out-Stations and Two Training Institutes.

In Japan.

Evangelistic, Educational and Social Service Work is carried on in 11 Central Stations, and 100 Out-stations by 82 United Church of Canada Missionaries and 160 Japanese workers.

In Training for Christian Service.

The United Church of Canada has a splendid asset in her schools and colleges, which have been placed with statesmanlike sagacity at strategic points all along her far-flung battle line from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Vancouver, British Columbia.

The fifteen theological colleges are being rapidly consolidated at eight centres. There are three Arts Colleges at Sackville, Toronto, and Winnipeg, and thirteen residential Secondary Colleges.

The Arts and Theological Colleges represent in lands and buildings about $4,000,000, and in endowments, $5,400,000.

The Secondary Colleges are valued at $3,500,000, with endowments of $300,000, so that the college assets of the United Church reach the impressive aggregate of over $13,000,000.

The combined staff of teachers and professors numbers over 300, and the students enrolled about 7,000, of whom 425 are candidates for the ministry, 1,400 are Arts students, and 5,500 are in the Secondary Colleges.

Of the 425 candidates for the ministry at college, about 160 are pursuing courses in Theology, and the remainder are taking their Arts work. In addition to these there is a large number of students attending the Universities who have decided to enter the ministry, but have not yet been definitely received as candidates by Presbyteries.

Some Building Material.

The spirit of good will characterizes all my dealings with my fellow men.

We often deal with our fellow men in an apparently friendly and cordial manner, as a matter of outer policy, while at heart we are in reality harboring malice or resentment toward them. For a limited time, such outward show may deceive them and accomplish our purpose, but ultimately our true feelings are certain to come to the surface and they will neutralize the effects of the seeming friendliness that we have manifested.

Good will is an asset in business only to the degree that it is spontaneous and is the reflection of a sincere heart interest. Good will comes from the feeling nature, and is not merely the expression of a mental attitude. It has its origin in a genuine love for God's children and it goes out as the result of a desire to establish a sense of oneness with them. It is never prompted by selfishness and it is not measured or influenced by any thought of return.

Good will is not limited or exclusive; it is manifested freely toward high and low alike. It magnifies the interest in small transactions and it establishes an equality and a unity of thought and purpose that relieve the strain and the pressure that are sometimes associated with dealings of great importance.

The use of a statement that encourages good will, teaches us to examine ourselves to find the inner motive that prompts our acts, and brings out into greater expression the divine love in our natures.

OTHERS

Everything that I do for others reacts to my benefit.

To rise above selfishness and narrow personal ambition it is necessary to recognize that the interest of every individual is inseparably wrapped up in the interests of all.

There is a natural desire in the heart of the average person to do something for others. This is evidenced by the interest that is shown in times of emergency, when total strangers rush to the aid of those in need. The only thing that keeps this distinctive desire from bringing about full and constant cooperation is the repeated cropping forth of a fear that man's first effort should be for himself. This fear has grown in the minds of the race until it has become almost an obsession.

The use of a statement that recognizes and emphasizes the mutuality of human interests helps to abolish such a fear, it brings back to man the joy of service and impresses upon him the fact that his efforts for the universal good are not wasted.

The repetition of the statement should be followed by action that is in accord with the statement. That is, the word should be made flesh, by being transmuted into action. Our words always acquire force by being acted upon, for the action lends to them a reality that they may not otherwise convey to us.

AN EVERYDAY RELIGION

The doctrine of the Carpenter of Nazareth was essentially a working man's religion. It was an everyday affair, to be practiced at the work bench and in the home as well as in the synagogue. It glorified not riches nor temporal power, but service, sacrifice, the decent and honorable life which would not only gain a reward in a future existence but would make for real happiness and good citizenship here. It was practical, workable; that is why it appealed to practical, working folk and why it appealed to hard-headed men, without the benefit of the emotional frenzy or the crude magic of some other religions. Christianity is a religion that wears, that is for the drab and average moments as well as for the moments of emotional exaltation.

Carrying his messages home to his hearers on the wings of wit and humor, Rev. J. W. Pedley, B.A., D.D., is one of the most popular ministers-at-large in the United Church of Canada. He was made President of the Toronto Conference in the early and more trying days of union and quickly won his way to the hearts of ministers and officials on the difficult and remote fields.

Dr. Pedley is one of a family of preachers who grew up in one home near Cobourg, Ont., and went out to secure the best educational training for the ministry that Canada's universities had to offer. They later made their mark in the Congregational Churches of Canada and the United States as prophetic and pastoral preachers of great acceptance. Dr. James Pedley knows Canada's cities well from earlier experience, while since union he has come to know the needs of the northern missions. He is well-known as a speaker to men and always has a virile message of Canadianism and spirituality, well graced with a humor that masks a great seriousness and lofty patriotism. There is nothing of the ecclesiastic about him, but his love for the Church is deep and he has strong faith in her mission to the world of to-day.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

GOD BLESS THE SALVATION ARMY! As a religious and social organization it is unique. It deserves the best every devout soul can do for it. And as I set out to write my third and last article, in the attempt I have made to review "Herbert Booth" from the pen of Ford C. Ottman, I am profoundly convinced that what the Army needs at this time more than anything else is that we should pray for it and its future. No thoughtful person can read this very remarkable biography without feeling that there is a steadily rising current of desire for a change in the governing policy of the Army. If recognized by those in command and the changes desired graciously granted, brighter and better days are ahead of the Salvation Army than the brightest and best it has yet seen. On the other hand, if this increasing demand within the Army be not granted, it makes one sad to think of the possible upheaval and set-back which may result from such a denial. Great is the responsibility of those in command.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

As the writer of this biography traces the steps which led to the parting of the ways we can see that Herbert Booth's devotion to his father was beyond question. High-spirited like his father, he was quite as insistent at times in defending any position he felt compelled to take for conscience sake; yet he seldom took issue with him in matters of first importance.

"The General believed that the only way the Army's unity could be conserved was through the centralization of power with the ultimate seat of authority vested in its ruling head. Unrestricted irresponsibility so wisely exercised by him, but so violated in its perpetuation, as repeatedly stated, has been the source of enormous loss to the Army, has alienated much of public sympathy, has sapped the spiritual strength of the soldiers, and has driven from the ranks many noble adherents who, but for that policy would have given a life's devotion to the Army's advancement. It is to the everlasting credit of Herbert Booth that he saw that evil, protested against it, and labored ceaselessly to bring about a reformation. He recognized the possible utility of a 'one man' government and did not hesitate so to affirm."

"His complaint was against an unmodified absolutism that reduced delegated authority to servile subjection."

No doubt the writer has been careful to satisfy himself that he was making no rash statements when he informs us that the present officers, if released from their vows and permitted free expression of their opinion, would register a protest as emphatic as that of Herbert Booth. He must be sure of his ground when he adds:

"Of such officers some have already expressed their convictions and at a personal cost that only themselves know"

TWO GODLY WOMEN.

Like many others, it is never easy for me to go contrary to my inclination. I am strongly tempted just now to write at length about Mrs. Herbert Booth and her close, constant friend, Annie Ethel Lane. What these two women meant to each other and to Herbert Booth during the most tragic hours of his life no one will ever be able to tell.

To read the record of these two Godly women and the part they played in the life and labors of this brilliant son of General Booth and not be deeply moved would be an impossibility for anyone with a heart of flesh. If you want to get a bit of romantic religious history get the biography and read it for yourself. All the better it will be if you will at the same time read between the lines! But I must deny myself the pleasure of dwelling upon this part of the book.

THE PAIN OF PARTING.

There are three chapters which ought to be read, pondered and prayed over by every officer in the Salvation Army. These are entitled "At the Crossroads," "The Resignation," and "The Crisis at the Collie." If the contents of these chapters had been made public when the break came that separated father and son, who can tell what the outcome might have been for the Army which they both so deeply loved. That their contents should be laid bare now will be satisfactory to every unprejudiced person, whether in the Army or out of it.

In a long letter to his father, written in Australia, and dated February 3rd, 1902, among other things he says: "We must sorrowfully admit that after the greatest thought and sincerest prayers we have come to the conclusion that the present method of Army administration will no longer commend itself to our judgments nor is it in harmony with the dictates of our consciences."

As he brings this letter to a close he pens some words which must have caused him to sweat as it were great drops of blood. Surely it was the cry of a broken heart!

"Farewell then, dear General!

None can ever know the bitterness of the anguish through which we have passed in coming to this decision. Almost countless have been the hours spent in prayers and tears, here in this lonely bush, with groaning that cannot be uttered. But we are convinced, and being convinced, we are resolved. Feeling as we do, it is better—it is imperative—that we should part. But though we part we shall ever pray that the blessing of God may be upon you and that we may meet once more an unbroken family in Heaven, with darling mother, to sing around the throne.

"Your broken-hearted son and daughter."

RED-TAPE AND DEATH.

Who can understand the workings of Providence? If Catherine Booth had only been alive when this crisis came how different it might have been. I believe she would have found ways and means to have prevented the break between the General and the Commandant. But she had gone to her reward and it seems as if it had to be.

Who was responsible for the humiliation thrust upon Herbert Booth at his father's funeral? Was it the red-tape of Army regulations that made it necessary? No satisfactory explanation has yet been given as an excuse for the humble place Herbert Booth was compelled to take among the mourners that followed the remains of William Booth to the grave. Why did the present General forget, or seem to forget, that he too was a son and brother before he was General?

When we read of some of these things it is small wonder that "the man in the street" does not feel strongly drawn to the Christian Religion. If the Son of God could greet Judas with a kiss and call him friend —and on the cross cry "Father forgive them," surely a brother, nursed at the same breast, could have overlooked all differences and disappointments and permitted a son to take his proper place at the funeral of his father! Surely it was known that Herbert Booth had never for a moment weakened in his allegiance to the spirit of the Army. Until the day of his death he never permitted himself to say a word in depreciation of it. He loved it as strongly and sincerely as he loved its Founders. His fight was for a principle. And for that principle he sacrificed a career such as he could never hope to equal elsewhere.

IN CONCLUSION.

We have said nothing of his very successful labors after he left the Army. God used him in Australia, South Africa, the United States and Canada, in Great Britain and other lands in a most remarkable way. In a day not far distant multitudes will rise to call him blessed!

Till his dying day he was thinking of and praying for the Salvation Army. Writing to an old comrade he says: "I can see that the long forseen outburst is on the horizon and nothing can stop it. But all depends on the fearlessness of a few leaders. Without that the ferment will go under, only to re-appear later on."

In another communication he states:

"The future government of the Salvation Army will have to be faced. It is now too vast and too rich to be left entirely in any one man's hands; especially under the present Deed Poll in London, which is a very loose affair. While the present General lives, and is not incapacitated by old age, all will be well, but after him! Well, the system that has been universally introduced of 'boards' and 'committees' and contrivances for restricting everybody's powers but the powers of the General and his immediate supporters in London will have to be introduced there as well. Commissioners will demand that they too should have a voice in the running of the international affairs and expenditures of the Salvation Army. I saw this twenty-five years ago and gave up my position and opportunity in the Army to insist upon it in my letter of resignation."

This is a book for the times, and I make bold to predict that it will play an important part in the future of the Salvation Army. Herbert Booth may be dead, but in this biography he will continue to speak to the present and the coming generations.

The Minister Remarks—

—Take care that you don't forfeit your chance in life by failure to have your wits about you.

—What's the use of living in the country if, when you gaze at the beauty of the world, you only think of the price of potatoes or eggs?

—It is a tragedy when clever people are too dull to comprehend the true significance of life.

—Don't be like the mule in a treadmill, who never moves outside his beaten track nor thinks beyond his trough of corn.

TELL US A STORY

WHEN Madame Guyon was imprisoned in the Castle of Vincennes, in 1695, she not only sang, but wrote, songs of praise to God. "It sometimes seemed to me," she said, "as if I were a little bird whom the Lord had placed in a cage, and that I had nothing to do but sing. The song of my heart gave a brightness to the objects around me. The stones of my prison looked in my eyes like rubies. My heart was full of that joy which God gives to all that love Him, in the midst of their greatest crosses." This lovely sentiment she embodied in a touching little poem which begins thus:

"A little bird I am,
Shut from the fields of air;
And in my songs I sit and sing
To Him who placed me there;
Well pleased a prisoner to be,
Because, my God, it pleaseth Thee."

A Pen Picture

WHAT a picturesque village! and what beautiful views! Situated on such high ground it must be healthy as well as pretty. What are those men doing at the entrance of the place? Twelve persons are seated on the ground, but one of them is doing most of the talking. They cannot be overcome by the heat, for yonder is a well where they could refresh themselves if necessary.

Let us try and find out what they are talking about. You notice that kindly-looking man is evidently making some sort of proposal to one of the party, and the latter appears quite satisfied with the suggestion; but see—the first speaker quietly makes another remark and the listener's countenance changes; something like alarm is in his eyes—no, no, he rejects the offer which a moment since he was quite willing to accept; now all the eleven men are listening attentively to the first speaker, and they are watching him, too; what is he doing to one of his feet? A crowd is gathering and listening approvingly to the kindly man, who lifts his voice and speaks so that all may hear; they answer in cheery tones giving a cordial assent, and I cannot help thinking that I see some female faces peeping from the latticed windows with keen feminine interest.

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Acts 9.

I hope that many will try to discover the key to this week's picture. You need not look beyond the first eight books of the Old Testament.

What Think Ye of This?

SEVEN primary colors give all the glory to the covenant bow in the cloud. They represent all the shades of beauty. Seven great affirmations represent the sum total of Christian doctrine. The simplicities of the Christian faith are quite as wonderful as its complexities. In seventeen words the supreme finalities of the Christian faith may be stated:

GOD IS	GOD CAME
GOD CREATED	GOD REDEEMED
GOD SPAKE	GOD IS HERE

GOD IS COMING AGAIN

Here we have the seven segments of the complete circle of Christian doctrine.—"The Seven Finalities of Faith."

Matters Of Opinion.

IT is said of two great men that they spent a night in each other's company sitting before an open fire and smoking their pipes without exchanging a single word. And when the time arrived for them to take his departure, as they shook hands and said goodbye, the remark was made, "We have had a grand nicht!"

I don't smoke, but I often find myself where smokers are and I have noticed that the silence of the two great men is not repeated in the smoking compartment of a Pullman coach. When men gather there the "weed" seems to loosen their tongues and you can hear all sorts of likes and dislikes expressed as opinions. There is no attempt to draw a distinction between an opinion and a like or a dislike.

I may like peaches best of any fruit, but it does not follow that I must think peaches to be the best fruit. That a man loves a woman it does not necessarily follow that he must think her the handsomest woman in the world.

Opinion is that regarding which I endeavor to give reason why all men should think as I think. Loving, or liking, on the other hand, is something regarding which I look after the pleasing of myself.

If this distinction were clearly understood and carefully drawn in civic, political, social and religious affairs, it might lead to a larger tolerance and a closer harmony. —A. F.

Give Me Also Springs of Water

THE petition of Achsah, and Caleb's granting of it, while but a fragment of the history of those days, explaining how it came to pass that her descendant should be in possession of that land and its water-courses, is also illustrative of a great principle of life, in respect to men's relationship with God. For Caleb dealt with her request as God deals with those of His people. He gave her more abundantly than she had asked. And God's answers to our prayers are always larger than the suggestions we venture to make to Him. He edits our petitions in the spirit of generous love, and interprets our desires in their best meanings. For His apprehension of our need is infinitely greater than our own; and so He blesses His people according to His own foreknowledge and love.

We honor God when we ask great things of Him. It is of the essence of child-like trust that we make our petitions large. Yet even so they are always far smaller than His purpose of goodwill toward us. His gifts are always worthy of Himself. What an encouragement is this to the consciously needy soul! We may always trust the love of the Father to supply all our need "according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." And from His grace there flow streams which irrigate and fertilize the whole area of life. It is, therefore, in the nature of a condemnation that our lives should be arid and barren, and that we should be in any degree satisfied to have it so. For if we have not it is surely because we ask not.

—J. Stuart Holden.

PEDANTRY

Pedant is a bookish thing
That makes a mighty clamour
To plait a wreath from dead men's bones,
And strangle thought in grammar.

We all need to learn that accomplishment and relative perfection in the spiritual life, as in every other matter, is the result, not of haphazard and spasmodic effort, but of careful cultivation and training. —Graham Scroggie.

Potential Possibilities

NEVER, never, never despise a thing because it is small. I can still remember the vague feeling of wonder in my heart when, as a child, I said over those old-fashioned lines:

"Little drops of water, little grains of sand
Make the mighty ocean and the pleasant land."

It always seemed to me that it ought to have been just the reverse. I know better now, and I take off my hat to all little bits of things,—little brooks, little eggs, little microbes, little boys, and little girls not because they are little, but because of what is tucked away out of sight in their littleness. When some one disparaged a boy because he was little, Daniel Webster said: "It is out of such things that men are made." The littlest, puniest child in that class of yours may some time sit in a presidential chair or judge angels. Be careful how you treat him.

"Separate Me Barnabas and Saul"

SOONER or later every individual gets sifted out of the crowd. A man is a unit, not a part of a mass. An apple lies down at the bottom of a barrel, lost in the pile, but by and by its turn comes to be taken out and peeled and eaten—all alone. A little boy at first cannot distinguish his own identity. He is swallowed up in the unity of the family; then he is detached, and sent to school. Now he is a part of a throng of happy youngsters; but suddenly he is wrenched out of these relationships, and stuck behind a counter, or into an elevator, or into a street car, and at last he is an individual! And so the process of separation goes on. We are sifted, culled out, selected, set apart. It is serious business, this "treading the wine-press of life" alone. But God has called us to our own work, and not to another's. All hail the day, then when He comes and takes us, and says, "Stand here! Go there!" —C. F. G.

Get close to Moses, Elijah, Paul, Savonarola, Luther, Lincoln—abobe all to Jesus Christ. He has made more hearts "burn" than all the rest together.

NOT YET CONQUERED.

Probably the most significant feature of the exploits of the Graf Zeppelin is the fact that the double trip across the Atlantic has convinced its master, Dr. Hugo Eckener, that the ocean has not yet been conquered by aircraft.

"We must have faster and stronger airships if we want to carry a regular passenger service," is Dr. Eckener's belief, and this opinion is shared by British engineers, who declare that until it is possible for such airships to buck adverse winds at a high rate of speed they cannot hope to compete successfully against the oceanic steamship service.

The Graf Zeppelin was responsible for the breaking of a number of records, and her performance was in many respects a remarkable one, but it revealed weaknesses as well as strength, and has convinced experts that it will be necessary to build constructionally strong dirigibles and increase their engine power before air liners will provide a regular passenger service over the ocean.

However, the Graf Zeppelin has added much to aeronautical knowledge, and further progress will likely be achieved when Britain's giant dirigible assays the Atlantic passage next year.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Premier Mackenzie King has issued a statement in regard to the observance by the people of Canada of the two-minute silence at 11 o'clock on the morning of November 11th, which this year falls upon a Sunday.

The Premier's message concludes as follows:

"It is suggested that wherever possible church services should begin at such hours as may be convenient in order to insure that there shall be a pause in the service at 11 a.m. for observation of the period of silence."

It is to be hoped that there will be general compliance with the Premier's request.

It is obviously difficult to properly observe the two-minute silence at the hour named if church services do not begin until their usual time, 11 o'clock, and it should be possible without a great deal of trouble or inconvenience to change the hour of service to make it practicable to carry out the King's request.

Premier King's statement should be acted upon wherever possible.

TOO MANY ACCIDENTS.

The industrial accident record in Ontario last month as revealed by reports made to the Workmen's Compensation Board is serious enough to justify the consideration of manufacturers, their employees and the public generally.

Altogether there were 8,278 accidents during the month, of which 51 were fatal.

This total was 256 more than in August of this year, which showed the highest previous record since the commencement of the Act, and nearly 1,600 more than the number during October, 1927.

The benefits awarded amounted to the large sum of $707,471.31, made up of $592,816.84 for compensation and $114,654.47 for medical treatment.

These figures are startling.

An average of over 300 accidents every working day for a month in Ontario is high enough to arrest general attention.

Industrial accidents are expensive, and they involve much suffering and distress.

How many of those 8,278 reported in this Province last month could have been avoided?

How many of them were caused by carelessness on the part of the worker, and how many were due to unsafe working conditions and to inadequately protected machinery?

These are questions that deserve consideration in view of October's record.

THE NEW PERMITS.

Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Liquor Control Board has announced that the new book form permit, which provides space for 234 entries, will represent a year's purchases, and that only one permit will be issued to each patron of the Government liquor stores.

"We think there is plenty of space in one of these permits for any man's buying for a whole year," declares Sir Henry, and the majority of people will agree with him.

In fact, there will be many who will feel that purchases could be cut down much below the 234 entries for twelve months, and still leave much to be desired from a control standpoint.

The new permits, however, should make it possible to correct conditions that have prevailed under the system first adopted, making it possible for purchases to be much more closely scanned, while the regulation requiring the applicants for permits to give their occupation and the name of their employer will serve as a further check upon buying in the case of those who are purchasing for illegal purposes.

Sales in some cases have been unjustifiably large, but Control Board employees will from now on be in a better position to prevent abuses of the Act.

CURING INSANITY.

Recent experiments looking toward the cure of insanity, performed by doctors of the University of Wisconsin, are very interesting. In two cases, persons considered hopelessly insane were awakened from stupors which were the chief symptoms of their insanity, by means of inhaling a gas. Both were able to talk rationally, answer questions intelligently and move and act normally. But the method, while hopeful, cannot be considered a complete cure as yet, the university doctors emphasized.

Dr. William Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., is authority for the statement that, although present-day medicine has been very effective in combatting many diseases, insanity seems to be on the increase, and this he blames on modern conditions—our swift age.

Thus the study of insanity and its causes becomes increasingly important, for if our present-day methods of living are going to produce an increasingly large number of insane persons, we ought to exert ourselves to find means for the prevention and cure of the marked mental abnormalities which unfit their victims from participation in society.

The approach made by the University of Wisconsin experimenters is faced on the theory that mental derangements have their root in something wrong in the bodily chemistry, and it would seem from the results obtained that there is much truth in that. But there is also another theory as to the cause of insanity and, in fact, of all sorts of diseases that afflict the human race—that these come from something wrong with the flow of mental energy with which all of us are held endowed. There is much promise in work along this line, also. Perhaps the solution of the problem will come from a common-sense union of the two methods.—Border Cities Star.

A GREAT EMPIRE BUILDER.

Two centuries ago to-morrow the greatest of ocean explorers, Captain James Cook, R.N., was born. He was the son of an agricultural laborer at Marton, in Yorkshire, and from that humble origin Cook went round the globe and aided materially in establishing the Empire which since has become so broad, so powerful and so influential for good. Just at the time that the American Colonies were being lost to Britain this gifted and audacious son was planting the flag in the Southern seas and promoting British interests in North America, east and west.

It was Cook who charted the waters around Nova Scotia and in the St. Lawrence, and in the latter prepared the way for the fleet which bore Wolfe westward for the capture of Quebec. In 1778, a few months before he was killed by natives in the Sandwich Islands, Cook landed at Nootka Sound, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, a harbor which was later the scene of a celebrated clash with the Spaniards. More intimate still for this part of Canada is the fact that when Governor John Graves Simcoe established Toronto, in the fall of 1793, he brought a tent procured in London from the effects of Captain Cook, and in this "canvas house" he and his talented wife lived during their first winter at the future capital of Ontario.

Cook went to sea as a boy, and after some years in the Baltic he enlisted in the navy in 1755, the year of the expulsion of the Acadians from Nova Scotia. He rose rapidly in the service, and before long was surveying the St. Lawrence and adjacent waters. His greater opportunity came with his expedition of 1768 around Cape Horn, ostensibly to secure astronomical information at Tahiti. Before he returned, in 1771, he had explored much of Australia and New Zealand, of which he was virtually the discoverer, a fact which has treasured his name in those great Dominions. During his second voyage he encircled the earth on or near the Antarctic Circle, though his men suffered great hardship from scurvy. In his last voyage he sought the Northwest Passage, and sailed back and forth in the North Pacific.

The comparative ease with which the world's extremities are now reached makes almost commonplace the achievements of the early navigators if repeated today, but time cannot rob Captain Cook of his just fame as the greatest of navigators and ocean explorers.—The Globe.

CANADIAN BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

With harvesting completed, or nearing completion, throughout the country, the farmers are engaged in fall ploughing and in the preparation of the land for the crop of 1929. The Canadian wheat crop as a whole has been the largest on record, amounting to about 575 million bushels.

An average of the crop estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the Manitoba Free Press and the North West Grain Dealers' Association indicates that crops of the three Prairie Provinces will amount to 540 million bushels of wheat, 315 million bushels of oats, 115 million bushels of barley, 15 million bushels of rye, and 4 million bushels of flax. Although August frost damaged the wheat in Saskatchewan and Alberta to a substantial degree, preliminary statistics indicate that wheat will grade much better than in 1927-28 and that protein content will be exceptionally high. The early harvest has permitted rapid movement of the wheat toward the seaboard and some congestion is reported at the terminals. Even though prices should remain somewhat lower than last year, the price factor will be largely offset by the large size and good quality of the crop.

In the other Provinces the season has been normally satisfactory for agriculture. In British Columbia, the apple crop has been heavy, and though the price of apples is lower than in 1927, the fruit growers are expecting a profitable return. The October movement of apples from Vancouver to the United Kingdom and to the continent is likely to establish a new record.

In Ontario and Quebec, crops have proved more satisfactory than was first anticipated. A late spring retarded farm work, but exceptionally favorable weather during the summer improved conditions substantially. Reports from the Maritime Provinces indicate that the potato yield will be above the average, in spite of the blight which appeared in Prince Edward Island. Apples are of good quality, but in both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia a smaller crop than last year is anticipated. —Royal Bank Report.

Toronto will tender a reception to Premier King when he visits the Royal Winter Fair. It took the Queen City authorities some time to realize that they owed a duty to the head of the Government, even if he happens to be the Liberal leader.

A Thought

ANOTHER HUMAN MISPRINT

As the world wags, I can think of no human being meaner and more contemptible than the wrecker of reputations, commonly called the gossip, but there is another human misprint that is about as despicable and he is the hypocrite.

Any self-respecting person hates the hypocrite, because the hypocrite is not what he seems.

It's a pretty tough situation to lose the regard of right citizens and the rememberance of the Creator.

You know the kind of a man I mean. He is the hearty hand-shaking hypocrite—the professional palaverer—the over-nice-to-your-face fellow, or the false and feigning cuss who insults your intelligence and then rubs the insult in.

The man who does his dirty political stuff—his fraternal, social, or personal sleight of hand, and then, when you win, he hurries to smother you with his hypocritical smoosh.

The Dramatic Story of a Gruelling Test of the World's Finest Motors in which ONLY ONE survived

AT the Motordrome Nationale, Paris . . . the world's finest motors submitted to a block test of 240 hours . . . under the supervision of the French Government.

Hour after hour, with throttles wide open . . . with no adjustments or repairs permitted . . . they roar out their songs of power. One by one they break under the terrific strain . . .

No test ever conceived could be more gruelling. None more certain to reveal every defect in mechanism, material, design.

Finally one motor alone is running . . . sweetly, smoothly as ever . . . the Knight entry!

Now come the closing hours! The foremost automotive and aviation engineers of Europe, stop watches in hand, stand silently around. The motor is throttled down—then jerked wide open—instantly the power-flow responds . . . The Knight entry finishes the 10 days of uninterrupted running, developing 550 horse-power at 1800 revolutions per minute . . . and true to its tradition, becoming smoother, sweeter, quieter as it runs.

The Climax of the Test

When the engine had cooled, skilled mechanics took it apart, piece by piece, examining every smallest part for the least flaw or sign of wear. They found none! Their report proved that this engine, without a minute's time for attention, could have been restarted on a similar test at once!

The Knight engine won—hands down—and the secret lies in the simplicity and efficiency of its patented sleeve-valve principle.

The Simplicity of Sleeve-Valves

In the patented sleeve-valve engine of the Willys-Knight, there is nothing to adjust. Nothing to replace or repair . . . No carbon to remove . . . No valves to grind . . . Simply two single sleeves in each cylinder working smoothly, silently, up and down, one within the other, in a protective film of oil . . . that is all

For fine automobiles, the ultimate engine is the simplest engine. And the Knight sleeve-valve engine—the power plant of the Willys-Knight—is the simplest of them all.

A proof of the brilliant performance ability of the Willys-Knight awaits you at your nearest dealer's. Before you decide on any car, arrange for a demonstration of one of the many beautiful models.

In addition to the Willys-Knight's exclusive sleeve-valve engine, it has 7-bearing crankshaft, oil rectifier, 4-wheel brakes and every modern feature. Willys-Knight Sixes range in price from $1395 upwards. F.o.b. factory, taxes extra.

Dean Inge Calls Upon His Superior to Resign

GLOOMY DEAN CLAIMS BISHOP IS INCAPABLE

Declares London Clergy Will Not Follow Their Bishop.

WARNS LEADERS.

Comes As Latest Development in English Prayer Book Controversy.

LONDON, Nov. 3 (Special to The Examiner).—Rev. W. R. Inge, the celebrated "Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's Cathedral, is in virtual rebellion against his ecclesiastical superior Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London.

In a newspaper article Dean Inge, politely but plainly, says that the Bishop is incapable of securing law and order among his own clergy, and that he should make way for a stronger man—namely, for Dr. Headlam, Bishop of Gloucester.

The Dean's call for the removal of his own superior, comes as the latest development in the Church of England prayer book controversy. He insists that public opinion demands of the Church of England, on peril of disestablishment, that the line must be drawn somewhere regarding "illegal services."

Dean Inge is "agreed that the line proposed by the Bishop of London, namely the prayer book of 1923, is as good as could be expected," but he declares that the Synod of London showed that the clergy will not keep within that line.

Stiff-Necked Men

Extreme Anglo-Catholics, he declares, are determined to have perpetual reservation of the Sacrament and worship of the Sacrament as the real body of Christ. Dean Inge says the present Bishop of London cannot control the London clergy, whom he terms, "A stiff-necked and difficult body of men."

It is rather a new thing for Dean Inge to show any tenderness for Dr. Headlam, but the latter has commended himself to Modernists like the Dean by giving Modernism a good show at the recent Church Congress and also by attacking the Church of Rome.

"Dean Inge is very strong on the need for discipline in the church of England," he said, "is a society which does not dare to punish open rebels is ridiculous in the eyes of the world."

He warns the Bishops, that if they do not make an honest effort to enforce the law of the land, they will bring disestablishment and disendowment on the church.

The opinions of Dean Inge receive more attention outside the church of England than within. It was only this week that Lord Birkenhead, who is as plain spoken as the Dean himself, said he had known the latter ever since they were both Dons at Oxford, thirty years ago, and he considered him to be "a clever poseur, who knew how to exploit publicity."

Anglo-Catholics will retort against Dean Inge that he is far more lawless than they, for though he may follow the rubrics of the prayer book, he denies such articles of creed as the Virgin birth and bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ.

ROSENEATH RESIDENT RECALLS OLD DAYS IN NORTHUMBERLAND

Mrs. Mary Brown's Parents Came to Cobourg From Ireland in 1831.

NO CHURCHES THEN.

Recalls Often Walking To Hastings, a Distance of Seven Miles, With Eggs.

(Examiner Correspondence.

ROSENEATH, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Mary Brown, who celebrated her birthday last month, is 83 years old. Mrs. Brown's heart is yet young, although her experiences have been many, and a visit with her is an inspiration.

"Aunt Mary" as she is known to all her friends, was the fourth child of a family of thirteen, six of whom are living. They are, Mrs. Robert Mouncey, Roseneath; Mrs. James Johnston, Toronto; Mrs. James Brisbin, Kelowna, B.C.; George Clark, Alnwick township, and James Clark, of Muskoka, who is approaching his ninetieth year.

Mrs. Brown's parents, John and Catherine Clark, came to Canada from Ireland in 1831, settling on a farm north-west of Cobourg, with an English gentleman, named McKay. Mr Clark was overseer of this large estate, where he worked for several years until he earned enough to buy his farm in Alnwick, the same farm on which his son, George, now resides. Together, John Clark and his wife hewed a home out of the deep woods and raised their family of thirteen children.

Born in Alnwick township and educated in an old log school house, situated on the Lapp farm where Cecil Radley now lives, Mary walked two miles to and from school through a thick forest. Often she walked to Hastings or Crook's Rapids, as it was then called, a distance of seven miles, carrying a basket of eggs and she brought home groceries or a piece of factory cotton at five cents a yard or a piece of print at ten cents.

The nearest post office was in Alderville, the Indian village, where mail arrived once a week. The only burying ground was on the Indian Reserve, where white man and red man lay buried side by side. Roseneath, at that time, was called "The Corners," until Mrs. James Campbell changed its name to Roseneath, it being the name of her home village in Scotland.

Fish Hook Lands $100 Roll Of Bills

OSSEO, Minn., Nov. 3.—Fred Holdorf of Minneapolis, was driving home from a fishing trip with a bamboo pole protruding from the rear of his car. When between Robbinsdale and Osseo he heard the pole lurch in the tonneau. Stopping, he got out and found fastened onto the fishhook which had been dangling from the pole, a roll of bills amounting to $100.

Two cheques were wrapped with the bills. The name of the owner, Einer E. Hultgren, was signed the cheques, and Holdorf returned his find to Hultgren. Just before the car came along two boys walking along the road saw the money and were about to reach for it when the car thundered along, grabbing the wealth from them.

WORKMAN DIES IN PLANT FIRE

John Mitchell, Kitchener, Succumbs To Burns and Suffocation.

DAMAGE $15,000.

WATERLOO, Nov. 3.—Without regaining consciousness, John Mitchell, aged 59, 34 Bingeman street, Kitchener, died in the K.-W. hospital last night from burns and suffocation sustained in a $15,000 fire which swept the finishing room of the E. O. Weber Furniture Company shortly before 6 o'clock last night.

Flames Get Start

When firemen arrived at the factory flames were pouring from three windows on the Allan Street side of the building and from two windows at the rear. It is a three-story structure and the fire was confined to the rear section of the second floor.

John Mitchell was working with a number of other employees in the finishing room, and was farthest away from the scene of the fire, which started as the result of a short-circuit in the spraying machine.

It is believed that Mitchell, who was found only a few feet from the steps, had gone to his bench to get his coat, and was overcome with the smoke and heat. Artificial respiration methods were used for about an hour by the firemen, who also tried to bring the man back to consciousness with a pulmotor. He was then taken to the K.-W. Hospital, but all efforts at resuscitation proved futile and he died about half an hour after admittance, without regaining consciousness.

Furniture Complete Loss

The finishing room was practically full of furniture, due to the heavy Christmas orders which had been placed with the firm. All furniture in the room is a complete loss, while water did considerable damage to material in the upholstering room. Chief Carges could not last night place a definite estimate on the loss, but stated that it would be over $15,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

MANY PRANKS ARE PLAYED IN WARSAW

Deer Tracks Are Seen Near the Village During Summer and Fall.

WARSAW, Nov. 3 (Examiner Correspondence). — There were many Hallowe'en pranks played in the village on Wednesday night, some of which involved expense as well as time to remedy. George Lonsberry's gates which he had locked in the barn, were taken out and carried to Bethel. Another prank was to paint W. Dunford's post tops, part of his shop doors and the window sills black, which he had painted white. Many other gates are missing.

Women's Institute

Mr. Nelson, District Agricultural Representative, will address the Warsaw Women's Institute, on Thursday, November 8. He will speak on home gardens, and will give some points on the School Fair and the giving of special prizes.

A letter has been received from Mr. Nelson, in which he said he had heard nothing but praise for the way in which the Women's Institute had looked after the meals on the day of the plowing match. The opportunity to get a good hot meal adds much to the enjoyment of the plowing match, he said.

Farm News

The fine days which we have had recently, are appreciated by the farmers. They have been able to make headway with roots, buckwheat and other crops which have been delayed.

The farmers are able to plow except early in the morning when the ground is frozen. On Tuesday, the ground was frozen very hard.

Warsaw mail deliveries will not be made until the morning following its arrival in Warsaw, on and after November 1.

Deer Near Village

At different times throughout the summer and fall, deer tracks have been seen near the village. Just as the hunting season approaches, it appears that the deer are more daring, one having been seen fairly close to the village.

TRINITY CHURCH HOLDS FOWL SUPPER

Between Five and Six Hundred People Were Served By the Ladies.

MADOC, Nov. 3 (Examined Correspondence).—Between five hundred and six hundred people were served at the fowl supper held on Monday evening, in connection with the anniversary of the Trinity United Church. Hallowe'en decorations of orange and black and lighted candles with flowers and dishes of fruit gave an attractive appearance to the eight long tables, laid in the Sunday School rooms.

The program put on in the auditorium was given by Smith Brothers, entertainers, who gave at various intervals during the evening, readings and songs, both humorous and otherwise. Rev. Mr. Marshall of St. Peter's Church, brought greetings from his congregation and congratulations on the success of the anniversary. Miss Ramsay contributed "Sing Me to Sleep," accompanied by Miss Ferguson at the piano. Mr. Scrutton contributed violin and beautiful organ solos. The chairman of the program, Rev. Mr. Rivers, gave "Betsy and I Are Out," and "Betsy and I Have Made Up." He conveyed to the ladies and choir and to Rev. Mr. Wilson of Napanee, his sincere thanks for the assistance given in making the anniversary successful.

BOY IS SHOT IN FOREHEAD

Police Say Farm Hand Warned Boys To Go Away From Scene.

INVESTIGATE CASE.

IROQUOIS, Nov. 3.—Frank Marcellus, aged 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Marcellus, Dundela, is laid up from the effects of a bullet which passed through his forehead, near the left eye, on Hallowe'en.

Police say that Frank, with 25 or more boys, indulging in the usual pranks delegated to the evening, were warned by Frank Nick, a farm laborer, whose home is with Andy Sipes, a resident of Dundela, that if they continued he would shoot.

As the boys did not heed Nick, police says, he fired three times, at intervals, the third shot hitting young Marcellus in the forehead. The bullet tore along through the flesh and out about two inches from where it went in, stunning him and causing an uncomfortable wound.

Two boys on either side of him, Alfred Marcellus, a cousin, and Lloyd Cook, felt the bullet whizz past them before it hit Frank, they told the officers.

Acting Commissioner Cuddy of the Ontario Provincial Police stated that information had reached his office regarding the wounding of the boy near Iroquois. An officer from Cornwall has the case in hand and some action is likely to follow. Police officers have instructions, whenever possible, to discourage the use of firearms, especially in the case of boys indulging in Hallowe'en pranks.

AUTOMOBILE TIRES REDUCED IN PRICE

General Reduction Takes Place All Over Dominion—Restrictions Off.

Peterborough garage men and service men who handle tires received their instructions yesterday morning relative to the recently announced "cut" in tire prices, due in part to the reduction in the United States. It is understood that on Thursday, prices were reduced from 2½ per cent. to 8 per cent. throughout the Dominion, while other rubber goods, such as belting, shoes and medical rubber supplies, remained at their regular prices.

The reduction, which is made effective by all manufacturers, comes on the anniversary of the discontinuation of the Stevenson restriction plan by the British Government. It was instituted five years ago and regulated exports of crude rubber from British Malay and Ceylon fir the purpose of protecting the grower on price. For several months, crude rubber prices have gone to low levels, the current London spot price being just under 9 cents per pound.

The price cut covers high pressure and balloon tires but no reduction is made in the case of truck or bus equipment, either pneumatic or solid. The reduction on balloon tires is uniformly 5 per cent.

The same companies reduced prices of the same types of tires from 5 to 20 per cent. on July 7, 1928.

This table shows the approximate saving to consumers on balloon tires:

Size.	Old price.	New price.
29x4.40	$ 9.70	$ 9.20
29x4.75	12.20	11.60
30x4.75	12.65	12.00
29x5.00	12.60	12.00
30x5.00	13.05	12.30
31x5.00	13.60	12.30
32x5.00	15.00	14.25
31x5.25	15.70	14.20
32x6.00	18.30	17.40

These are the lowest prices at which standard four-ply balloon tires ever sold in Ontario, dealers state.

Bethany

(Examiner Correspondence).

BETHANY, Nov. 3.—The Young People's League of the United Church, under the leadership of the Misses Doris Driver, Etta Whiteside and Margaret Jackson, gave a Hallowe'en social at their midweek meeting on Wednesday evening, in the Sunday School-room. Hallowe'en games and songs were enjoyed by the young folks. Fortunes were told for two pennies, and candied apples, taffy and jelly beans were also on sale. At the conclusion of the program, refreshments were served.

Hallowe'en Pranks.

Many strange and curious happenings occurred on Hallowe'en night. The next morning the village presented a weird appearance with wagons, cutters and buggies decorating the roofs of many buildings. Gates were taken from their places and hung from telephone poles. Boxes and barrels were moved from one place to another, and it will take some time for people to find what really belongs to them.

Personals.

Mrs. Ezra Steer was called to Oshawa on Wednesday, owing to the serious illness of her niece, Miss Elsie Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ormand Burns.

Mr. George Poulter of Montreal is the guest at the parsonage of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Poulter for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ferren of Fallis Line spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fallis.

Miss Verna Belle Lee is night operator at the telephone central office until a male operator and lineman can be engaged.

VALUE OF MUSIC TO BE DISCUSSED

Lakefield Women's Institute Will Discuss Topics Relative To Music.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 3.—(Examiner Correspondence)—The next meeting of the Lakefield branch of the Woman's Institute will deal with the value of music in connection with the Institute, and what a song sheet can do for a branch. It provides what is often a pleasing interlude in a business program, it acts as a sort of mental calisthenics, representing the tired mind during a program which might be termed "heavy." For social events or banquets, the song sheet is a real boon.

At the last meeting delegates were appointed to the annual convention to be held in Toronto at the last of November, Mrs. E. Cameron and Mrs. L. Harrison were selected.

Another matter for discussion will be the question of whether or not the Institute will take steps to have a public health nurse appointed. This is a large question involving really the whole community and also a considerable sum of money.

The value of a nurse of this sort can hardly be estimated as the idea is rather a new one in Lakefield but it bears thinking of as it is undoubtedly a "Forward Movement" and will be a widespread movement in this province before many years have passed.

Last year the Institute held a very enjoyable and successful Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Blakeley and in a social manner celebrated a popular season.

GOOD PRICES REALIZED.

Auction Sale in Marmora Township Proves a Big Success.

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Astonishing good prices were received at the sale of farm stock, implements and vehicles on the farm of James E. Bailey on the 4th concession of Marmora township on Thursday afternoon. A team of horses sold for $371. As much as $116 each was paid for some of the cattle while spring calves realised $30 each. F. S. Johnston was the auctioneer.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 3 — Rev. C. E. Clarke, of Belleville was a visitor in town yesterday afternoon. Mr. Clarke is a former rector of the Anglican Church here.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Cook and family have taken up residence in Peterborough, where Mr. Cook will continue in the insurance business.

Mrs. Thomas Rutherford returned yesterday after spending the past few months with her daughter, Mrs. Barron and Dr. Barron, in Paris, Ont.

The difference in height between the sidewalk and the street was just sufficient this afternoon to allow a small school girl to use the window of a closed car as a mirror to assist her in fixing her hair. In noticeable contrast to the incident was the school boy which hung from the shoulder of the young lady of perhaps eleven years.

As far as can be learned, no local hunters are starting for the deer country on foot, but trains motor cars, and horse drawn vehicles are all being brought into service to transport the small army into the bush. The first contingent to leave town took their departure early this morning.

The opening of a Haboco store here this morning adds another name to the list of local business men. The store is located in the Wallace Block on Bridge Street, once occupied by W. I. Stillman. The store has been entirely redecorated.

HEADACHES ANNIHILATED

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Woolsey and family of Ottawa visited at the home of H. T. Scott, Chiropractor, Front street, Campbellford. Mr. Woolsey was suffering from a very severe headache, which his friend, the chiropractor annihilated in a few moments, by the well-known method—a Chiropractic Adjustment. 1d, 4008

CAMPBELLFORD ARTIST

Prynce Nesbitt has been described by the Buffalo Courier as a dazzling technician and a superb artist, and by the Buffalo Times as a consummate musician playing with authority and fine musical understanding. Mr. Nesbitt will give Piano, Vocal (Marafiatori Method) and Organ Lessons. For terms Phone 364.

ROTARIANS VISIT CAMPBELLFORD

Effort Is Being Made To Interest Campbellford Men in Rotary Activities.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 3. — For the second time during the past month, members of the Belleville Rotary Club visited Campbellford in an effort to interest local men in the Rotary movement. It seems probable that their mission has been successful on this occasion. Dinner was served in the dining-room of the St. Lawrence Hotel at seven o'clock, and there were eighteen men to sit at table. After the meal had been eaten and a comfortable quantity of smoke set free in the atmosphere, the pros and cons of Rotary were discussed. Eventually a committee was formed and the first steps of organization were taken. It is expected that there will be a local Rotary Club here in the very near future.

Modern Woman Uses Spinning Wheel

To many people in the larger communities a spinning wheel is a nice looking antique to set in a corner of the living room, but to Mrs. Phillipe Croteau, of the Canton of Figuery, in the parish of Sainte-Therese, in Abitibi,—not far from Amos on the transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railways,—a spinning wheel has a definite utilitarian purpose. In this particular instance, Mrs. Croteau is providing the material with which to provide warm "oolies" for her grandchild. Mrs. Croteau, widowed head of a large family of boys and girls, and practically penniless, led her thirteen children into Abitibi and undertook to clear 200 acres of forest land. That was in July, 1916. To-day the Croteau farm is 300 acres in extent, with modern houses, barns, garage, good horses, good stock, electric lighting, mechanical aids, a tractor and motor cars, all the result of the courage and industry of a woman who loving her children and born to the land, battled successfully with Nature to win, first, a living, and then a competence. While admitting the modern comforts, Mrs. Croteau believes that yarn spun in the old-fashioned way is best of all and practices her own doctrine. The wonderful achievements of this woman who set out from her home parish near Joliette, twelve years ago with the scanty proceeds of the sale of her old home and a loan of fifty dollars, have been recognized by the Government of the Province of Quebec in presenting to her the highest possible award for agricultural merit.

Looks and Acts like a Costly Car

because it's built like a costly car

The only Essex point in common with cars in its price field—is price. There is little in either appearance or performance to distinguish it from many a costlier car.

In size, it possesses the advantage of compactness without sacrifice of passenger quarters or riding comfort. It steers as easily as any car you have ever driven. There is a quickness and nimbleness in its motor action that will make some costlier cars you have driven seem slow and sluggish. These qualities are lasting.

With whatever costly car detail you compare Essex you will be impressed by its high standard in design, material and workmanship.

Many exclusive and patented features contribute to these Essex advantages—among them being its high-compression Super-Six motor, which to our belief is the most powerful and efficient automobile motor of its size in the world.

Won't you examine and drive the Essex, whether as a prospective buyer or as one interested in knowing why it is the choice car in its price field as proved by sales?

THE ADVENTURES OF SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS CLUB

HOW THE FIGHT STARTED

Doc Waters decided for us boys, this year, just what kinds of costumes we were going to wear on Halloween. And it was a good thing, too, because we boys were just about to give up the idea of wearing anything—that is, what I mean to say, costumes. Every boy had a different idea as to what we should dress like—Johnny McLaren wanted us all to dress like ghosts, like we did one year and scared the Pelhams, and Jerry Moore wanted us to be Indians—that suits him, anyhow because he is the roughest boy in our club and acts like an Indian most of the time—and our captain had an idea that we would make a bigger hit if we all dressed like tramps. Bill Darby said we looked enough like tramps without dressing up, and we might as well go as we were; but, he says, if we wanted to make a really good showing, he thought we ought to dress up like cowboys. Everybody said he was crazy because you don't see real cowboys any more except in moving pictures, and then Roy Dobel got up and said we ought to cut out all this foolish talk and pick out farmer costumes, and act like real hicks from the country, and we would win the prize.

"Yeah," says Bill Darby "you're so dumb, Roy, you don't even know you are. What you talking about winning the prize for in a bunch—only one prize is offered by the Town Boosters, and if we all dress up alike—even if we had a chance, only one of us could win it.

"We could divide it up, couldn't we?" asked Roy, and I could see that he was getting mad at Bill.

"Divide up five dollars?" asked Bill. "What would that amount to, with so many of us in this club?"

"Cut out the arguing," said our captain. "Hawkins, what do you think we ought to do?"

I had to laugh. "I don't know," I said; "seems to me we are making a whole lot out o' nothin'. And because I think you might believe I am one-sided, I ask you to call on our overseer for remarks."

Perry Stokes, who had been standing over by the window with his arms folded, turned his eyes on me as I said these last few words, and I could see he was surprised. Perry is a good kid, but he's got an idea that all he's good for is to clean up and oversee the clubhouse, because the boys only took him into the club with that understanding. His daddy is butler up at Judge Granbery's house, and Perry thinks that butling is one of the finest jobs in the world, so he tries to be butler for us boys in our clubhouse.

"Oh!" he says, before our captain could call upon him, "Hawkins, I don't know anything about it, sir. Whatever you say, will be all right with me, sir."

I waved my hand and looked at our captain. "Ask him," I said.

So Dick asked him to tell us what he thought about our Halloween costumes.

"If you please, sir," says Perry, "I'd rather not say—"

"We are only asking you what you think," broke in our captain, as he hit the table with his wooden hammer. "At least you can say which costume you think might win the prize—"

"I don't think any one that was mentioned will win the prize, sir," cut in Perry quickly but politely. All the other boys gave a start, and turned more to look at Perry, but I just looked down at my writing paper and smiled to myself. "No sir" continued Perry, "Hawkins will tell you the same, sir. I think the prize is already won, sir. The two boys who made that big bird costume that scared me last week—that ought to win the prize, sir, and I think it will."

After that, no boy in the club had anything to say. Dick bit the table with his wooden hammer and said: "This meeting is adjourned until tomorrow." And Johnny McLaren seconded the motion. Just as we were getting up from our chairs we heard a step on the porch, and Doc Waters came in. He carried a big parcel—it didn't seem to be very heavy, but he had a hard time getting it into the door—it was so big.

"Hello, kids!" he called out. "I'm the chairman of the Town Boosters Committee—now what you think of that?"

"Not much," says Bill Darby, "but what you got in that package?"

Doc grinned, as he looked around at us. "Don't you kids ever say I ain't your friend," he says; "now you Hawkins, open up this thing and see what I've brought for you."

I opened the package with the help of Perry Stokes, who hurried over with a knife to cut the string. When I took off the paper wrapper, a dozen of paper masks fell in a scattered heap—they were masks of animal heads—all kinds.

"There you are!" exclaimed Doc. "For your Halloween. Now you listen—you kids—there is a prize of five dollars—a gold piece—to the best costume worn on Halloween, and you know I want to see one of your club members win it, don't you? How proud I would feel, if I could step up to one of you boys and say: 'The prize of the evening goes to—' and know it was one of the kids I've been chumming with—"

"Wait a minute, Doc," broke in Shadow Loomis, who up to this time sat far in the rear, and said nothing. "What good are all these animal heads you've brought us for masks? If we just put on these masks, and walked up there, we wouldn't stand a show of winning, would we, just with a mask?"

"Of course not!" said Doc, indignantly. "You don't think I'd give a prize to one of you for wearing a mask, would you? I'm giving you a start. The rest of your costume you'll have to fix for yourself. You know, original idea—that's what you've got to have to win—and make the costume yourself—or have your Mom make it for you. But anyway, boys, don't get into any more fights and I'll think you earned the masks—I'm afraid old Judge Granbery expects you to have trouble with the Pelham fellows across the river—and you know how mad that makes him. If you are good boys, and keep out of fights, I'll not be sorry I gave you these masks—I'll give you some more things some day, and believe me, I'm your friend when you need one. All I want—"

"But these Pelhams might start a fight themselves," said our captain. "what then, Doc."

the door, "you defend yourselves. Good bye."

And with that, then, he hurried out before we could say any more. As soon as the door closed behind him, we all made a dive for the animal head masks. Every boy got one—there were just enough to go around—you can trust good old Doc Waters to see that we were all taken care of. I got a head that looked like a wolf or a fox—you could take it for either, as far as that goes—and I saw Shadow Loomis, next to me, grab hold of a goat head—and Bill Darby had a cat and Lew Hunter had a deer—I remember thinking it was just like Lew—good, old, quiet, softhearted Lew Hunter—he always reminded me of a deer, anyway. And Roy Dobel got a horse head and Perry got an elephant head and Dick got a dog head. Jerry Moore was unlucky enough to get crowded out until there was only one more mask left, and it was a donkey head.

"Hey!" he says, "I don't want to wear this thing."

But our captain told him it was a donkey.

"Yeah," says Jerry, "but who wants to be a mule? That doesn't look like—"

Our captain told him there was a whole lot of difference between a donkey and a mule. A mule was a stubborn thing without much sense. But a donkey was a patient, lovable little animal who could pack a heavy load over dangerous trails for many miles without stopping.

"That's me," says Jerry; "I can pack the heaviest load of any of you guys. I'll keep this."

So he kept the donkey head, and by jinks! when he put it on, I'll be switched if we all didn't like it better than any of the others. It looked so natural. And Jerry was very much pleased with it. He said he thought he had a good chance of winning the prize. He was going home to tell his mother to make him a brown suit with pasteboard hoofs for his hands and his feet, and then he would be a donkey for sure.

"Whoa, Maud!" says Shadow Loomis. Then there would have been a fight, but our captain pounded the table with his wooden hammer, and we all went out of the clubhouse.

Came Wednesday afternoon—the day on which Halloween fell—and with it came the Pelham fellows led by Briggen, their bulldozing leader. We boys had just come down to hold our meeting in our clubhouse—we were all seated around our long pine table when they came in.

"Look here, Hawkins," says Briggen, "we got two new boys in our gang last week, and they're not showing up at our meetings—"

"Fine 'em a nickel," says Jerry Moore, with a grin; "that's what these guys do to me when I don't come to meetin'."

"Shut your trap!" snapped Briggen. "I'll ask for advice when I want it. Anyway, I wasn't talkin' to you. Now look here Hawkins, we boys know you guys pretty well, and the reason our two new members ain't comin' to our meetin's is because you fellas been coaxing 'em away. See?"

"Forget that stuff," says our captain, without giving me time to answer. "Every time something goes wrong on your side of the river, you come over here and blame us boys. What's the names of these two new boys?"

"Arthur and Walter," answered Briggen, quickly. Then he turned a leering face to me and asks: "Ever hear of 'em, Seckatary Hawkins?"

"Yeah," I said, nodding; "I gave 'em a barrel that we had—"

Briggen turned a sharp look toward his pal, Ham Gardner.

"You hear that, Ham?" he says. "Gave 'em a barrel. They never brought it in."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well, we been collecting barrels for our bonfire on Halloween," says Briggen; "but those two guys never brought any in. I'm glad you told us. That's all we want to know. We'll settle up with those two kids. Good bye."

And without giving us a chance to say any more the Pelhams left and went back to their side of the river.

That night was Halloween. We all met down in our clubhouse, early. And we all had suits of brown and black, to match the heads of the animal masks we wore. Jerry Moore sure looked like a donkey because his mother had sewed cardboard hoofs on his sleeves and trouser legs. But we didn't stand a show for the prize—none of us. It went to a costume that looked like a big bird, a mixture of a duck and an eagle, or something like that, which waddled its way down Main Street at the end of a string held by Arthur—I hadn't heard his other name—but I knew that his brother Walter was under the big bird costume—which was made out of a barrel, covered with feathers, on which was a head of stiff paper with a yellow beak. Doc Waters, being the Chairman of the Town Boosters Committee gave him the prize, after all the other Town Boosters had remarked that it was a most unusual costume, and very original, too. That's what counts. Thinking up something the other fellows never dream of. And the crowd that stood watching gave three cheers as Doc Waters handed the five dollar gold piece to the two brothers.

"Follow them," I whispered in the ear of our captain, as we watched the two brothers start away from the Town Boosters. All of us moved along with the crowd—the street was packed with people—but we managed to stay together, although I had to take my mask off, because I felt just as if I was suffocating. I carried the thing in my hand—so did all the other fellows in our crowd, now that the prize was awarded and they didn't have a chance all but Jerry, he kept on his donkey head and made all kinds of fun as we walked along with the crowd—but I kept my eye on the two brothers. Walter, who had worn the big bird costume, had taken it off when the prize was being awarded, but when his brother Arthur had pulled the string and started on again, he had slipped under the barrel thing again, and now they wended their way down the thickly crowded street like a boy leading a big bird by a string.

But there is an end of the street lights, and there is where the crowd grew thinner, and we were slowing up, because we didn't want anybody to know we were following the two brothers, who had won the prize. We weren't the only ones following them, though. No, sir-ree! We had our eyes on a bunch of masqueraders who were dressed as pirates—believe me, I knew who they were! Why? Because I remembered last year's Halloween, and I had seen those same costumes, and they were worn by Pelham fellows. Don't tell me! I knew why those pirates were following those two brothers. That barrel that made the body of the big bird was the same barrel that I had given to Arthur and Walter—the two brothers—and they had made a big bird costume out of it—and the Pelham fellows were sore because this one barrel was not turned in to add to their bonfire, which they intended to light later in the night. They were going to show these two new members of their gang that they would get that barrel and add it to the fire even though it had won a prize as the main portion of the big bird costume. They were going to teach these two new members of their gang that they were boss—you see? And that whatever Briggen told the Pelhams to do, they must do.

Right at the edge of town they made their attack. Like a flock of buzzards they closed in upon Arthur as he led the big bird costume under which was his brother Walter. And it would have been all up with both of them—that is, they both would have got a good licking, and lost their big bird costume, too, if it hadn't been for one thing.

As soon as I saw Briggen start forward, I called for Jerry Moore. "Jerry," I whispered, "you are the biggest—you tackle Briggen before he reaches Arthur, and we will take care of the other Pelhams."

However, Jerry didn't seem to hear me at first. I had to yell at him, twice, before he came up to me, and then I saw it was because he still wore the donkey head mask. I told him to take it off and get busy.

"Oho!" he cried, as he goggled at me through the tiny holes that were supposed to be the donkey-head's eyes. "You want me to tackle Briggen? Well, just watch this donkey pack the heaviest load over the most dangerous trail—say, you guys, watch Briggen fall."

Briggen fell, all right. But I, for one, didn't see him. No, sir! I only learned about it later. Because I didn't have any time to look at Jerry or Briggen or anybody else—I saw something coming at me like a streak of red—

But wait! I go too fast. The Pelhams saw our intentions—they had been keeping their eyes on us ever since they started following the two brothers but they didn't think it was us—you see, they didn't know what kind of Halloween costumes we would wear, and they never dreamed we would have sense enough to pick out animal head masks. And, to tell the truth and be honest about it, we wouldn't have, either; it was Doc Waters who'd done that you see. But when Jerry yelled, "Watch Briggen fall," he was so excited that he raised his voice too high, and Briggen heard it, and right away he knew it was us. With a yell he turned—that was the last I got to see of him, because at that moment every one of the Pelhams made for one of our members—as I say, I saw a streak of red coming at me—red because the fellow had his head lowered, and his hair was red. He plumped into my stomach with a bump that would have sent me down for the count, but for the fact that I was carrying my wolf's head mask in my hands, and as he came I raised it to my stomach and he crashed into it, mashing it flat and saving my stomach the force of the blow.

But I had him. By Jinks! I had him with my arms around his broad shoulders the next minute. I caught him with a grip of steel and held him close to me. His teeth seemed to sink into my arm but I didn't seem to know it. No. I was bent on one thing—throwing this big bull of a fellow, until I could get help from some of my other club mates. And maybe you think he wasn't big! Jerry had yelled about his bringing Briggen down! He should have had my antagonist to contend with.

He struggled against me. He bit me. His rough shoes kicked against my shins. Down we went, and together we rolled over and over, again and again. As far as I was concerned, there were no others—just we two were alone, fighting it out. And then came—pain, and silence.

* * *

The top of my head seemed to be going like a merry-go-round when I opened my eyes. Shadow Loomis was bending over me, and beyond his shoulder I saw the worried face of Perry Stokes.

"Are you all right, Hawkins?" asked Shadow, anxiously.

"Yeah!" I cried, starting up. "Get that red head—get him, Shadow, hold him for me!"

"Hold on, take it easy," said Shadow, soothingly; "they're all gone, Seck. You must have wounded that red-headed fellow—he ducked as soon as you fall—"

"It wasn't fair and square sir," spoke up Perry Stokes. "He didn't use his fists, he had a stone when he hit your head, sir—"

"They all had stones," said Shadow, impatiently; "I got the rock away from the fellow that was kneeling on me. Jerry Moore got a rock on his head, too, but he kept his donkey head mask on, and it saved him—"

"Where is he now?" I asked weakly.

"Chasing," said Shadow, with a chuckle. "Arthur and his brother threw away their big bird costume and asked our captain to help 'em beat the Pelhams—"

"What!" I exclaimed, sitting up, for my head was now feeling better, "then the two brothers—I mean Arthur and Walter, of course—are helping us?"

"Sure," said Shadow; "they know we helped them."

"And we will probably have to make them members of our club, sir," said Perry.

Which we did.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

First of all I must apologize because we did not get that list of names printed this week. The printers have been so busy, and there has been so much news, that they could not find either time or room.

I hope that it may be printed next week, because so many of the addresses and birthdays are wrong—and I don't want to send out letters and cards that never reach the members, or arrive on the wrong day. Those members who have received a Club birthday card certainly appreciate it.

Then, too, I'm sorry that so many new members should not yet have received their membership cards and pins. It's some job, though, for one Seckatary to handle all this work—there's a record card to type for myself, so I'll know who is a member, then a membership card to make out, an envelope to address, the pin to put in, the envelope to seal and stamp. And more than 3,000 members to do it for! That's why I'm away behind, and of course if you members wish to fire me and try another Seckatary, you may do so!

We are going to try a new idea for next week. Instead of setting a subject on which you must write, I am going to ask you to write about anything you like. Just write a letter or story or poem about your pets, your chums, school, Thanksgiving, or anything else you like, and send it in. The best letter will win a big adventure book of the Seckatary Hawkins Club.

And by the week after next we should have all the names caught up, and be ready to spend a very nice winter with the 3,000 member in our club. Please do your part.

Effie Redmond, 268 Aylmer street, wins the prize for her letter on

ARMISTICE DAY.

"Dear Seck:

A long time ago there was a great war. Many people were killed. Armistice day is when we think of all the poor soldiers that were killed and will never be seen any more. Peace was declared on November the eleventh. When the bells ring all the people stops work and think of the dead people that fought in a great battle. Some sons went and fought, but they got killed. Their people think of them. They are very sorry that they went. Some of their parents did not want them to go. Many people are unhappy on Armistice Day, and crying for some things that happened on that day.

Yours fair and square,
EFFIE REDMOND."

268 Aylmer St.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Unfortunately, Helen, the committee has decided not to unveil the memorial this year. Be sure and read the Armistice number of The Examiner.

"Dear Seck:

As I am a new member of the club I wish to write my first letter and I hope to see it in print. My letter is about "Armistice day."

The first Armistice Day that I can remember was the one in 1921. I was in the kindergarten at that time and I remember that we stood up for two minutes. I hope the 1928 Armistice Day will be the best yet for Peterborough and I think it will as the unveiling of the War Memorial in Confederation Square will have a lot to do with it.

Yours fair and square,
HELEN REID."

617 George St.,
Peterborough, Ont.

I think the same as Lloyd, that everyone should remember to be silent for the two minutes in honor of the soldiers.

"Dear Seck:

On November 11 we will celebrate Armistice Day again.

Last year we had to keep silent in school for two minutes in honor of the soldiers who were killed at the War.

So we will have to be silent ourselves. I hope I won't forget.

Yours fair and square,
LLOYD PERDUE."

Peterborough, Ont.

"Dear Seck:

Here is my letter of Armistice Day. The first Armistice Day was about ten years ago on November the 11th, 1918.

That was the day the Great War ended. I was only a month old then, therefore, I don't know much about it, except the date. I am very anxious to have a Seckatary Hawkins book.

I am enclosing a two-cent stamp for the club badge and certificate.

Yours fair and square,
GORDON SHEARER."

312 Monaghan Rd.,
Peterborough, Ont.

"Dear Seck:

The Great War started in 1914 and they fought and fought for over four years and the guns roared and roared for so long, and then in 1918 the war ended, and the soldiers were so tired and glad, that they shook hands. When Canada heard this the bell rang and the whistles blew and the people sang and danced, and now on the 11 of Nov. at 11 o'clock all the people are silent for one minute.

Yours fair and square,
BURRITT BROOKS."

Port Hope, Ont.

"Dear Seck:

On Nov. 11, 1918 on Armistice Day peace was signed between Germany and the Allied troops at Mons.

It was on the eleventh hour on the eleventh day of November and the eleventh month in the year.

Yours fair and square,
WILLIAM R. J. FLINT."

"Dear Seck:

I have been reading your page for sometime an enjoy it very much. I finally handed in my name for membership to a girl friend and hope to soon receive my badge. I am sending you my first composition.

"Armistice Day"

The thought of the Great War strikes terror in every heart. This was one of the worst wars that ever took place. It is also called the "World War", because almost every nation of the world took part. It raged from 1914 to 1918. Millions of men gave up their lives to save their Canada.

Finally on November the 11th, 1918, the Armistice was signed. Great was the rejoicing when the glorious news reached Peterborough. All the factories stopped the machines. People paraded the streets while bands played their favourite music.

Every year since 1918 at eleven A.M. all the people stop their work for two minutes to think of the dead soldiers.

On the Saturday following "Armistice Day" there is a "Tag Day" on which is sold poppies made by the disabled soldiers. The proceeds are sent to the men who work energetically to keep Canada free and prosperous.

Yours fair and sqaure,
CLARA GRISDALE."

"Dear Seck:

I am sending my story of Armistice Day for which I hope to get a prize. Here is my story.

On the 4th of Aug. 1914, the Great War began and ended on the 11th of Nov. 1918 at 11 o'clock. There was a great silence around the world for a while. The message reached around the world in a few minutes. The bells rang, the whistles blew, people sang and danced in the streets. The Generals shook hands and they played football. Every year from then on they have a minute's silence in celebration of Armistice Day at 11 o'clock.

Yours fair and square,
DORIS BROOKS."

"Dear Seck:

I was very glad that Beverly Rogers joined me to your interesting Club. I am going to write a small story about the fun the twins had in Autumn.

The two little twins one Autumn day thought that they would like to go out to play with a leaf house so they got a rake and went outside. They made two pleasing bed rooms a parlor a dining room and a kitchen.

Yours fair and square,
EVELYN LAWLESS."

TEMPERANCE IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

To-morrow the Sunday Schools of the World Will Observe Temperance Sunday.

Sunday is World's Temperance Sunday in the Sunday Schools. The Examiner has been asked to publish the following:—

The following remarkable facts are taken from a leaflet published by the Buffalo Citizens' Committee of 5,000 for Law Enforcement, 408 Crosby Buildings, Buffalo, N.Y.

Wage Earners—Whose wages were eight billions more in 1926 than in 1916, which is an increase of 25%, which living costs are reduced 16% since 1920.

Employers.—Who benefit by increased production and a reduced labor turnover; by sober workmen, fewer accidents—and no more "blue Mondays."

Farmers.—Who buy three times as much farm machinery, and who sell 45% more milk than in 1920,—and who rarely have a drunken farm hand.

Bankers. — Twenty-three million new depositors since 1920 have increased deposits in the savings banks by nine billion dollars,—an increase of 60%.

Insurance Men.—Who sold an average of seven hundred and forty-one new homes every day last year, and who find rents and payments easier to collect.

Manufacturers.—Manufactured products in 1925 and 1926 reached sixty-two billion dollars in value, which is more than the peak of after war-time production.

Merchants.—Who get much of the two billion dollars formerly spent in drink, and who have thousands of buyers where they used to have hundreds.

Everybody's Wife.—Who shares in all this increased prosperity,—and rejoiceds in all it means to her family. Probably she has one of the 612,200 washing machines; surely she has one of the million vacuum cleaners, or some of the nine hundred million dollars worth of furniture which has been sold each year since 1924. A million farmers' wives are enjoying the million bathrooms which were put into farm houses last year.

Everybody's Family.—There is one passenger automobile to every one and one-quarter families; and one radio set to every five homes in our country. Colleges have doubled their attendance in four years, and schools of every kind are full to overflowing.

This splendid condition is, of course, not due solely to Prohibition, but leading financers and economists attribute to the Eighteenth Amendment a "very large share" of our present prosperity.

Dr. T. C. Atkinson, Washington Representative of the Grange, says: "We shall not know the full measure of the blessings of Prohibition until three generations have passed."

SUGAR CANE 28 FEET TALL.

Sugar cane that, planted outside your house, would brush against your second story windows, has just been discovered by explorers in New Guinea, reports Popular Science Monthly. In the wilds where Professor Jeswelt, leader of the expedition found it, the stalks grow 28 feet high.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., November 3 (Canadian Press). — The export trade in wheat here yesterday was extremely dull, but there was some demand for coarse grains, and sales of a few loads of oats were made.

There was practically no change in the condition of the domestic market for cash grain, prices generally being steady with a moderate amount of business passing with local and country buyers.

Spring and winter wheat flour continued in good demand, and values for all grades were unchanged.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued active, and prices were firm. An active business was done in rolled oats, and the undertone to the market was firm.

A feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh firsts and prices were marked up three cents per dozen. This was attributed to the continued good demand and the scarcity of supplies. Other grades were steady. Receipts were 311 cases.

Potatoes sold fairly well at 85c per 90 pound bags of Green Mountains, 70c loose per 90 pounds, while Cobblers sold at 70c per 90 pound bag, and 65c per 90 pounds loose.

The demand for imported beans continued good, and sales were made at 8½c per pound.

The only important change in the butter trade was the announcement from jobbers that they had advanced prices one cent per pound, and were now selling No. 1 pasteurized creamery butter at 42 cents per pound in solid packages, and at 43 cents per pound in one-pound blocks. There were no new developments in the wholesale market, the undertone being firm with a steady demand. The receipts were 459 packages.

The trade in cheese over the cable and on spot was of a very limited character, and the market in consequence was quiet, but as there was no selling pressure in evidence the undertone to the market was steady. Receipts were 5,501 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, November 3 (Canadian Press). — Readjustments to prepare for a short day to-day, election holiday on Tuesday, and Government crop figures on Thursday all combined yesterday to ease wheat prices down. Widespread rains and snow, likely to benefit winter wheat, tended also to offset early advances based on talk that Hoover's speech last night at St. Louis would deal with plans of farm relief.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, at the same as Thursday a finish to ¼c higher, with corn varying from ⅛c decline to ¼c advance; oats a shade to ⅛c up, and provisions at 22c setback to a rise of 47c.

Erasing of price gains in the wheat market yesterday became especially noticeable toward the last, and went hand in hand with efforts which previous buyers made to realize profits. Fading away of eastern purchasing of wheat future deliveries counted also as a bearish influence, being greatly contrasted with recent opposite activities ascribed to eastern sources. Slackness of export demand yesterday for wheat from North America was likewise to friends of higher prices.

Houses with foreign connections led nevertheless in buying, which earlier in the day had given the wheat market a lift. Aside from chances of possible farm relief developments, this buying was associated with talk about probable reduction of forthcoming Canadian Government crop estimates.

Corn reacted with wheat. Setbacks in prices for corn, though, were subsequently to advances due to decidedly unfavorable weather conditions which may retard field work for a week or more. Corn export demand at the eastern seaboard was much less active, but Gulf exporters continued to outbid Chicago for corn at interior points in Illinois. Oats trade was small and price changes narrow.

Provisions in the main were steady except that ribs ruled firmer.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—After many days of comparative idleness, the local butter market has quickened its pace. On Monday, when trading was resumed, firmness was a noticeable feature of trading, and prices were advanced sharply from ¼c to ½c a lb. for finest creamery, when dealers reported a substantial increase in the demand on spot. Prices were firmly maintained on Tuesday at the advance, and at mid-week prices held well with business on the upgrade. On Thursday, while no quotable change was reported from Monday's advance in values, the trade was warming up to higher prices for spot sales, and it was reported that a sale had been put through at 40½c per lb. for extra fancy stock in a 100-box lot in a wholesale way. Yesterday's market was distinctly firm, and the curb market reported further fractional gains, while lifted the price of finest creamery up to a range of from 39¾c to 40c per lb., with undergrades correspondingly higher, at from 38¾c to 39c per lb. A fair volume of business was passing yesterday, and small lots were reported cleared for immediate requirements at 40c per lb. for fancy butter.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXIII.

It was quite true. Giles found himself unable to keep his eyes off the other Julie when they met at dinner that night.

She sat beside him, and her voice and her laugh and her little tricks of manner sometimes made it seem impossible that she was not the same woman who had driven beside him in Charon and come so happily to his arms in the cold, bleak room of the little hotel high up in the mountains.

Yet there were subtle differences also which made themselves more apparent as he grew to know her better.

For one thing, this Julie was older, and for another thing, as regards actual feature and coloring, she was more beautiful.

She told Giles frankly that she had been a little nervous of meeting him.

"I thought perhaps the family hatred had extended itself to you," she said bitterly, and then as he did not answer she added with unconscious pathos: "Life is very unkind to some of, Mr. Chittenham."

"Yes. I am not one of those people who insist that life is what we choose to make it," he answered.

She crumbled her bread with slender fingers.

"Everyone has insisted for so long that I am heartless and unscrupulous and mercenary that I am beginning to believe it myself," she said indifferently. "One might as well live up to one's character. It's very amusing—" she laughed suddenly, and Giles winced, the laugh was so like Julie's. "It's really a most amusing world, Mr. Chittenham. I think you know my cousin, the other Julie?"

"I have met her."

"Do you think we are alike?"

"Very, in some ways."

"And we are growing more alike. Once upon a time the resemblance was only facial, but now it's—what would you call it? Moral or mental—or both? At any rate, Julie has adopted my outlook on life. Poor Julie. She used to be so shocked at me, or to pretend that she was. Now she has quite changed."

"I met her at the Faun a week or ten days ago. She seemed to be enjoying herself very much."

She looked at him with faint contempt.

"Were you taken in as well?"

"I don't understand."

"Then there is nothing for me to explain, but I thought somehow—well, you seem different from most of the men I know. You are not in the least like Rodney, Mr. Chittenham."

"We were only half-brothers."

"I know, but with the same mother one might expect to find more of a resemblance." Her beautiful eyes studied him in silence for a moment then she said softly:

"I am glad you do not hate me as badly as I had expected you would."

Chittenham hesitated.

"When I was on the other side of the world my hatred for you was a very real and vital thing," he said gravely. "I used to hope for an opportunity to—well—" He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. "'Avenge' is such a melodramatic word, isn't it?"

"There is no other word that gives quite the same explanation," she answered. "Don't you still hope for it?"

"No."

"What made you change?"

Giles looked away from her down the crowded little restaurant and in imagination he saw again the bare, ugly room of the mountain hotel and heard the wind howling as it flung the soft snow against the windows.

"Something happened," he said.

She did not answer at once, then she said quietly:

"Well whatever it was, I am glad. I don't want to be hated any more. I don't think anyone—even your mother—could hate me any more if she knew what I know."

"What do you mean?"

Julie lowered her voice.

"If you like to drive home with me afterwards I will tell you. The others are wondering what we are talking about."

As a matter of fact Lombard had been straining to hear for the past ten minutes. He was by nature as curious as a monkey. He loved to know everything—he hated to feel out of anything. By the same rule he liked to be friends with everyone, not in the least for what could be got out of them, but because he liked to feel himself well in the center of things. He loved titles and famous people; he liked to tell his lesser friends that he had dined with a duchess—it had made him intensely happy to be able to invite Chittenham to dine with the real Julie Farrow.

His other guest was a broken-down Austrian countess who kept a hat shop, and who owed money to everyone who was weak enough to allow her to do so. But she was the third cousin once or twice removed of an emperor, and she always carried a fan with a diamond coronet on its faded ivory sticks.

But she bored Lombard, and he considered that he had listened to her royal reminiscences sufficiently long, so he ruthlessly interrupted the conversation between Chittenham and Julie and there was no further opportunity for confidences till the evening was over. Julie Farrow was a woman who invariably got her own way when she wanted it badly enough, so after dinner she calmly informed Lombard that Giles was driving home with her and that he might conduct the countess.

"Such a delightful evening!" she said vaguely as she bade him good night. "Thank you so much. My car is outside, Mr. Chittenham."

"I shall not be very popular with Lombard," Giles said with a short laugh as they drove away.

"For coming home with me, do you mean? What does it matter? Do you want to be popular with him?"

"Not particularly."

"He is an old friend of yours?"

"I have known him for some time."

"Which is not quite the same thing, you mean. I think you are right. There are people whom I have known all my life, and whom I see nearly every day, and yet they are not friends at all, and never could be. Do you find that, too?"

"I have very few friends."

"Rodney always told me you were a woman hater."

"I believe I have that reputation." He felt her eyes upon him.

"Undeservedly, I imagine. You know, you are quite unlike what I always expected you to be."

"And you too," Chittenham said.

"Am I?" There was a wistful note in her voice. "You mean that I am not quite the abominable vamp you expected to see?" She laughed with an echo of tears. "Give the devil a bad name, Mr. Chittenham." She touched his sleeve with her white fingers. "I wish you had come home before. I wish we had met sooner."

The thought crossed Chittenham's mind that this was probably the sort of thing she said to every man, and he smiled a little grimly to himself in the dim light of the car, but the next moment the smile died away for Julie said:

"If you were any other man you would be thinking that I am trying to flirt with you." She drew a hard breath. "I'm glad you're not like that! It's—somehow it's such a relief!"

"What is it you were going to tell me?" Giles asked. He felt an immense interest in this woman, and also an inexplicable pity for her, which somehow angered him.

According to all accounts she was worthless and heartless, and yet—once before he had blundered into tragedy through listening to and believing the things other people said.

The car stopped.

"We are just home," Julie said. "Come in, and I will tell you."

It was quite a mild night, but the fire burning in Julie's beautiful sitting-room was welcome.

"I'm such a chilly mortal," she explained. She gave her wrap to a waiting maid. What will you drink?" she asked Chittenham. "Whisky? Wine? I believe I am renowned for my cellar."

"Whisky, thank you."

"Please help yourself. You need not wait up, Hunter."

The maid withdrew and Julie looked at Giles with a mocking smile.

He shook his head and laughed.

Julie threw herself down into a big chair with a half sigh.

"Do you know that this is almost the last time I shall ever sit in this room?" she said suddenly.

"You are going away?"

"Yes—for ever."

"For ever?"

She nodded, her eyes on the fire.

Giles said nothing. He stood leaning against the mantelshelf looking down at her, vaguely conscious of something tragic that seemed to have stolen into the room during the last few moments. Suddenly Julie raised her eyes.

"I'm glad you don't ask thousands of questions," she said. "You're such a restful person, Mr. Chittenham. I can be quite sure that you won't say, 'Oh, my God,' or anything like that when I tell you that I'm going to die."

four miles to hear the gospel preached at a neighbor's house or at the little log school house. The Rev. Mr. McWilliams would ride horseback in order to deliver his message. Going to church was then looked forward to as a duty, when father and mother took their family and with sincere gratitude worshipped God.

Marriages Numerous.

According to the population marriages were as frequent then as they are now. When John Brown and Mary Clark were married her parents gave her a lovely wedding, with eighty guests present in honor of the happy event. There were no honeymoon trips those days, but after the wedding John Brown and his bride spent a few days with his parents, until things were in readiness to start to work on a rented farm, now occupied by Ray Brown. After saving for five years they bought a farm for themselves, on which they worked hard clearing the land, and to raise a family of eight children (five of whom are deceased). They saved enough to retire from farm labor and moved to Hastings, where they settled to enjoy life together in comfort and quietness. Mr. Brown was removed by death. She and her daughter Margaret lived togtether only a few weeks until Margaret took suddenly ill and passed to her heavenly home. These two deaths in such a short space gave many a heartache to the mother and wife. Aunt Mary bore her sorrow bravely and in a few weeks' time moved to the village of Roseneath to live among her friends and near her relatives.

A Presbyterian.

Aunt Mary was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church until Union and was president of the Ladies' Aid for many years, having been one of the first to join the organization. She is also the great grandmother of the Women's Institute and is dearly beloved by every member. Her name is frequently called on the program and when it is joke or some witty, humorous reading is everybody knows they will hear a ing or verse. In fact she is the shining star of the society. She is one who multiplies joys, divides griefs, and whose honesty is inviolable, a jewel that shines brightest in the darkness.

The pleasant zephyrs of kindness, love and sympathy is ever seen on her face. The community glories in having such a faithful, charming grand old lady as Aunt Mary Brown.

Her family living is Mrs. W. Pacey, Mrs. Albert Halstead, Roseneath, and Mrs. Dorion, Montreal.

MANY ATTEND FOWL SUPPER

Anglican Congregation Give Excellent Supper to Large Crowd.

ST. PAUL'S BAZAAR.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—Fowl suppers revived in Marmora a few years ago, still prove decidedly popular. Judging by the fine attendance at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, when the Anglican congregations of Marmora parish catered again to the appetites for chicken, the venture is one where the hard work entailed is forgotten in the knowledge of the attendant success. The revenue exceeded one hundred and seventy dollars, and nothing but unstinted praise could be heard regarding the bill of fare. Supper was served in the basement of the hall from 5.30 p.m. till 8 p.m.

St. Paul's Ladies' Bazaar.

Upstairs another successful event was being staged by St. Paul's Ladies' Guild, namely, its bi-ennial bazaar. Booths artistically represented the four seasons of the year, and the fish pond was not forgotten.

Decorated spring-like was the kitchen article booth. Mrs. C. Nichol and Miss Clara Phillips were in charge and few things indeed remained at the end of the sale of the large stock commenced with. It fell to the lot of the summer stall to be sold out, the bargains going readily to the salesmanship of Mrs. S. B. Wright and Mrs. S. C. Boyd. Nearly eighty dollars was realized on the fancy work disposed of at this stall. The wares at the autumn stall faded the quickest of all, and many after the supper came in vain for the deferred purchase of candy. This stall was sponsored by Mrs. (Rev.) A. B. Caldwell, and the Misses Evelyn Rice, Hilda Phillips and Stella McGarvey. One stall bespoke variety and that was the handkerchief stall, upon which winter's icy hand rested. Every kind of handkerchief created was for sale here, all donated in response to 200 cards sent out to members and friends of the Anglican communion, near and distant. Mrs. J. A. Rice presided here, being assisted by Misses Gertrude Lumsden and Beatrice Caldwell.

Misses Kathleen Litt and Merle Bedore were entrusted with the fish pond, and that did its part in the general success whereby approximately one hundred and fifty dollars will enrich the Guild funds.

IN POLICE COURT

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 3. — (Staff Correspondence).—For having liquor in containers other than those prescribed by the Ontario Liquor Board, John Sinclair of this town was ordered to pay twenty five dollars and costs of the court or do thirty days in jail. Magistrate Floyd of Cobourg presided at the hearing. W. F. Kerr, county crown attorney conducted the prosecution and J. A. O'Brien of Peterborough attended in the interests of Sinclair. To the charge of having liquor other than in the government containers and contrary to section 60 of the Liquor Control Act, Sinclair, through his counsel, pleaded not guilty.

Chief Light was the first witness called. He told of visiting the home of the accused in company with County Constable Seaborne. Sinclair was at home at the time. Some home brew beer was found in the cellar. Whiskey was found in the house as well, some of it in pop bottles. The officers had also examined the accused's permit. They had not sampled the contents of the pop bottle since Sinclair had admitted to them that it was whiskey. He had poured it from another bottle which had come from the vendors.

A momentary examination showed that the bottle was marked "Orange Crush" and had apparently been manufactured for the company making that article. Another bottle of that variety used by doctors and druggists about the twelve ounce size, and partly filled with whiskey was exhibited.

John Sinclair, identified himself to the court as the accused, and claimed that in opening the original bottle, he had used a jack knife and the neck of the bottle had broken under the extra strain. In order to save the liquor he had poured it into the only available receptacle, the pop bottle and the medicine bottle. He intended to drink the whiskey when it had been strained in order to remove any bits of broken glass. But he had delayed straining it since he still had another bottle unopened.

To Crown Attorney Kerr, Sinclair admitted that he had been searched a few days previous to the event which had lead to the action. On that occasion there had been liquor in small bottles, but they were identically the same bottles as were exhibited in court. There were no others. He also admitted that he had been convicted under the O.T.A. and that he had been out of town for a "month or two" about that time. The case of liquor had been bought October 16th and he and his brother had drunk the seven bottles between that time and the twenty-fifth of the month when the search was made.

This constituted the case for the defense, and Chief Light was recalled by the Crown. He told of searching the Sinclair residence on a former occasion and finding two small bottles of liquor different entirely from the ones in court. The medicine bottle was not there.

In his argument before the magistrate, O'Brien submitted that what actually happened had been explained. The bottle neck had broken when opened improperly and in order to save the liquor, the accused had done the only ordinary, reasonable and sensible thing that he could do. He had no decanter so used a pop bottle that was nearby. The accused had admitted that the liquor was to be consumed when strained. But that he had not hurried to strain it since he still had a supply of bottles that were intact. There was an obvious danger from small bits of glass that might easily have fallen into the contents of the shattered bottle. For almost a year, there had been only five purchases made at the vendors. This would indicate that Sinclair was not a heavy user of spirituous liquors. It was not reasonable to suppose that there was any intent on the part of the accused to break the law, and therefore there was no offense.

Crown Attorney Kerr believed that the evidence showed that the liquor was not intended for immediate use. He also pointed out that the dates on the permit indicated rapid consumption of liquor. Although there were only five entries the dates were in close succession. He also pointed out differences in the evidences of the officers and of the accused. He closed by submitting that the defendant came within the act.

Magistrate Floyd would not believe that they could drink the amount of liquor which Sinclair claimed and still carry on their work as labourers. After examining the bottle neck, he also did not believe that any glass could have fallen inside the bottle. He also reminded Sinclair, that his three former appearances in court on liquor charges gave him a record.

Just as the magistrate was about to utter the amount of fine after having found Sinclair guilty the Crown stated that he was not pressing for a severe penalty, and would be content with practically a minimum fine. The magistrate set the penalty at twenty-five dollars and costs or thirty days in gaol. Sinclair was unable to pay the fine and elected to do the thirty days.

Finance Committee.

Very few items were on the slate to be dealt with by the Finance Committee when it was called to order by the chairman, Alderman Phelan.

A. Weddell notified the committee that if the insurance carried by the city was re-written on one schedule there would probably be a saving in the amount of premium. Alderman Phelan and Alderman Ackerman were appointed a committee to consider the matter.

Alderman Phelan, the Mayor and City Clerk Armstrong were appointed a committee to bring in a report suggesting various polling officers and clerks for the municipal election. It was also suggested that a polling booth be made at Auburn School, but it is too late to make any changes this year as the voters' list has been printed, and the matter was left over for a future date. Alderman Cotton wanted to know if any steps were being taken to have the municipal elections early in December instead of on New Year's Day.

City Solicitor Wearing was authorized to collect the back business tax which is owed by the owner of the Albion Sweets before it was destroyed by fire.

Representatives from the Financial Post were present, wanting the city to take several pages in the publication, "Survey of Canada," which will be published at the end of the year. The matter was left with the Mayor, Aldermen McIntyre and Phelan.

Going Up!

Nightly, now, her smile is winning new hearts all over America. She is lovely Corrine Burton, whose New York home is the New Weston Hotel. Her march to fame includes a season each in "The Music Box" and "The Scandals;" and now, under Chas. Bowers' direction, she's going up in the movies!

"I don't believe in overlooking any point which may help make your presence pleasing," says Miss Burton. "Recently, I learned the method of caring for the hair, which is all the rage among New York girls, now. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush every time you arrange your hair. It makes my hair so easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It has gotten rid of my dandruff. It keeps my scalp and hair so clean and comfortable that I don't shampoo half as often as I used to. It gives my hair such silky, soft and lustrous appearance that friends comment on it."

Danderine is not oily. It removes the oily film from each strand of hair, restores its natural color, gives it new lustre. It dissolves dandruff, cleanses and invigorates the scalp. It is delightfully fragranced. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Lovely, gleaming hair and a healthy scalp for a few cents.

Women's League of Grace Presbyterian Church Hold Supper in Armories.

PROGRAM IN HALL.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 3.—(Examiner Correspondence). —The annual fowl supper, under the auspices of the Women's League of Grace Presbyterian church, was held in the Armouries on Tuesday evening, and was attended by more than five hundred people, general satisfaction being expressed with the bountiful meal provided, and the delightful manner of its serving.

The Hallowe'en atmosphere was emphasized in the orange and black colors which predominated in the decorative scheme, and in the marigolds, in dainty containers, which were placed at intervals down the length of the three long tables.

Shortly after 5 p.m. the tables began to fill up with guests, and for more than three hours thereafter those who were serving, either in the big pantry where supplies were obtained, or as waiters and waitresses, were given scarcely a breathing space since vacant chairs were immediately occupied by those waiting for the tempting meal.

Among the many helpers were:—Mrs. J. D. Armstrong, Mrs. R. Gilmour, Mrs. S. E. Eakins, Mrs. R. McMahon, Mrs. J. H. Paul, Mrs. R. J. McKnight, Mrs. T. Reid, Mrs. S. Pritchard, Mrs. S. Carveth, Mrs. W. Larmer, Mrs. H. Lord, Mrs. W. Belch, Mrs. A. McLeod, Mrs. Milton Pallis, Mrs. H. Ball, Mrs. E. Armstrong, Mrs. G. Wilson, Mrs. M. Ward, Mrs. B. Wright, Mrs. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Mrs. T. Ingram, Mrs. Pritchard, Sr., Mrs. L. Gilmour; Misses M. Gilmour, G. Dawey, Eileen Armstrong, R. Thorndyke, Jean Bothwell, Verbena Challice, E. McKnight, L. Syer, I. Syer, Georgina Wilson, Vaneta Ingram, Margaret Armstrong, M. Gibson, M. Ball; Messrs. M. Pallis, Laird Bothwell, J. Thompson, E. Armstrong, Aubrey Gilmour, and others. Messrs. T. Ingram and C. Thorndyke, sold tickets, and W. Larmer collected these at the tables.

The town hall was filled to capacity for the play, "A Kentucky Belle," put on by the Morrish Dramatic Club, following the supper; Miss Kathleen Lancashire taking the leading part, that of Isabelle Douglas, and fulfilling its exacting demands with decided cleverness and success.

Vocal solos filled in the time between the sets, and while the play had been very capably put on here some eight years ago by pupils of the local Continuation School, under the supervision of the principal, Miss M. Money, it was evidently thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience on Tuesday evening.

Financially receipts were in the neighborhood of $350, but final returns from sale of tickets, some baking left from the supper, each contributions, etc., may total up a somewhat higher figure.

Hallowe'en Social.

The Hallowe'en social evening, under the auspices fo the Wide-Awakes C.G.I.T. group, held in the basement of the United church on Wednesday evening, was largely attended and a decidedly successful and enjoyable event.

Decorations were in keeping with the season, the 'spook' with lighted Jack o' Lantern, which greeted the incoming guests immediately they stepped inside the outer door, being duplicated in larger size, several times over, in the entertainment room downstairs. Streamers in orange and black, runners depicting the traditional balck cats, bats, witches, etc., covering the wall back of the platform, and shades similarly decorated on the lights, created the proper Hallowe'en atmosphere for the occasion.

The president of the group, Miss Wilma Pallis, was in the chair, and the secretary, Miss Marian O'Brian, looked after the minutes and roll call. A brief opening devotional period, in which all the audience could take part, was followed by the formal program, the items including:

Piano duet by Mrs. W. W. and Miss Beatrice Jones; recitation, "A Little Girl's Hallowe'en," by Marjorie McDowell; motion song, "I've Two Little Hands," by the Primary Class; piano solo by Miss Annie McMahon; recitation, "Her Handbag," by Audrey Garside; song, "Don't" by Dorothy, Madeline, Marjorie, Beatrice and Teddy McDowell, Mrs. M. McDowell accompanying her children; "Inverted Quartette," by Francis and Beatrice Jones, Margaret McCarthy and Jean Stinson; recitation, "I Know," by Lenore Lambert; song, "O Dem Golden Slippers," by A. T. Armstrong, with ukelele accompaniment; reading, "A Hallowe'en of Long Ago," by Mary Burnham; solo, "Together," by Mrs. H. W. Johnston; recitation, "My Dad Says," by Jack Stinson; piano solo by Miss Estelle Hetherington.

Brief remarks by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, and an explanation of the use made of the funds of the group by the leader, preceded the entering heartily into the games and contests provided, the little folk enjoying biting at the swaying apples, hung at different heights for their convenience, while others 'speared' for apples on which initials had been carved and which were floating in a big pan of water. Prizes for the contests were all of the Hallowe'en variety, and the whole atmosphere of the gathering seemed to be one of 'fun and frolic' befitting the occasion.

A table of 'surprise parcels,' and another of home-made candy, found plenty of customers so that wares were soon exhausted, and a larger supply might easily have been sold.

Assisting at the door, where the silver collection was received, and letters pinned on each one who entered, in anticipation of the games to follow, were Misses Elvira Davis, Dorothy McDowell, Marguerite Hawken, and Annie McMahon; at the sale tables were Misses Jean Burnham, M. O'Brian, Wilma Pallis, Francis Jones, Jean Bothwell and others.

RECEIPTS $175.

(Examiner Correspondence).

NORHAM, Nov. 3.—Norham Church held a very successful fowl supper in connection with its anniversary, on Monday evening. The Campbellford orchestra provided music in the church during the supper hour. After the supper, a good program was given. The Campbellford male quartette gave several selections, which were much enjoyed. Rev. F. Howard gave a very practical address on "Be content with your wages," and Rev. F. G. McTavish of Campbellford entertained the audience with a number of good stories. He then gave a short, thoughtful address on 'Unselfishness.' Rev. G. W. Gardiner, of Castleton, spoke on "What are you worth?" Music by the Campbellford orchestra was given between these addresses. Solos were also given by Mr. Hanson and Major Bygott. The returns from the supper amounted to $175.

Millbrook

MILLBROOK, Nov. 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mr. and Mrs. Basil Richards were host and hostes, recently, for a very enjoyable social gathering in honor of his sister, Miss Phyllis Richards, for whom a miscellaneous showed was arranged by her friends as a pleasant surprise, the whole evening proving a delightful occasion.

Music and cards filled in the first party of the evening very acceptably, and later the gifts were brought in, a daintily-decorated basket being piled high with the many-shaped parcels.

The opening of the boxes and parcels proved, as usual, the feature of major importance and interest, the recipient of the shower, though taken completely by surprise, voicing her thanks suitably.

The service of dainty refreshments brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Among those present were: Mrs Lloyd Newton and Mrs. T. Wood of Cavan; Mrs. J. Abbott, Mrs. J. H. Yake, Mrs. T. Luxon, Mrs. C. W. Richards, Miss Thelma Ball, Lila Whyte, Muriel Curtis, Marjorie Skitch, Charlotte and Margaret Luxon, Betty Montgomery, Ella Elson, Ada Attwooll, Amy Brock, and Elizabeth Russell.

Decorations were very attractive and were carried out in the Hallowe'en style, with a winding passage as an entry, large shades for the lights and orange paper window curtains. The program, for which excellent music was provided by Ferdie Mowry's orchestra, included a number of novelty dances and a supper novelty was a sketch by several of the young men present. This was entitled "A Divorce Case" and added much to the merriment of the evening.

The Senior Hallowe'en party held at the Y.W.C.A. last night proved to be one of the biggest, jolliest and best parties ever held at the "Y." At seven o'clock, spooks, ghosts, witches, tramps, fancy dressed ladies, grandmothers, children and gallant young men began to arrive, and soon the halls, library and green room were crowded with Hallowe'en merrymakers. Promptly at eight o'clock the program commenced with a ghost walk through long dark corridors and underground passages where queer noises, spooky objects and ghostly warnings thrilled the crowd. When the guests arrived in the gymnasium, the grand march was held, a jazzy orchestra providing excellent music for marching and dancing. Members of this energetic orchestra, dressed in pierrot costumes, were Miss M. V. Jory, leader and player of drums and traps; Miss Muss Cox and Miss Eleanor Grisdale, at the piano; Miss Helen Lytle and Miss Jessie Deyell, pans and kazoos. Judges for the costumes were Mrs. E. Morrison, Mrs. H. Beal and Miss M. Perry. From two hundred and fifty in costume, it was very difficult to choose the prize winners. Some of the costumes were quite outstanding. Prizes went to the prettiest 18th Century Girl, Miss Gertrude Gimblett; best comic, Nita Mein as a tramp; best paper costume, Mesdames Jary and Giles, as two old ladies, and Margaret Curry, in pink and blue, with pretty parasol. Others called to the platform for honorable mention were two peanut men, Mesdames Watson and Farthing; a bride and groom, Miss Townsley and Mrs. J. Reynolds; a pirate, Miss Viola Harvey; and Hallowe'en Night, Miss Velma Scott. Thirty members of the Wohelo Club attended as the Wohelo family, with Mr. and Mrs. Come-Join-Us Wohelo and the Wohelo children. Between games, contests, stunts and dances in the gymnasium, fortunes were told at the booths of the pumpkin, witch, cat, bat, owl, ghost, pixie and raven. Fortune tellers for the evening were Mesdames R. Bugg, Armstrong, D. Wood, G. Johnson, J. Lynch, G. Simpson, and the Misses P. Barnard, D. Sherin, M. Lloyd, and Ferguson. The Y.W.C.A. was decorated in Hallowe'en fashion. A tall black witch met the guests at the door and a ghost was placed before the hall clock. Cats, pumpkins, pixies, bats, and yellow and black fancy crepe paper transformed the big rooms and gym. into a delightful setting for a happy party.

Rheumatism Crippled English Girl

But Gin Pills soon brought relief

A stranger in a strange land, only nine months out from England and six of these a cripple with Rheumatism. No wonder Miss Florence Hallett was despondent. Writing from Ottawa she sums up in a few sentences those dreary, painful months—three doctors, a foot specialist, a month in hospital, then work again when she "should have been in bed."

Gin Pills earn Miss Hallett's warmest praise. "I found an improvement after the first box," she declares gratefully. "I shall always keep your pills by me. I think they are wonderful."

The great value of Gin Pills lies in their soothing and tonic effect upon the kidneys. The relief they give sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, etc., is wonderful. But these acute conditions should never be allowed to develop. Take Gin Pills the first time symptoms of trouble show themselves—backache, dizziness, spots before the eyes, swollen joints, headaches, brick dust in urine, a burning sensation attendant on scanty or too frequent urination. 50c. a box at all druggists. THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

HERE'S a little note that arrived at my desk to-day, catching me up in my flight into the realm of psychology the other night.

• • • • •

"Isn't it funny how people indicate by their dress their desire to be what they are not?" was, apparently, what I wrote. The note says: "Now, Marion, one of Peterborough's leading athletes was dressed as Diabolo. How about him? Do you think he is envious of the keeper of Hades?"

• • • • • • •

My dear, whoever you are (you didn't sign the note), unless a person has a little of it in him he wouldn't think that way!

• • • • • • •

Just when I thought I had time to take a long breath after the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition and the Hallowe'en party, along came the editor with a request for two pages about Armistice Day. I asked you, the other day, to help out, and I'm appealing again.

• • • • • • •

I have already received two lovely contributions, but I am looking forward to receiving many more if I am to do what the editor wants—and I guess we can't fall down, can we, neighbors?

• • • • • • •

My suggestion is that you neighbors write letters telling how the news of the Armistice came to you, or what significance the day has to you, or what the Armistice meant to you, or anything else you can think of about Armistice Day.

• • • • • • •

Not by any means as payment for the work, but just to show that I appreciate your help, I will give a box of stationery to the neighbor sending in the best letter, and boxes of correspondence cards to the next two.

• • • • • • •

This is a real SOS. I sat up through the small hours of this morning trying to find out things I didn't know about the war and Armistice. I'm afraid it would not be a very interesting page I would prepare, and I'm looking forward to having many ideas contributed by you neighbors.

• • • • • • •

I did find out two or three things, however; some of them may give you a lead as to how to start your letters (the starting is always the worst, don't you think?).

• • • • • • •

One beautiful quotation I came across in reading of Ingersoll at his brother's grave: "From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word; but in the night of death hope sees a star, and listening love can hear the rustle of an angel's wing."

• • • • • • •

I think that's lovely; no bronze and marble monument can carry half so much hope to the aching heart; I have not met anything in literature to compare with the suggestion that those who lost can still find in the "night of death" the peaceful presence of a ministering angel

• • • • • • •

Some will cavil at the source. What does it matter, so long as we have the THOUGHT?

• • • • • • •

Then, there came to the office to-day, from Rev. J. D. Paterson, a poem that surpasses all I have read. "In Flanders Field" has a peculiar significance for Canadians, of course, and can never be replaced in our thoughts. "O Valiant Hearts" is as stirring a hymn as was ever written, and should supply Armistice Day thoughts to all.

• • • • • • •

"O Valiant Hearts who to your glory came
Through dust of conflict and through battle flame;
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,
Your memory hallowed in the Land you loved.

These were His servants, in His steps they trod,
Following through death the martyred Son of God;
Victor He rose, victorious too shall rise
They who have drunk His cup of Sacrifice."

• • • • • • •

I am sorry that I have only room for these two verses; I believe the hymn in its entirety will be printed in the Armistice number next Friday. I think, too, that it is to be sung as the special anthem at All Saints' Church on Armistice Sunday.

• • • • • • •

Do these things give you any ideas for your Armistice Day letters? Do they stir memories, joyful or sad, about that day?

• • • • • • •

I believe so hard that these "Valiant Hearts" should not be forgotten that I wish everyone who remembers them would write me a little note, just to commemorate them on this tenth anniversary. This is the most significant anniversary. When the twentieth rolls around many of us who cheered the boys as they marched away, or returned, will have passed, too, the Great Divide.

• • • • • • •

Let this tenth Armistice anniversary number of The Examiner set down for evermore our appreciation, our love, for those Valiant Hearts of Peterborough.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

By JEANETTE.

"When forth to steal he softly stole
His bags of chink he chunk.
And many a wicked smile he smole
And many a wink he wunk."

The above inspiring verse hasn't anything to do with a woman's column and it hasn't anything to do with any thought that follows. We hasten to say this, to avoid giving offense. However, it came into our mind when we watched the Hallowe'en parade on Wednesday night and saw the wicked red devil, with his curving tail and horns, prancing along in scarlet. What really made us think of it was the red of his garments. Satan is always pictured as wearing red, so there must be something in colors after all.

And that makes us think of a clever little piece in that delightful magazine, Canadian Homes and Gardens, whose October issue contains the article referred to. It is entitled "Colored Linens Tuned to the Temperament."

It seems that colors have such an influence on our characters and temperaments that people are beginning to choose their linens with an eye to their effect on the nerves. In this article, written by Ellen E. Mackie, she says that shell-shocked soldiers in the war were actually healed by the curative qualities of certain shades. Rooms in sanitariums were lined with buttercup yellow, which is inspiring, with rose that lends warmth, with soft violet and pale green that are cooling, and pale blue that is restful. Tones with life-giving elements were chosen for the war's casualties.

So now we may have colored sheets to match our bedrooms and to soothe our nerves. They come in all the pale, pastel tints that one desires.

An owner of a famous restaurant says that "gay colors cause people to eat, drink and be merry." Now we have table linens in delicate pinks, soft apple greens, mild buttercup and suave old ivory. They are made of Irish linen and they have painted borders in flowers and fruits that are matched by the same flowers and fruits of real origin, appearing in bowls used as centerpieces. What could be daintier?

A bride from the land of the heather and oat cakes came to Canada this week. With her she brought a wedding veil that had cunning horseshoes embroidered on its corners. And she brought too a bowl of heavy cut glass whose designs were large Scotch thistles incised in the thick glistening material.

When Miss Mary McMahon of Toronto addressed the women of the city at the Produced-in-Canada Fair, taking as her subject "Changing Times," she spoke of the advancement of women in business during the past twenty years, and identified this advance with the progressive use of the typewriter.

Elbert Hubbard, writing in his scrapbook some years ago, spoke of this same thing in the words:

"Women as a factor in business life arrived in the year 1876, discovered, if you please, at the Centennial Exposition by a man by the name of Remington. With the typewriter, woman's advent into the business world was assured. Before the Civil War, women were not employed even as school teachers. The scarcity of men in the years from 1866 to 1868 brought the woman school teacher into view and Normal Schools sprang up all over the United States to fit country girls for the office of teaching.'

So war, after all, besides the havoc it works with women's hearts and affections, brings them something. It brought them a certain amount of emancipation in those Civil War years and the last Great War also brought the franchise to the women of the Dominion.

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire is again offering its trio of annual prizes in literary and artistic work. A prize of $200, given by Mrs. R. W. Wood of Vancouver, is offered for the best short story, governed by certain conditions, the contest to close on February 1st, 1929. Closing on March 1st is the one-act play competition, for which a prize of $100 is offered by Preble MacIntosh of Montreal, and November 15th of this year marks the closing of the contest for Christmas card designs. The main rule in all these contests is that the competitor shall be a resident of Canada and a British subject.

"Although I am a very busy person, I never suffer with nerves, and as I was not ever thus, I attribute this condition to the fact that I get the requisite amount of vitamines in my food daily. I eat spinach every day, and always drink the water in which it is cooked. I also eat celery, prunes, dates, dried figs, lettuce and other fruit and vegetables. I always advise people to eat as little meat as possible. I never touch it. Get your roughage from brown breads, nuts and a little ordinary bran, two teaspoonfuls of which latter should be consumed daily. I sprinkle it over some of my food. One of the best foods that one can eat is nuts. I eat a half pound of ground nuts a week. Unless you are able to chew the nuts thoroughly it is best to put them through a grinder. They are an invaluable food to the intestinal tract.

"So many women rely on medicine to keep their 'tummies' in order. If you are in the habit of rushing for the pill-box, stop right now, and make your diet simple, healthful and effective in every way. Balance your diet and instead of medicine drink plenty of fruit-juices and water. Drink at least six glasses of water a day,—two at night, two in the morning, and the rest during the day between meals.

"When women arrive at middle age they are more often than not disposed to be attached to still postures, and as a result of too much food and too little exercise, they are on occasion troubled with shortness of breath accompanied by a sharp pain in the region of the heart. The best cure for this is to drink hot water several times during the day, followed by a day in which nothing is taken but fruit juice."

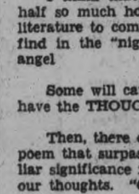
How to Strengthen Any Stomach



POSSIBLY that sour condition of your stomach is due to an over-stimulation of the gastric acid. A sour stomach isn't pleasant; and it isn't easy to excuse, when there is so simple a way to remedy it. To neutralize the harmful acid and put your stomach in good order take a little "Pape's Diapepsin"; after meals, or whenever the need is felt.

This fine remedy removes the cause of the trouble and promotes normal, healthy digestion. "Pape's Diapepsin" is sold by all druggists at 60 cents a package, and is the remedy which is recommended by millions because it gives immediate relief in all cases of difficult and painful digestion.

So, just be sure you provide yourself with "Pape's Diapepsin" today, so that stomach pain and digestive troubles need never worry you again. Or sour stomach cause you discomfort. This form of relief has helped many who thought their disorders could not be helped.

In Njango, a village on the shores of Lake Victoria, Uganda, an African by the use of a peculiar call can summon an eleven-foot crocodile from the depths of the lake and make it eat fish from his hand.

Bad weather last year had a disastrous effect on the number of visitors to Kew Gardens, London. The decrease, compared with 1926 was 84,459, the highest attendance being 60,014 on Easter Monday, and the lowest 6 on November 26.

PREPARING CREAM FOR CHURNING

Preparing cream for churning consists in developing the proper sourness and getting the temperature just right. No fresh cream should be added for at least twelve hours before churning. If the cream is sweet at churning time 5 to 10 per cent of clean-flavoured sour skim-milk may be added and the cream kept at churning temperature for 12 hours. When ready to churn the cream should appear smooth and gossy and pour like thick syrup. It should smell and taste slightly sour. The temperature of the cream at churning time is very important. Too high a temperature will result in a greasy butter with too much buttermilk. Too low a temperature is also undesirable. The best rule is to have such a temperature that the churning will be completed in from 25 to 30 minutes.

It is very difficult to give definitely exact temperature at which churning should be done as this temperature varies considerably. According to a Dominion government bulletin on Buttermaking on the Farm, it depends on the richness of the cream, the length of time the cows have been milking, and the breed and feed of the cow. When the cream is very rich, is from the milk of fresh cows, is from Holsteins or Ayrshires, or is from the milk of cows receiving linseed meal, gluten feeds, soya bean meal and succulent feed such as fresh pasture and clover, a low churning temperature from 54 to 62 degrees F. is required. A comparatively high temperature, from 54 to 75 degrees, is necessary when the cream is very thin, when the cows have been a long time in milk, when the cream is from Jersey or Guernsey cows, and when it is from the milk of cows fed cottonseed meal, potatoes, cornmeal, corn silage, sweet corn fodder, wheat bran, sugar beets, and dry feed such as hay, straw and dry pasture. The bulletin, which covers the entire process of buttermaking may be obtained from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

WARSAW

Warsaw Woman's Institute has held its meetings in many places. At first they were held in homes, then in the town hall, for which the council has never made any charge, except that the Institute pays the janitor fees. Henry Clements, however, was good enough to open the hall without the fees, and he has since helped the Institute by trucking.

Again they were held in homes or in the Town Hall. During the war it had the good fortune to have the upper floor of Thomas Clement's new building. This was commodious, light and warm, and the weekly Red Cross work was done there; small entertainments were given. Later that floor was needed for a dwelling for Mr. Hawthorne, and after holding their meetings where they could for a time, a room on the lower floor of Mr. Choate's store building was secured for meetings, library and a rest room. After a time that room was needed, and rooms in the Reid brick house were secured, and are still used. These rooms, however, are rather small and necessitate using the town hall for most special gatherings.

At the end of the first year after organization the Warsaw Institute members numbered sixty-three; they were—Mrs. A. F. Choate, Mrs. Meacham, Mrs. W. Campbell, Mrs. A. Fraser, Mrs. Gale, Mrs. W. Wasson, Mrs. Ellen Brown, Mrs. Robert Matthews, Mrs. S. R. Payne, Mrs. Battisby, Mrs. Wm. Payne, Mr. E. R. Hamblin, Mrs. Smith, dead; Mrs. Foster, dead; Miss Bessie Choate, Mrs. Isbister, Miss Julia Choate, Mrs. George Clements, Mrs. McIntosh, Mrs. Wm. Davis, Mrs. Phoebe Calder, Mrs. Robert Crowe, Mrs. Henry Moore, Miss Dorothy Dobson, Miss Grace Dobson, Mrs. Wm. Forsythe, Mrs. John Wason, Mrs. Joseph Edwards, Mrs. Newnham, Mrs. Arthur Edwards, Miss E. Wason, Mrs. Uriah Payne, Mrs. Robson, Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. W. Kidd, Miss Elmhirst, Mrs. T. Wilson, Mrs. Hawthorne, Miss Clara Kidd, Mrs. Wm. Carveth, Miss Victoria Payne, Mrs. Thomas Miller, Mrs. R. Bullock, Mrs. Nathan Payne, Mrs. Joy, Miss Lottie Smith, Mrs. Thomas Clements, Mrs. John Kidd, Mrs. William Douglas, Mrs. J. J. McDonald, Mrs. Fred Morgan, Miss Maggie Miller, Miss Bertha Rowe, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Marr, Mr. Henry Clements, Mrs. Robert Somers, Mrs. Joe Moore, Mrs. Nathan Bell, Miss Bradshaw, Miss Clara Madill, Miss Grace Brown, Mrs. Albert Helps.

Many members of the Institute hold to the vision of a home for the Institute, either a building and grounds owned by them, and having all necessary conveniences, for all but extra ordinary gatherings, the rooms properly cared for, and a permanent use of the library.

Shifting, as we have, much property has been lost, and while the landlords have ever been considerate, rented homes are not permanent. When Henry Clements had charge of the hall, he gave his services. Still, the money paid out in the twenty-five years, with interest amounts to about one thousand dollars.

Instead of owning a separate home, if the Town Hall were altered, as it should be to meet the needs of the community, that would be perhaps the right place to have Institute gatherings, as they are community affairs. As it is the Hall is anything but suitable. Dreams come true sometime.

MILLBROOK

Mrs. W. J. Stone, of Bond Head, President of the Women's Institutes of Ontario, stresses the point, in many of her addresses, that a good Institute member must be loyal to her home first. "We are paying too much attention to the material, and not enough to the spiritual; teach our children to be God-fearing, and to have love as the dominant force in their lives; make our homes just as tasteful and attractive as circumstances will permit; do not fail to have books of the best kind as to contents, the sort children should read, and others for the grown-ups, too, where they may be readily picked up and read; and have music a feature of the home as well, but do not let it be only jazz; cultivate a taste of the best in literature and musical compositions, and thus build up the spiritual and cultural side of the family life. The community, the church, and the nation will reap the benefit as well."

"When every mother, who is an Institute member, feels she must discharge faithfully her duty to make her home a place where her children will grow up to fine manhood and womanhood, she is doing her share to build up a safe and a happy community, one that will be a very pleasant place in which to live."

Institute members are urged to remember that their motto: "For Home and Country," includes the support of Canadian industries by buying Canadian made goods. Shopping in the home town, where possible, is also listed as an important item in real patriotism.

Mr. G. A. Putnam, Superintendent of Institutes, speaking on "The Future of Institutes," has this to say: "One of the factors that has made for the success of this movement in the past was the type of woman it has attracted—the busy, homemaking woman, who had not only much to get from the Institute, but much to give to it from her own experience. Then, too, the fact that this organization recognizes no sectarian, class, or party distinctions, has been a success feature, and I hope this avoidance of all controversial questions will contine indefinitely."

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office

DEAR MARION:

"Dear Marion:

I was much taken with your comments on the woman who considers it "Be-littling" by some strange reasoning, to be seen hanging out her washing. Pity the dignity which requires so small a support!

But do you know there are also some who would scorn to be seen carrying a parcel of any kind on the street? Actually! Or to be seen in any but the last word in style? One could name countless numbers of these petty trivialities that go to the makeup of some women. It is not easy to "suffer fools" gladly or in silence but I suppose one should be more amused than provoked at these trifles. Still along that way madness lies and it does not always stop at the point where only oneself is concerned.

Such women are quite capable of doing unthought of harm for they will not hesitate to vent their small meanness on others.

How often have we seen the supercilious glance bestowed on some stranger in the family pew. The ignoring of the poor woman who has lived next door for years and has never yet received more than a chilly salute from her fashionable church member. She does not belong to a certain club or a particular 'set.'

They will not speak to Mrs. Jones next door because of some fancied injury done them, and then bow their heads when the minister says 'Love Thy neighbor' and think 'what lovely words.'

When one sees the deliberate unkindnesses some women will go out of their way to inflict on others, little things that hurt so deeply, one wants to exclaim, "Woman's inhumanity to woman makes countless thousands mourn."

Our Lord had very little patience with people of that little calibre. For the sinner or the sincere man He had words of rebuke and pardon or of commendation as the case might be. But for the 'whited sepulchre' the people who were intolerant of other's feelings and the self-righteous hypocrite He had words as we know.

After all, it is the little things that count in our daily life. Would you think me a traitor to my sex if I ventured to say that it would not enter into the heart of a man to inflict the little snubs the irritating pin pricks that only a narrow mind could resort to—on his fellow man that a woman can carry off with a self-satisfied complacent little smile!

Well Marion all this tirade started as the result of your brief remark about a certain class of women, happily in the minority, who hang their clothes in the cellar rather than admit to the all powerful 'neighbors' that the laundry work is the result of their own labor, a matter that the sensible housewife should take pride in and does. Of course we would, most of us, I think, gladly avail ourselves of the extra help of a laundress, leaving us free to pursue some more congenial task. But why try to impress others with these trifles that seem all important to us and matter not to the neighbors at all if we could only realize it? Enough. Let us continue to flaunt our linen proudly to the miracle workers of wind and sun, remembering "A woman's a woman for a' that."

Yours sincerely,
ADRASTIA."

I think that you are very right in your "tirade," and it is a great pity that so many otherwise sterling women allow these trivialities to spoil them. One can excuse great mistakes, often, because they result from great endeavours, but petty meanness and that terrible "better than my neighbor" spirit are inexcusable. So let us, as you suggest, "flaunt our linen" as a symbol of work well done and a declaration of our freedom from fear of what anyone thinks about us.

"Dear Marion:

In reference to Somebody's letter as to the position of the bar on a script S I looked in the Family Bible, printed in 1767, and find the bar is on the left throughout.

Just thought this might be of interest. I do enjoy reading your page every evening.

Yours sincerely,
MACK."

Thanks, "Mack," for the information. Aren't these old books interesting? I have several I prize very highly.

I'm glad that you enjoy reading our page, and I hope you will write again.

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy reading your page very much and I congratulate you upon the co-operation you have with your readers and the splendid success of your page. The hints are many and useful.

I am enclosing a recipe for Orange Loaf and Orange Cake which I think are delicious. Perhaps some of the readers would like to try them.

Wishing you luck,
M. W."

Lakefield.

I'm sure the neighbors will wish to try your orange recipes. I gave one a few days ago, that I picked up while out visiting, and your recipes should increase the vogue for orange cooking this winter. It is neighborly help such as this that makes the page good, and on behalf of the neighbors I wish to thank you.

"Dear Marion:

Here I come again, I am still reading the Women's Page daily. Don't you think the recipes are just great? I cut them all out and paste them in a book with mucilage. So I'm sure we'll have all kinds of "good goodies."

Some one has asked for a recipe for citron preserves, me too. I have a lot of citrons and would be very grateful to know the best way to preserve them.

Wasn't "After Five Years" a very interesting competition? I have some copies cut out and am keeping them. Sorry I didn't have time to write a little on it too, but I don't say I could compete with some or any of our fellow writers. Perhaps there will be something I can 'just try.'"

Well Marion I am again sending for helps. It's sure a lot of bother, but a wonderful help. Wishing you, and the page oceans of success, I remain,

Yours truly,
JENNY WREN II."

If there's anything pleases me more than to receive a letter, "Jenny Wren II," it's to receive a second letter from the same person. Welcome again!

I am keeping all the recipes, and I surely do think them great. I tried one of the citron recipes last week, and it turned out splendidly.

I'm sorry you missed the "After Five Years" competition, but here's another chance—write me a letter about Armistice Day, telling how you heard about the Armistice, or what it meant to you, or anything else you like. You'll have to hurry, though, because the editor wants my Armistice pages ready by Wednesday. "Just try"

And don't stay away from the page so long again!

"Dear Marion:

I too, enjoy your page very much, and am sending for this week's help. I feel rather small in always accepting but never filling out your card. It's not indifference, it's simply that others are much more clever than I am. I have been benefited by your suggestions which I think is one of your main ideas, is it not?

It certainly is my big idea, "S.S.S.", to make the page helpful, and the neighbors are doing it for me! When you get an idea that might help someone, don't fail to send it in.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Like many others I am very much interested in your page. I am a busy mother with three little ones to care for so I get many helps from it.

Will you please send me instructions for autumn hat and for making wool flowers?

Thank you,
AVIS."

Stirling.

I'm glad, indeed, "Avis," to know that in spite of your busy life you have time to read our page, and that you get help from it. Write again soon.

"Dear Marion:

Your page is certainly improving all the time. It is the first thing I turn to as soon as the paper comes. I wonder if you or some reader would send me that piece on Infantile Paralysis as I also lost the paper it was in. I am enclosing stamps for helps, wool flowers hat and Hallowe'en entertainment. I think the helps I have received are wonderful and so thoroughly explained. Thanking you in advance.

HILDAGUARD."

I'm very sorry that there is not a single copy of the paper of September 17 left. I'll keep your request on file, though, and if I can find time I will type a copy of the article you mention.

I'm glad you like the helps, don't hesitate to ask for more, or to tell me any way I can help.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Am I too late in sending for the Hallowe'en helps? I hope not.

Your page has been of great service to me, interesting as well as instructive, and I think every woman should rally to help you with the Christmas suggestions.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Sincerely yours,
SUE."

Thanks for your appreciation, "Sue." The helps were sent you at once, but I haven't had a chance to answer your letter until now.

Are you going to help me with my Armistice pages?

"Dear Marion:

Hope I am not too late for this help. I find your column very helpful and interesting, and hope it will continue.

I'm glad to hear from Keene, and to know that our page is appreciated.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

THE SATURDAY MARKET BASKET

The prices in fruits and vegetables have not varied much from last week, being the same in many cases. Some of the fruits are done and those who have waited until the end of the season find themselves disappointed.

Merchants advertised the last call for peaches about three weeks ago, now they are advertising the call for grapes. Apples and pears still remain in quantities. Apples sell according to the variety—Duchess sell for 35 and 40 cents a peck; Greenings at 60 cents a peck; Snows and Spies also sell at 60 cents a peck and McIntosh Reds at $1 a peck. Pears are 75 cents and $1 a basket, while eating pears are still 6 for 25 cents. Eating apples are 5 cents each.

Bananas vary in prices, and are a little dearer than a few weeks ago, but are selling from 35 to 40 cents a dozen. Oranges range in price from 35 to 75 cents a dozen, and lemons from 30 to 40 cents. Grapefruit are 3 and 4 for 25 cents.

Potatoes are 20 cents a peck; sweet potatoes are 5 pounds for 25 cents. Carrots are selling at 30 cents a peck, and turnips are 5 and 10 cents each. Cabbages range in price, but are mostly 15 and 20 cents each, and cauliflower are 15 and 20 cents a head.

Iceberg head lettuce is 15 and 20 cents a head. Green peppers are 3 and 4 for 10 cents. Celery is priced at 3 bunches for 25 cents, while celery hearts are 15 cents a bunch or 2 for 25 cents. Spinach is 2 pounds for 25 cents, and cranberries are 25 cents a pound. Pumpkins and squash are 15 and 25 cents each, and vegetable marrow are sold at 15 and 20 cents each.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties. By LAURA.

Just now many of the churches in Peterborough are planning for the annual bazaar or sale of work for the Christmas season. Most of the Sunday schools or halls where they are held are quite large so almost any scheme can be carried out quite successfully. Besides the sale of fancy articles, which is always attractively arranged, afternoon tea or a supper is usually served—the latter, I suppose to attract the men.

Greater interest is added if the affair is unique so it always pays in the long run to put a little thought in the planning of the afternoon or evening. The 'Feast of Seven Tables' is something old yet new. There are seven tables, and are set in white with centrepieces and other decorations to carry out the color scheme. The first table is set near the door and the others are arranged according to the seasons. Two sets of waiters are necessary if a large crowd is expected, one to clear away and the other to re-set. All must, of course, dress to harmonize with the color of their tables. The food is served in small quantities and in small dishes. A bell is great assistance in the seating of the guests, at the first signal, seven guests are seated at the first table and at the end of seven minutes the bell rings again, and the guests pass on to the next table and seven more guests are seated—if this can be served in a separate room from the sale of work it would be more convenient to just let in the desired number at a time. At the close of every seven minutes the bell rings and the guests must pass on until they have been at every table. If an extra charge is to be made for the meal, seven cents might be charged at the door upon entering, seven cents at the last table, and seven more cents to get out. In all, twenty-one cents is not much for a meal.

The decorations and the menu for the different tables might consist of something like this:

White Table—White centrepiece, white dishes, white napkins, white flowers, shredded potatoes, white bread and butter, cold roast pork, milk.

Brown Table—Brown centrepiece, brown dishes, doilies worked in brown, brown leaves pressed, brown bread and butter, brown coffee, brown baked beans, brown pickles.

Red Table—Old-fashioned red cloth, red flowered dishes, red napkins, red flowers, red cake, cranberry, wafers tied with red ribbon.

Orange Table—Orange bordered centrepiece, orange paper napkins, orange colored flowers, orange wafers, sliced oranges, orange cake.

Yellow Table—Yellow centrepiece, yellow figured dishes, yellow paper napkins, yellow flowers, lemon pie, cheese, lemonade.

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. XIII. VEGETABLES (CONTINUED)

STORAGE.

Present weather conditions probably incline the home gardener to the conviction that, once his vegetables are successfully lifted, his problems are at an end. Yet the condition of our winter supply of Vitamine B depends largely on storage.

Essentials for the successful storage of vegetables are: (1) A perfect product; (2) Ventilation; (3) Correct temperature; (4) Proper degree of moisture in the air.

Specimens that are more mature or ripe than the average, or that have been cut or bruised even in the slightest degree, should be culled from those that are to be kept. These may be kept separately to be used first, as they will often keep for some time without trouble and are perfectly good to use. They may be re-examined before final storing.

Ventilation is the factor most frequently neglected. It is not enough, as many think, to put the product to be stored in a place of proper temperature. Closely confined air, either cold or warm, makes for the development of bacteria that causes decay.

A few vegetables—as beans and sweet potatoes—require for their keeping a warm, rather than a cool, place. Evenness of temperature becomes the problem of their preservation. A constantly varying temperature is not conducive to good keeping.

A considerable amount of moisture in the air is required where root crops and other vegetables which normally would remain in the soil are to be kept. A dirt floor tends to equalize the moisture of the air and keep it normal. Where a cement floor is used, however, soil, sand, moss, or similar material which will keep the vegetables moist without being wet, can be used to pack them in. Beets and carrots should be pulled and the tops cut off when the soil is dry (a difficult matter this year). In basement or cellar they may be placed in ventilated barrels, boxes, or crates, or simply placed in small piles along the wall.

If storing in pits dig a six-inch excavation in a well-drained place. Line with hay, etc. Place beets on this in conical pile. Cover, and carry hay several inches above apex of vegetables, having it extend through dirt for a ventilator. This may be covered with a board or piece of tin. The dirt should be two or three inches thick.

Cabbage may be stored similarly to the above or in any of the following ways: (1) Pull roots and all and place in a long pit with heads down; (2) Place in rows with roots in earth in a shallow trench. Make a frame over them, bank it up with dirt, then cover with straw. (This is a good way to provide for your spring greens.) (3) Place on shelves in outdoor cellar.

Potatoes may be kept in the storage room in the basement, in outdoor storage cellars, and in banks and pits. When placed in the basement, they should be protected from light. When stored in banks or pits, they may be handled in the same way as beets and carrots. They must be kept from freezing, and, before winter sets in, the pit must be covered with manure straw, or other material, in addition to several inches of earth. It is a good plan to place the greater portion of the crop in banks or pits and a small quantity in the basement or outdoor storage cellar for immediate use.

CRAB APPLE PRESERVES

(Contributed by Mrs. H. C. Holloway.)

It is rather late for preserving crab apples, but perhaps my help will come of use next year. In preserving crab apples, after quartering, sprinkle soda over the apples and pour boiling water over them. Let stand a few minutes and apples will not cook to pieces.

(Contributed by Mary Ellen)

10 pounds grapes (1 basket)
1½ pounds raisins
3½ pounds sugar

ORANGE LOAF

(Contributed by M. W., Lakefield.)

Juice of 1 orange and ½ cup white sugar poured over immediately after it is taken from oven.

PRESERVING APPLES

(Contributed by Mrs. H. S.)

Peel and quarter your apples and cook until soft like applesauce. Measure a cup of white sugar to a cup of applesauce and let boil for half an hour. Put in jars while hot. This is nice for winter fruit.

CHEESE STRAWS

(Contributed by Mrs. Joseph Kelly, Marmora.)

Take one ounce of finely grated cheese, one ounce of butter, one ounce of bread crumbs, one ounce of flour, a good pinch of salt, a small pinch of cayene pepper and water.

Rub the butter into the flour, add the bread crumbs, cheese, pepper and salt and just sufficient water to make a stiff paste. Roll the paste out to the thickness of a quarter of an inch and cut into strips three inches long and a quarter of an inch wide. Bake on a greased baking pan in a moderately cool oven until crisp. One-quarter of an hour is allowed for baking. The cost is about fifteen cents and is sufficient for four people.

CORN MEAL MUFFINS

THIRTY BILLION CUPS OF TEA

It would take twenty-five average steamships, loaded to capacity, to carry al the tea used in the United States in one year, reports Popular Science Monthly. Fifty million people each year drink 30,000,000,000 cups of tea, costing seventy-five million dollars.

The vast majority continue to prefer finer teas. A slight reduction in the price of poorer teas does not interest them.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE DISAGREEABLE.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

Being disagreeable is not always an accident. It is not always caused by indigestion and other purely physical causes that sour a disposition.

We are all more or less disagreeable at times to show our resentment, to get even with some one. It is a form of bullying. And it is rather a cruel type of punishment. It releases the poisons of jealousy, animosity, resentment and hate.

Disagreeableness is also a sign of contempt. We are usually disagreeable towards those whom we have come to dislike temporarily at least. We do not [illegible] that way towards a person we are [illegible] for his money or his friend[illegible]

[illegible] disagreeable when we care more for ourselves than for others.

Another object of being disagreeable is to make others uncomfortable, to make them feel as badly as you do. Sometimes this is motivated by revenge, sometimes it is motivated by the desire to secure company in your misery. It is hard to enjoy the blues while others are in a happy frame of mind.

People are sometimes disagreeable to those whom they regard as unworthy of consideration.

The most interesting phase of being disagreeable is that it creeps out quite unconsciously from the inward attitude. If for any reason you dislike a person or are temporarily put out with him you show this in your manner and conduct if not in slips of the tongue and other tell-tale signs despite your best effort to cover up your true feelings. This is why we are unusually polite towards those we dislike, to cover our resentment without concealing it. We rightly suspect the person who becomes overpolite to us all of a sudden. This is the worst form of disagreeableness.

LYRICS OF LIFE

SOMETHING

Oh, to be singing something!—
If only a song like this;
For the passing throng might need a song
That the passing throng might miss.
Even a song is something,
If only a word or two,
So sing your best to the heart depressed,
If that is the thing you do.

Oh, to be doing something!—
If only an humble deed.
It may be small, but it may be all,
That the passing throng may need.
Even a smile is something
To many a maid and man;
So give a smile and a hand awhile,
If that is the thing you can.

Oh, to be loving something!—
If only the weak and sad.
It means a lot, if they're rich or not,
If it's all of the love they've had.
Even a dog is something,
If he longs for a friend today.
You can't give all that the rest let fall,
But love is a thing you may.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUNTY'S SLIDE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Baby Bunty was caught fast up inside the chimney of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. Yes, the poor, little orphan rabbit girl could not get down.

Some of you know how Bunty got up the chimney. Some of you do not. To those who do not I would say that Tingle and Tangle gave Bunty a boost up the chimney so she could see it was all right for Santa Claus to climb down when Christmas came. After having boosted, or shoved, Bunty up the chimney of the big fireplace in the hollow stump bungalow, Tingle and Tangle went out to play and Bunty fell asleep inside the sooty chimney.

Then Uncle Wiggily came home and, feeling cold, he made a little fire on the hearth. The smoke made Bunty sneeze and she awoke, but she was so caught and wedged in the chimney that she could not come down.

"Can't you do something to help me get out of here, Uncle Wig?" asked poor Bunty up the chimney. Her voice sounded muffled as though she had her head inside a barrel.

"Oh, I'll get you out all right," said the rabbit gentleman. "Take a long breath now and make yourself as slim and slender as you can."

Bunty did this and Uncle Wiggily, stooping down on the hearth, from which he had scattered the little fire, reached up his paws, hoping he could get hold of Bunty's feet and pull her down.

But she was too far up inside the chimney for him to do this, though he stretched all he could. Then Uncle Wiggily tried to think of another way to get Bunty out of the chimney.

"Wiggle as hard as you can, Bunty," he called to her, "and maybe you will slide down."

So Bunty wiggled but she did not slide down. Some chunks of black soot rattled loose and a little brick dust, but no little rabbit girl.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Bunty, who was tired of being cooped up in the chimney. She wished she had not asked Tingle and Tangle to boost her up.

"Don't worry, now," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'll think of a way to get you down."

By this time Tingle and Tangle, as well as the rest of the forty twelve little bunny boys and girls, learning that something was wrong had come into the bungalow from their play and were watching their father trying to get Bunty out of the chimney.

"Did you try to reach up and get her?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily, "I did."

"Did you ask her to wiggle and see if she could slide down?" asked Mrs. Longears and Uncle Wiggily said that also had been tried.

"Maybe if you could get somebody strong, like Mr. Stubtail, the Bear, to get on the roof and jiggle the chimney, Bunty might slip down then, Daddicums," said Buster.

"It's worth trying," said Mr. Longears.

So they got out the long ladder and telephoned for Mr. Stubtail, who had not yet packed himself away in mothballs for his long winter sleep, which all bears take.

"Why, of course, I'll jiggle the chimney," said Mr. Stubtail.

He got up on the roof and shook the chimney as hard as he could without loosening any of the brick. But that didn't bring Bunty down. She was still stuck up inside the blackness and she was getting tired.

"Well, that's no good," said Mr. Stubtail, when he found that shaking the chimney didn't loosen Bunty. "But perhaps if I had a long pole I could poke her down."

He was given one of the clothes props, but when he tried to poke Bunty he tickled her in the ribs and she laughed so much that she was wedged even tighter in the chimney. So this didn't do. And then Uncle Wiggily said:

"I know! We must grease Bunty and then she will be slippery and she will easily slide down the chimney."

"The very thing!" growled Mr. Stubtail kindly. "Put some grease on the end of this long pole."

So a rag was tied on the clothes prop and on the rag was put some butter. And when this was spread around Bunty, as if she were a big slice of bread, all of a sudden she began to slip and slide and in a second down she plopped out of the chimney into the fireplace not hurt at all. Of course, she was greasy and black from soot, but Nurse Jane soon washed her clean.

"Don't ever let anybody boost you up the chimney again," said Mrs. Longears and Bunty said she wouldn't. So this is the end of that story.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, NOV. 4, 1928.

Good and evil planetary aspects contend to-day, according to astrology. It is a rule most favorable to church attendance and visits with friends.

The morning is an auspicious time for women who take stock of home matters or prepare to entertain members of their families.

The rule is good for constructive thinking and for wise planning. It is well to lay out the week's program this morning.

This is read as an auspicious day for wearing new garments and women especially should benefit since they may find it easy to make a good impression even on matter of fact husbands and brothers.

The rule is not altogether fortunate for the clergy who may feel that they exercise less influence over parishioners than they desire to maintain.

Increase of Sunday recreations will be evident in all parts of the country, the seers prophesy, and yet there will be a decided turning back to religious observances.

Under this direction of the stars farmers and other workers may be restive and dissatisfied, but they have the forecast of better feeling in 1929.

The old and those who cling to outworn ideas are indeed unfortunate under this planetary rule which seems to presage radical progress.

The Sun to-day is adverse to many human desires and those who usually bask in its rays of fortune may feel depressed.

While the configuration is most kindly where lovers are concerned it is well to delay announcing new engagements, since parents may not be sympathetic while this rule of the stars continues.

The evening is read as peculiarly favorable to courtship and marriages at this time should bring happiness, even though the financial outlook is not promising.

Late to-day the aged should benefit, physically and mentally. They may even expect the young to ask advice.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be unusually ambitious in the coming year of their lives. They should not lend money and should beware of get-rich-quick schemes.

Children born on this day probably will have prosperous careers. These subjects of Scorpio generally see the big possibilities, social and financial, and succeed in making their dreams come true.

MONDAY, NOV. 5, 1928.

Mercury in benefic aspect rules today, according to astrology, which finds the planetary government promising for good political government.

The partial eclipse of the Sun which takes place the 12th of this month falls with the planet Saturn angular and in power, a fact that is supposed to presage misfortunes for women, chief of which is an increase in the number of divorces.

This eclipse will especially affect Russia, a London astrologer prophesies, and will bring changes that will be beneficial.

Corruption in handling public moneys and public business may be expected to be even more widespread than formerly, it is foretold, following the eclipse.

Persistently the foreign seers prognosticate for Europe and the Orient terrible battles and bloodshed.

After long interest in personalities and small details of their careers the world is to see life in its largest relations, the seers foretell, and for this reason progress will be much accelerated.

Growth of aviation will tend to establish the habit of looking on broad expanses of experience as well as of land, astrologers explain.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have changes of importance in the coming year. New friendships and much happiness are indicated.

Children born on this day may become great travelers. Many subjects of Scorpio have an extraordinary sense of time. They are often intense in nature and for this reason likely to be jealous.

WESTWARD HO!

All good Canadians realize that Canada is a country to be proud of, but how many however, have tried to visualize the remarkable variety and vastness of this far-flung Dominion? It is only through travel that the immensity and outstanding natural beauty of our great heritage is realized. Travelling westward to the Pacific Coast we pass mighty rushing river, innumerable lakes and dense lumbering regions, thence across the wide prairies and through the magnificent Rockies, a revelation of peerless scenic grandeur—then Vancouver and Victoria, those gems of the north Pacific, where the warm Pacific winds make year round golf possible.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round "The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train, leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schedule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request. 1d each side of the house there will be made 10 bowling greens, with place for parking, benches and flowers on the sides of the greens.

BOWLING CLUB

The entire property will be surrounded with a six foot steel fence similar to the one the Cobourg Bowling Club has around its property.

Fine, Large Building.

The club house will be a fine, large building and it will have verandahs facing on either side. Along the sides of the green there will be a thirty inch bank to stop runners and keep the balls on the green.

This property, it is thought, will accommodate a membership on the club of about two hundred or over.

The lawn bowlers were finding their old property on Aylmer and Brock streets too small and it was getting worn out. So instead of spending a large sum in fixing the old property which was already overcrowded they decided to buy a piece of land of their own.

Work of plowing and grading the property will commence immediately and it will continue until winter sets in. It is expected that it will take a whole year to put the property in the excellent shape that the club has planned and it will be 1930 before the new greens will be opened for play.

The membership of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club now is about one hundred men and about sixty-five women.

HALLUCINATIONS AND ILLUSIONS.

If a person sees a sheet hanging from a clothesline on a dark night and imagines that the sheet is a ghost, he sees an illusion; but if the sheet is not there, nor any other thing which might resemble the ghost, he sees what is termed a hallucination.

Dreams are true hallucinations, but as they occur with almost every individual they cannot be called abnormal. It is only when they occur during the waking hours that they can be considered unusual.

Many of the greatest men and women in history are known to have been subject to hallucinations, among whom may be mentioned Socrates, Plato, Joan of Arc, Swedenborg, Napoleon, and Bunyan. Intellectual people, perfectly sane, are often liable to hallucinations after prolonged periods of intensive mental concentration or strain.

Most hallucinations appear in the semi-waking state preceding sleep. They may be induced in perfectly normal people by processes of auto-suggestions, crystal gazing, day dreaming and hypnotism. It is very much like seeing pictures in glowing coals, or animals and cities in clouds. When one is concentrating earnestly and expectantly, with even a minimum of suggestion, the crystal or cloud disappears, and the vision may become so pronounced as to seem the reality. This can also occur on dark nights in unfamiliar surroundings. When one's mind is filled with thoughts of ghosts, one's imagination readily exaggerates strange sounds or shadows so strongly that it is hard for the reason to preserve a balance.

Other types of hallucinations are caused by diseased nerve endings or brain cells which stimulate the mind into believing that things exist which are actually non-existent.

A number of drugs such as opium, hashish, cocain and even alcohol will produce these mental pictures. Hysterical people often self-hypnotize themselves intoe hallucinations.

Theosophy brings out the interesting theory that many delusions and hallucinations are actually thought-forms and astral bodies which actually become visible to one who is sensitized or under unusual mental excitement. It is also possible, although not thoroughly investigated, that telepathic suggestions may produce visual or auditory hallucinations.

The most typical hallucinations, however, are in insane cases, these often being the only abnormal symptoms. The dementia praecox hallucinations may lead to destructive impulsive actions, while in paranoia, they may lead to delusions of grandeur or of persecution. Any disturbance of the brain, or toxins from obscure diseases, may produce these mental apparitions.

It is estimated that most of these delusions occur with the hearing, next the vision, and very few with the senses of taste, touch or smell.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Abscessed Teeth and Arthritis.

QUESTION: R. H. writes: "I have been poisoned by bad teeth and have had them all out. Both knees are swollen and stiff. Please tell me what to do."

ANSWER: If the abscessed teeth were the whole cause of your swollen knees you may expect to get rid of your trouble, but it may take a long time unless you use such methods as fasting and dieting to cleanse the blood of the accumulated poisons. I advise you to send for my special article on the cure of rheumatism, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Olive Oil and Liver Trouble.

QUESTION: H. L. writes: "Is olive oil good for constipation, liver and kidney trouble? If so, what amount and when should it be taken?"

ANSWER: Olive oil is a very good oil to use, and may be taken in large quantities if one enjoys the taste. One suffering from constipation and liver trouble will often be greatly benefited by taking as much as four ounces of olive oil just before retiring. If this is combined with about four ounces of grapefruit juice it will be found more palatable. The mixture should be made into an emulsion through vigorous shaking or stirring. This may be taken with benefit at least once a week, and some have found quicker results through using this large quantity of olive oil every night before retiring, for a period of two or three weeks.

Swollen Knees and Legs.

QUESTION: J. A. N. writes: "I work standing still and it causes my legs to swell and pain me below the knees. Would a special diet of fruit fast help me to overcome this trouble? Would grapes be as good as oranges for removing the toxins from my system?"

ANSWER: The extreme amount of swelling you have in your lower limbs may be caused from an interference with the circulation because of prolapsus of the abdominal organs. A careful diet would help you in many ways but you should also take a good system of setting up exercises for developing the abdominal muscles. At this time in the year a grape fast is especially good and may be taken in place of the oranges.

SCARECROW - - By FANNIE HURST

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Lummox", "Humoresque"

Old Scarecrow — good old scarecrow, that scared the crows away from the field of yellow corn silk.

Beautiful Scarecrow.

MISS TIBBET was a second cousin. Somehow, if you were named Miss Tibbet and were a second cousin, and you came to take charge of Second Cousin's brood of six newly-orphaned daughters, you would look a little angular, and as if the blood in your veins were thin and vinegary, and there would be freckles across the backs of your hands and cable cords in your neck and your cheeks would look as if the sap had dried in them and left just a pair of flat, yellow-looking leaves.

Miss Tibbet looked that way. When she dawned upon Second Cousin, who was just two days her junior, and his six incredibly pretty daughters, ranging from two to fourteen, it was as if someone had flung a large, wet gray rag into the middle of a home that was charming with countless evidences of its former lovely mistress, to say nothing of Second Cousin—who was a big, well-set-up fellow of countless good natures—and his six dazzling daughters who lit up the premises with six taffy-colored heads.

The first night of her arrival, Miss Tibbet, who had resigned her position of six years' standing with a school for young ladies in Cooperstown, New York, overheard Lucille, the eldest, snickeringly confide to Jeanette, the second eldest, that their cousin was a "scarecrow."

It was not that Miss Tibbet had ever had any illusions about herself. Life had long since taught her the rather grim lesson that her role was not that of one of the endowed ones. At twenty-five, Miss Tibbet had yet to feel any of the ecstacies to which her sex and age entitled her. At twenty-five, Miss Tibbet was already accustomed to being regarded among the young girls who surrounded her as a dried-up old maid. So that it was not as if the appraisal of her new young charges came to her with a sense of shock. It was only that, somehow, the term "scarecrow" cut into her consciousness. Into her very heart, as if a hot iron had been branded into her flesh.

Scarecrow. In the busy, responsible harassed, astonishingly merry and hilarious years that were to follow, more than once, in the center of a busy day, or a crowded evening, with her six harum-scarum charges clamoring about her for this and for that service, Miss Tibbet had cause to remember the epithet.

"Here old Tibbet; for goodness sakes, pin my sash, can't you!"

"Old thing, don't stand there and gape like a scarecrow. Sew on my shoe buckle in a hurry, there's a dear."

"Tibbet, you look a fright. Don't let my company come in and find you here."

"Tibbet, can't you wear anything down to breakfast but that? It's horrible to have to come down after a night's dancing and see you all gray like that."

Scarecrow. Sometimes Second Cousin, who was perpetually good-natured and perpetually harassed and delighted by his six beautiful girls growing up in a riot of color and hilarity around him, would squint good-naturedly at Miss Tibbet.

"Good old girl, no wonder you look all drawn through a keyhole, with my six wild jungle cats for a household."

All drawn through a keyhole. Another way of saying scarecrow.

The years passed, in some ways fleet, in many ways leaden. Days that were too packed with the joyousness of youth to be ever quite bereft of a certain amount of joy for sapless middle age. And yet days that, just because of the superabundance of joy about her, seemed to isolate Miss Tibbet with a certain terribleness.

There were graver responsibilities than Miss Tibbet had ever reckoned with when she gave up the more or less impersonal position as teacher in a girls' school, to take over the intricate problems of six riotous young lives.

These girls, by virtue of a startling allotment of beauty, were destined for perilous ways. When Lucille was eighteen, she barely side-stepped a catastrophic love affair when a man who misrepresented himself to her as a United States naval officer. The strain of those weeks of opposing that first infatuation, of following her woman's intuition and finding out the facts, seemed to Miss Tibbet, in retrospect, more strenuous than she could ever endure again.

And yet, there followed years of one perilous averting of this tragedy and that mis-step, and one or another serious calamity on the part of one or another of these six young, careless children, that kept Miss Tibbet under a strain and pressure that tightened her tight lips and shriveled her shriveled skin.

In a grim way, Miss Tibbet occasionally could eke out a sense of humor about it all. In fact, she had put it into words, as she said one night at the dinner table when all of her six young charges and their father were present:

"It's a good thing you six girls have me about. I'm like a scarecrow in a cornfield of yellow corn silk. I keep the crows out."

"You're a darling old scarecrow," said Lucille, the eldest, who thanks to Miss Tibbet's machinations was safely and smugly and successfully engaged to a safe and successful young man.

The same might be said of Miss Tibbet's machinations for the next five years. Within that period, perils to the contrary notwithstanding, Miss Tibbet had successfully married off her six brilliant and difficult young charges. There had been bad and dangerous moments. Flights of fancy. Infatuations that threatened to waylay her plans. But, in the end, Miss Tibbet won.

One day, the last old shoe and the last cup of rice had been hurled after the last of her yellow-haired beauties. It was with a sigh of pain and a sigh of relief and a sigh of achievement that Miss Tibbet stood beside Second Cousin and watched a limousine taking away the last of her happy charges.

"Well," she said half humorously and turned to Second Cousin, "Old Scarecrow hasn't done such a bad job after all."

Second Cousin looked at her almost as if seeing her for the first time.

"You know, Miss Tibbet," he said, "if you don't mind my saying so, I think you're a beautiful scarecrow."

Old Scarecrow—good old Scarecrow that scared the crows away from the field of yellow corn silk.

A field of six yellow-haired beauties were happily married and off her hands, old Scarecrow Tibbet.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE COUNTRY ROAD

The country road climbs up the hills
  And rambles down the vales,
To left you hear the whip-poor-wills,
  To right the night-in-gales.
The country road is cool with shade
  And calm with rural joys,
Unsullied by the shouts of trade,
  Untouched by city noise.

At least that's how it used to be,
  This sweet and peaceful land,
But now beneath the maple tree
  They've built a hotdog stand.
A filling station lifts its head
  Above the verdant grass,
And where the spreading chestnuts spread
  The air is full of gas.

The roadside of another day
  Is now another kind,
For picknickers have passed this way
  And left a mess behind.
The roadside that was strewn with flowers
  Is strewn with empty cans.
Though Nature made the lovely bowers,
  The other marks are man's.

A Sunday paper blows around,
  Some cake is drawing flies.
It looks more like a battleground,
  Where Mother Nature dies.
And, if I sought some tidy spot
  To build me an abode,
I'd seek it up an alley, not
  Upon a country road.

TRICOLOR CHAMPIONS IF THEY WIN TO-DAY

QUEEN'S READY FOR MONTREAL

Expect Heavy Barrage From McGill Squad on Goal Posts.

DEPEND ON CARTER.

KINGSTON, Nov. 3.—On the eve of the most momentous game of the Intercollegiate Union season, Queen's are perhaps just a little uncertain regarding the outcome of to-day's battle with McGill, for, while word comes from the Kingston General Hospital, where Howard Carter, their star halfback and kicker has been since Thursday, that he will be in the game today, there is concern as to how he will be able to go. Local fans point to the case of "Ken" Tremain of the McGill squad, who, though seemingly in fine condition, was kept out of a lot of the McGill play and the result was disastrous to the Reds.

Dr. A. J. Austin, who is attending Carter, found no torn ligament, as was at first expected, but the knee was badly bruised, and there seems no question but that Carter will not be his old self in to-day's game.

Yesterday there was only a signal practice held, and the indication was given that if Carter is unable to make the grade against McGill, the Tricolor will fall back on "Red" Gilmore for the punting duties. Gilmore is one of the best kickers in the game, but lacks experience. Fresh from the Oakwood Collegiate, Toronto, Gilmore has not had much chance to shine, but he has shown that while he lacks the finish and the dash of either Carter or Munro, he gets just as much distance to his kicks.

A little stir was caused in college circles when it was rumored that a band of McGill students were going to try to storm the stadium last night and paint the goal posts red and white. Little stock was put in the report, though the Tricolor students were arranging to patrol the grounds.

If Carter is playing to-day there is not likely to be much change in the line-up, except that Don Abbott may start at inside wing in place of Ed Handford, injured at Montreal and not yet fully recovered. Abbott has been showing great form in practice and will probably pair off with Bob Basserman at inside. Apart from this the team will be the same as started at Montreal and Toronto.

THREE ELEVENS INVADE BIG TEN

Princeton Vs. Ohio, Alabama Vs. Wisconsin, Pen. Vs. Chicago Are Big Tilts.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The largest general invasion by intersection elevens into Big Ten football territory ranks is on to-day with the defeated Princton Tiger invading Ohio State? Alabama going into Wisconsin and Pennsylvania's big machine heading for Chicago.

Not in the history of Big Ten football have so many important intersectional combats been scheduled for one day, on Big Ten gridirons as Saturday and each contest promises to be a lively battle, although Chicago's crippled team seems to be in for another defeat.

Two Big Ten teams also were off to foreign wars, Minnesota entraining for Northwestern and Coach Bob Zuppke's Illini invading Michigan. Other Conference elevens, Purdue and Iowa, awaited unimportant non-Conference invasions, while Indiana kept plugging along for the Minnesota game, November 10.

Illini on Way

The Illini departed for Michigan last night after a big ovation by 3,000 fans and amidst blasts from the first regimental band. Zuppke took thirty-five players along and they were in good physical shape, except Kes Deimling, end, who seems lost for the game.

Minnesota's two prominent cripples, Bronko Nagurski, fullback, and Duke Johnson, tackle, were taken along but are not expected to play against Northwestern. More than 3,000 fans plan to follow the Gophers to-day.

Every Ohio State player appeared in great form as they went their last hard workout for the Princeton game. The return of Hardy Kruskamp, de luxe, has aided the Buckeye defense.

FEW CHANGES IN LIST OF PILOTS

Tommy Gormon Back With the Americans—Hart For Canadiens.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—With two exceptions, the list of team managers in the National Hockey League will be the same as last season.

The New York Americans this season will be guided by Tom Gorman, who is well known to hockey fans through his connection with the New York team since its inception and through his position as team manager with Ottawa prior to that time. Shorty Green, a former player, managed the team last year. At Chicago, Herb Gardiner, defence man with Canadiens last season, will guide the destinies of the team managed last year by Barney Stanley and later by Hughie Lehman.

Following is the list of the team managers for the 1928-29 season:

Canadian section: Canadiens, Cecil Hart; Montreal Eddie Gerrard; Ottawa, Dave Gill; Toronto, Connie Smythe; New York Americans, Tom Gorman.

American section: Boston, Art Ross; New York Rangers, Lester Patrick; Detroit, Jack Adams; Pittsburg, Odie Cleghorn; Chicago, Herb. Gardiner.

STARS IN BOXING FIRMAMENT

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

No ducks yet, Mac, and so far as I can see all my friends is either unlucky or rotten shots, or they ain't nearly as careful about the truth as they oughta be. They can take their choice. As for me, I'm fed up on them guys, and so yesterday when a bird what is going deer hunting sez, "I'll see you get a nice roast vension," I just give him a dirty look and walked away. I been kidding my palate with that kinda dope for years what with fish I was going to be given and ducks what was coming my way, and I've had enough If the vension comes along the shock to me will be worse than what the deer's family will feel when old man deer gets his.

Well, Mac, the hockey bug is beginning to buzz in this vicinity, and it is now definite we'll have jr. and int. teams in the big serious. The boys is going to begin training, and oughta be in good shape when they get a chance on the ice, which, of course, depends upon old Jack Frost. The prospects for both teams looks good at the present writing, and while I for 1 ain't going to claim no championships in either serious, we oughta have a coupla peppery teams that will give us plenty of action later on. We're outa the sr. serious, Mac—in fact, we was out last year before we started, although it took a few games to make that fact stand out—and while we'll all sorta sigh for the old days when we was sitting on the top of the world and making a big noise in the fastest section of Bill Hewitt's loop, it ain't hard to see that with the pros grabbing off every bird what even looks like a prospect, they ain't no chance of operating a sr. outfit. Even if you had the material to start with, it wouldn't last long, for as soon as a bird got a coupla good press notices some pro scout would gobble him up. And so we're better off in the intermediate battling and oughta get quite a kick outa it, too.

The Collegiate Institute, Mac, is getting to be quite a football foundry. Mister Carl Browne's sr. students has been going great guns, and so has Mister Red Legon's intermediates, both of which is sure of a place in the group playoffs, and they is a third team up in the Confederation Square education factory that is bringing along the youngsters. All the teams show signs of good coaching and carry round a smart repertoire of plays. The only thing that seems to be lacking is a bird what can boot a long punt in a pinch. I ain't seen in any of the games this yr. yet a real good punter, so they's a tip for some of the youngsters at the school to get out and everlastingly practice larruping that old ball. It's the surest way of making the school sr. team I know of. A fellow what has 40 or 50 yds. in his educated toe when it's needed is as much use to any football team as Mister Babe Ruth is to the Yanks or his brown derby is to Governor Al Smith. When you're hard pressed on the defence, Mac, or you need a point to save your scalps, give me every time the lad that can drive the yellow egg a block. His boot can do more in a few seconds than a half-dozen line plays or extensions. Lamp this boy Welch with the Hamilton Tigers and you'll see what I mean.

Well, Mac, that's enough on that point. The Collegiate kids has been playing some real neat football, and them and their coaches deserve credit all round.

They don't seem to be nothing more to get excited over this week, so we'll desist immediately.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

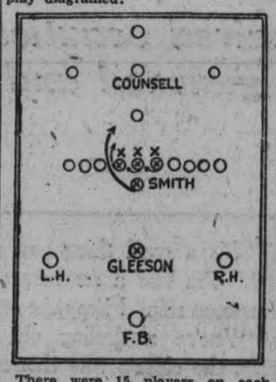
Two of the greatest football teams that ever faced each other on a Canadian gridiron lined up on the old Rosedale grounds, Toronto, November 21, 1896. Ottawa College versus University of Toronto. Eddie Gleeson, now a successful lawyer in Ottawa and the greatest backfield player of all time, was opposed by Jack Counsell, Varsity's famous punter.

The Ottawa collegians worked their corkscrew scrimmage perfectly on the slushy field and with Gleeson's marvellous punting and generalship won a remarkably played game 12 points to 8, and the Canadian championship.

"Biddy" Barr, Varsity captain, started a dribble which ended in a touchdown when Elliott fell on the ball behind the Ottawa goal line. Ottawa College scored eleven points before the first half ended. In the second half Varsity got another touchdown, College only a rouge. Bishop M. F. Fallon, who coached the Ottawa College team, said "his team had never met fairer or more generous treatment than we have had from the University of Toronto." Not a player from either side was penalized.

In these good old swashbuckling days the team in possession of the ball kept is as long as it was good rugby to do so. It was good rugby that day to keep the ball from Counsell. Here is how "King" Clancy's revolving scrimmage worked. The scrimmage was composed of a centre or snap and a left and right scrimmager. The ball had to be put on the ground and "heeled" out. Smith the college quarter-back, would hand Clancy the ball. The "Kipp" would "heel" it back to Smith, and then Boucher, Clancy and McCredie would let Smith head their revolving wedge. Varsity could not stop the mass play. Here is the play diagramed.



There were 15 players on each side. Punting was the feature of the game then as now. The teams were:—

Varsity		Ottawa College
Morrison	full back ...	Belanger
Boyd	half-back	Shea
Counsell	half-back	Gleeson
Kingstone ..	half-back	Murphy
Hobbs	quarter	Smith
Malloch	scrim	Boucher
Perry	scrim	Clancy
Dodds	scrim	McCreddie
Bradley	insides	Foley
McKenzie ...	insides	Greene
Elliott	middles	Tobin
Caldwell	middles	Prudhomme
Barr	flying wing	James
Campbell	outsides	Quilty
McDougall ..	outsides	Lafluer

Referee, A. W. Ballantyne. Umpire, Gordon MacDougall. Goal judges, H. Southam, P. D. Ross.

Monday we will see how Ottawa College beat Brockville 11 to 9 for its sixth consecutive Q.R.F.U. title.

TEX WILL MAKE JACK FIGHT IF IT HAS TO BE IN MOVIES

One way or another, George Tex Rickard is determined to make Jack Dempsey fight. He bobbed up with another proposal yesterday.

This time he wants Jack to do it before a movie camera. It seems that Tex has at least a fatherly, and possible a financial, interest in Gene Buck's show, "Ringside." There were lots of shows that were worse than "Ringside," but the names do not happen to suggest themselves at the moment.

So Tex now proposes that Dempsey immortalize the play by doing it in celluloid. Dempsey is listening atentively, 'twas said yesterday. He will probably accept.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY GAINING IN POPULARITY WITH PUBLIC

Col. Hammond, of Rangers, Predicts Big Future For Game.

"BIG MONEY" CLASS.

Outstanding Players Are Demanding Bigger Salaries—Will Broadcast Games.

(By W. J. Nell, Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Professional hockey in the United States, once a step-child of sports at the mercy of the elements, is shooting for "big money" these days, confident that within a year or two the puck-chasing industry will stand alone at the head of indoor pastimes hereabouts.

But like any sport jumping into popularity almost over night, hockey here is feeling its growing pains The game has come so fast that rinks in the National League points in the United States already are too small for the crowds that are now flocking to its standard.

Outstanding players and material are scarce and costly. Fans still must be educated to the intricacies and niceties of the pastime.

Broadcast Games.

Colonel John B. Hammond, tall, stately president of the world champion New York Rangers, who brought hockey into New York three years ago started its mushroom growth in the United States, called "time" long enough on a radio deal yesterday to talk about it.

He is planning to pay a radio chain $2,300 for a half hour on the air each night that the Rangers play in New York. That will cost the Rangers $30,000—but that's part of the "campaign of education."

"Mechanical ingenuity," he said, "has made the tremendous growth of hockey possible. It has three of the greatest possible advantages —it is played at night. It is an outdoor game played indoors independently of the weather and dovetails perfectly with boxing.

"Once it took 120 men to clear the Madison Square Garden rink of ice after a game. Now the apparatus has been perfected to such an extent that water is sprayed on the cement floor, freezing as it falls, until the coating is but 5-8 of an inch thick. It is the toughest ice in the world.

"When it comes time to remove it, hot water flows through the pipes that a few hours earlier carried the freezing mixture. In a few minutes the ice is reduced to a rubber-like consistency. Then it is cut, rolled up like strips of carpet, dropped into a tank, and the steam turned on. In ten minutes it's all over and done by half a dozen men.

"I sat in once on a hockey game indoors in Canada when the temperature of the building was four degrees below zero. Now the rinks are warm and comfortable and the ice rarely gets soft. That's one of the great reasons for its growth."

Develop Stars.

Hockey's great need, as Col. Hammond sees it, is to develop stars from college and amateur teams in the United States to strengthen the material heretofore recruited entirely from Canada. Myles Lane, of Dartmouth, is the first Ranger recruit and Hammond hopes to land Win Palmer, crack Yale forward, when his college days are over.

Hockey, the Colonel says, is sweeping the country, new leagues are forming on the Pacific coast, the mid-western states, and even in the south with a focal point at Dallas, Tex. So great has been the increase in interest in New York that Hammond values the franchise he paid $27,500 for in the National League at $250,000 to-day—and that is not an offer to sell.

Going into the statistics of the growth of the game, Col. Hammond produced a chart that showed hockey played to 300,000 more customers last year in the league circuit than it did the year before even though attendance fell off in Pittsburgh and Chicago due to poor facilities. The Ranger attendance averaged 8,000 a game, a jump of 2,000 over the previous year. In two more season, he predicts the world champion team will play to 50,000 indoors.

There are some drawbacks, however. "Three years ago," said the Colonel, "I could buy a good hockey player for $5,000. Now they cost $25,000 and an offer of $50,000 for Howie Morenz, of the Canadiens, was refused. The average salary then was $3,000. Minor leaguers get that now and the stars average twice as much for four months work. Hockey players are intelligent. They know the value of their services."

HALLOWE'EN DANCE IN HAVELOCK HALL

Women's Institute Hold a Most Jolly Masquerade Party.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 3.— Under the auspices of the Havelock Women's Institute, a very jolly Hallowe'en dance was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening. Mesdames G. Rigby, J. McCutcheon, D. McAdam, C Morrison and C. Hubbel attired as witches, received and welcomed the guests. The judges, Mrs. J. Rothwell, of Norwood, Mrs. H. Cook, Mr. Coates and Reeve F. Breckenridge, of Belmont, found the judging difficult because of a large variety of splendid costumes. The prize for the original costume was awarded to Miss Josephine Anderson, of Round Lake, as an Indian amiden. Prizes for fancy costumes were awarded to Miss E. Cassari, of Campbellford, for a fancy clown costume and to W. Aunger, of Blairton, as an Indian Rajah. Prizes for comic costumes went to Mrs. J. Little as a witch and J. Faulkner as Charlie Chaplin. The soft drink booth was in charge of Mrs. J. Bedford attired as Aunt Jemima. During the evening Ralph Cook, of Belmont, and David Vansickle, of Havelock, gave a splendid demonstration of step dancing. The hall was prettily decorated with the Institute colors, orange and black. These were also in keeping with the season. Music was supplied by a five-piece orchestra of local musicians, namely: Violin, W. Mcaughlin and H. McQuigge; piano, Mrs. M. Rylott, assisted by Miss Kathleen Litt, of Marmora; mandolin, Douglas McCall; traps, Fred Platt. Charles Jones, of Marmora, was a capable floor manager. Guests were present from Marmora, Hastings, Norwood, Campbellford, eterborough and Warsaw.

This is the first entertainment to be held under the auspices of the Women's Institute here, and the committees who worked hard to make the dance the success it proved, are to be congratulated. The proceeds amounted to about $125.

STRATFORD JOIN MAJOR SERIES

Group Would Be Made Up of Preston, Galt, Stratford and Guelph.

PROMISING MATERIAL.

STRATFORD, Nov. 3.—A move to revive the old senior O.H.A. grouping of Kitchener, Preston, Galt and Stratford with Guelph as an added starter, was made at the annual general hockey meeting here last night.

The death of senior clubs in the western section of the province is the main reason for this proposal and now that Stratford is out of professional hockey for this winter at least, the local club is heartily in line with the idea and will communicate with the other clubs in an effort to have them play senior instead of intermediate. A junior team will be entered as usual, and the executive will be chosen by Herb Bruder, of the intermediaes or seniors as the case may be and R. J. Easson, manager of the juniors.

Roy Brothers, manager of the Nationals, who won the championship of the Canadian Professional Hockey League last winter and who has been associated with hockey in Stratford for years, was at the meeting and offered help a-plenty, promising to outfit one of the O.H.A. teams and provide all transportation during the winter campaign.

The S.A.A., which looks after hockey in Stratford, received this offer with wide open arms, plenty of financial assistance being needed now that bigger and better groupings is to be asked for.

In either senior or intermediate a group made up of Stratford, Kitchener, Preston, Galt and Guelph clubs or in intermediate the same group with Tavistock added or an alternative grouping of Woodstock, Ingersoll, London and Stratford. The juniors are asking for Kitchener, Stratford, Galt, Guelph and Preston groupings.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"The Butterfly Kiddies," the Cleverest, Snappiest Vaudeville Act, Seen In Peterborough in Years, Returns to the Capitol in New Songs and Dances Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree in "A Certain Young Man" on the Screen.

Manager Stewart of the Capitol has been successful in getting a return engagement of "The Butterfly Kiddies," the five clever little girls headed by little Baby Rita which delighted Capitol patrons a few weeks ago. This clever company returns to the Capitol on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week with daily matinees. Every one of these five clever little girls whose ages range from six to thirteen years are real artists. It is a strictly high class offering seldom seen in the smaller cities, and Mr. Stewart is to be congratulated in bringing this clever company to Peterborough. The Butterfly Kiddies open on the Big Time Pantages Vaudeville Circuit at Pantages Theatre in Toronto on Saturday of next week, this in itself is positive proof of the merit of the act.

Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree in "A Certain Young Man" on the screen.

Ramon Novarro—as a philandering young English lord with an infatuation complex that gets him into many a peck of trouble—is the central figure of the latest whimsical romance of the screen, in which the star makes his bow in an entirely new guise, in "A Certain Young Man," the feature screen attraction.

Raon is introduced with moustache and monocle, in the very height of fashion in London, but after he meets THE girl he discards both and tries to live down his past—with results that land him in many trials and tribulations. In his escape from these a real love story comes in, as charmingly romantic as any he has ever appeared in, and all done in an ultra-modern vein. The story would do credit to a Barrie—it more than does credit to Novarro.

It starts with the adventures of a young boulevardier whose flirtations are the talk of staid old London, and when he goes to Biarritz and other Southern France playgrounds to escape too many pretty women the real romance develops. Marceline Day is the heroine, and Carmel Myers and Renee Adoree play the rival charmers. Huntley Gordon, Bert Roach and others of note are in the cast, and Hobart Henley, past master of sophistication, and famous for "The Austion Block" and other players, directed it.

Novarro in a modern dress suit proves even more romantic than in a uniform, and probably will make modern flappers' hearts throb at an even livelier rate than in his costume pictures.

The elaborate reproductions of London town houses, British castles, the gorgeous pavilion at Biarritz, and other colorful backgrounds are elaborately constructed for the picture, one of the most ambitious Novarro vehicles of the present season.

AT THE REGENT.

COLLEEN MOORE TURNS SAILOR IN "OH KAY!" HER NEW COMEDY.

When Colleen Moore returned from location, where ocean scenes were filmed for her new First National picture, "Oh Kay!" coming to the Regent Theatre on Monday, she was pronounced by her fellow players to be a first-class able seaman.

A decidedly nautical atmosphere was supplied by the scenarist for several episodes of this humorous screen story, in which the vivacious Colleen made numerous scenes aboard an old windjammer, rowed a skiff, and even acted as skipper and crew of a fast little sloop, a star-boat, racing type, captured the enthusiastic interest of Colleen, who went sailing in the sporty little craft whenever she was most needed before the cameras. She confessed that she found handling the main-sheet, jib and tiller all at one time was a job better suited to a person with four arms, but she was fascinated by the sport. She gives promise of becoming an expert sailor, thanks to the tutelage of her producer, John McCormick, a former naval officer.

As soon as camera work was completed on location near Santa Barbara, Miss Moore and the cast and production staff filming "Oh Kay!" went aboard a sailing vessel and cruised in the waters around Catalina Island for other scenes, which include the episode in which Colleen displays her prowess in a little sailboat. Mervyn LeRoy directed "Oh Kay!" from the scenario prepared by Carey Wilson. The supporting cast is composed of Lawrence Gray, Alan Hale, Ford Sterling, Claude Gillingwater, Julanne Johnston, Edgar Norton, and others.

Old-time Hockey Star Is Dead At Woodstock

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 3.—One of the most enthusiastic followers of amateur sport in Woodstock passed away yesterday afternoon in the person of Dr. Sammy McLay. Years ago when Woodstock, Paris, Brantford and Ingersoll formed the old Western Ontario Hockey Association, and later on when this city moved into the O.H.A., "Sam" McLay was a member of the then famous "Thin Red Line." He was also prominent in soccer, and while attending McMaster years ago was well known in college sports.

After his playing days were over "Sam" kept right on as an ardent supporter of amateur sport.

Dr. McLay had many friends in the sporting world all over Ontario who will be sorry to hear of his passing.

HUMBERSIDE C.I. IN TWO PLAY-OFFS

Seniors and Juniors Defeat Harbord in Final Group Games.

TORONTO, Nov. 3. —Humberside gave Harbord a touch of high life in Collegiate football at Willowvale Park yesterday, the Creighton coached teams scoring a double victory and crashing into the High School playoffs. The seniors won 22 to 0 and the juniors 13 to 0, and in both games success was achieved by a brilliant football display. Humberside will play North Toronto in the senior semi-finals, while in the junior series the West Toronto students meet Malvern.

Harbord gave Humberside quite a battle in the first half of the junior affair, but in the third period, the red, white and grey clad lads hit their stride and scored two singles and a touch to lead going into the last period 7 to 0. They added six points in the final fifteen minutes.

C.N.R. Earnings

MONTREAL, Que., November 3 (Canadian Press). — The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the period ending October 31, 1928, were $9,989,365, as compared with $8,509,087 for the corresponding period of 1927, an increase of $1,480,278 or seventeen per cent.

THIRD PETERBOROUGH "VIMY" TROUP

There was a better turnout at the Third's meeting last Friday night, although there is much room for improvement yet. We would like to see a full attendance of Scouts for next meeting. The Foxes were short two members, the Hawks had two absent with leave, the Wolves were short one and the Chickadees had a full turnout. The Chickadees have had a perfect attendance for the last eleven consecutive meetings. This is a mark for any Patrol to aim at.

* * *

Two promotions were announced at Flag Break. P.L. Archie Inch has been appointed Assistant Scoutmaster and Arthur Taylor, who has been the Second in the Fox Patrol, has been promoted to Patrol Leader. The appointment of P.L. Taylor will take place next Friday night.

* * *

A new knot game was announced next. The Scouts were assembled in a semi-circle, each with a piece of rope, and stood about 8 feet away from a Staff projecting from a post. A knot was called for an as soon as he had tied his knot, each Scout tried to throw the loop thus formed over the end of the staff. The first loop over the staff was the winner. Bob Ross, who is knot tieing champion of the Troop, won most of the points in this for the Hawks.

* * *

Then followed a short quizz on Tenderfoot and Second Class work, as a review before settling down to serious business for the year. Several Scouts are working on the balance of their Second Class Tests so that before Christmas we hope to add three or four more to the number of Second Class Scouts in the Troop. The tests set for the Third are stiff ones which call for much advanced work on the Scouts part, but when they are finally passed, every boy is a real Second Class Scout.

* * *

In the String Eating Contest which followed, Scouts Gray and Westbye won their respective heats after chewing up about 8 feet of string ahead of their competitors.

* * *

A sense Training game followed in which a watch was hidden in the room and the Scouts had to locate it by sound only. This proved very difficult and only three or four Scouts located it each time.

* * *

The Council Fire was arranged and a short program put on. After a song or two, a couple of announcements were made to the effect that as part of the Christmas Good Turn being put on by the Scouts of Peterborough, the Scouts of the Third Troop are asked to bring in one toy each week to headquarters as their extra contribution to this work. In this way about 100 extra toys will be secured and repaired by the Troop to be distributed at Christmas. The Scouts fell in enthusiastically with this suggestion and we feel sure that each Friday night will find a stack of repaired toys at headquarters. It doesn't matter how large or how small the toys are, we want every Scout to bring in his toy each week.

* * *

Scouts of Peterborough will be interested to know that A.S.M. Archie Inch and P.L. Jack Gray took their First Class Hike last week-end. They left the city on Saturday afternoon and proceeded to their objective, returning home Sunday evening. It was a real test to hike fourteen miles and camp out over night in this weather. They experienced all kinds of weather—rain, snow, sunshine and cold. The instructions received, of course, were secret and were not known to the two Leaders themselves until after they had started on Saturday, so that we cannot disclose where they went. P.L. Billie Inch and Second Bob. Ross expect to try the hike together two weeks from last Saturday, weather permitting.

THIS WEEK IN SPORTS

Hockey is again coming into its own special limelight across the Dominion. Only 12 days remain before the opening of the major hockey circuits, which means the official opening of the season.

Numerous trades and changes in the line-ups are bound to make things interesting. Con Smythe this year has recruits from the western provinces which have created a great deal of interest in Toronto, Winnipeg and the rest of the west.

Rugby is making its final kick before it passes out of the picture. In the east last year's Dominion champions, Balmy Beach, has entirely outclassed its division and up to the time of going to press had chased the Bengals back to Tiger Town and downed the Airmen from Camp Borden without very much trouble. However, the victorious Beaches may run into a heap of trouble when they play the sudden death game on Thanksgiving Day for the play-offs. There is no doubt that Balmy Beach will enter the final favorites, but strange things have happened in play-offs before.

In the west to-day the Manitoba champions will meet the victor of last week's struggle between Alberta and Saskatchewan, and on Nov. 10 and 12 the winner of to-day's battle will meet British Columbia for the western championship.

Calgary pulled a new one recently. The city was granted permission by the federal government to erect a propert athletic field. Calgary claims it has been twenty years trying to secure this permission. This of course has hindered their progress in athletics and was one of the reasons why they were not represented at Hamilton at the Olympic trials. So now everyone expects to see great strides made in track athletics in Calgary in the future.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

HALLOWE'EN WAS QUIET

Millbrook Young People Observe Evening in Most Fitting Manner.

HOLD PARTIES.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—All Hallow's Eve passed off about as usual in the community. A number of boys and girls, disguished with false faces and costumes of varying kinds, called at several of the homes during the early part of the evening, departing peacefully, and with suppressed giggles, when treated to candy and apples, which were apparently their chief demand.

As usual, some residents found the wooden walks connecting pavement and roadway in front of their homes torn up, turned over, and occasionally carried off to some other part of the street. The coal wagon belonging to W. C. Russell and Sons was dragged down to the lower creek on Main street, and had to be hauled back to its proper place by the truck on Thursday morning; but on the whole no particular damage was done.

Hold Parties

The local public and continuation schools, in their respective rooms, and in common with practically every other school in the vicinity, held Hallowe'en "parties," with appropriate programs and frolics, during the afternoon. A treat of candy, cake and apples formed a climax to the happy holiday, the afternoon off from lessons being really obligatory, the pupils having apparently been "seized" with the spirit of Hallowe'en, and studying being out of the question.

Trent River

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 3.—(Examiner Correspondence).— Hallowe'en passed off without any serious damage being done in the village. The usual parade with the little folk was the chief event, making their calls at the various homes where they were given the usual gifts of candy and other good things.

"CONFEDERATION" TRAIN TO EDMONTON ENSURES PLEASANT, COMFORTABLE JOURNEY

This innovation has eliminated most of the delays experienced by travellers crossing the Prairies in the winter time as it provides a fast, through, comfortable service to Edmonton, via Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina and Saskatoon. By this route good connections are made to all important points by lines radiating from these cities.

The splendid equipment and courteous service—always a feature of the "Confederation"—ensure a pleasant journey without the discomforts of Winter travel.

Full information and reservations from any Canadian National Railways' Agent.

Madoc

MADOC, Nov. 3.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The senior pupils of Madoc High School gave a very successful party and masquerade to all the pupils of the school and the teachers on Wednesday evening. The Assembly Hall was decorated with pumpkins, candles and gay ribbons and most of the students were in fancy dress. During the first part of the evening, games were enjoyed by all present after which refreshments were served. Dancing was then indulged in, with Mrs. A. Kincaid at the piano.

Wheat Prices Recede With Canadian Reports

CHICAGO Nov. 3.— (Canadian Press)—Wheat Prices receded to-day from the initial gains, which were associated with the reports that the Canadian Growers' Pool was buying distant Liverpool future deliveries. Bears made much of the announcements that American official trade agents of Russia denied wheat purchasing for Russia. Opening ½ to ⅞ up, wheat later declined to below yesterday's finish. Corn also turned easier, starting shade to ½ higher and afterwards sagging. Oats held steady.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

It is reported in Ottawa that the extension of the Flin Flon railway into the Sherritt Gordon has been approved and that an order calling for tenders for construction may be given any day. It was previously announced that this line would not be sent into Sherritt unless a substantial guarantee of tonnage was given, as was the case with the Flin Flon.

It is reported that two diamond drills as that company is known to the recently made gold-copper discovery in Duguis Township. These are said to be Bunker Hill Extension dirils as that company is known to be examining the discovery.

A wire from Red Lake states that the ore sohot on the Howey has been proven now for a distance of 600 feet.

Capital Rouyn is active on the market these days and this activity may be attributed to a report stating that the company have uncovered a 17-foot vein on the central portion of the Rouyn property. The find is said to carry considerable free gold in a fine state.

Gossip on the street has been to the effect that Fraser shares have been strong because those interested in the new issue being made cannot afford to have the shares lagging. It is pointed out, however, that Fraser Companies is in a different line of business than the newsprint companies and should not be confused with them market wise. Fraser is doing exceedingly well, according to Montreal advices and increasing its earning power.

Price Brothers and Company intend erecting a $600,000 fifteen story structure to house all their employes in this city, and tentative plans have already been submitted for the building which will be erected on Ste. Anne street adjoining the Clarendon Hotel and facing the city hall.

The new building is expected to be ready for occupancy in 1930. Ross and Macdonald of Montreal, are the architects.

It will house the head office staff of Price Brothers and Company, the Donnaconda Pulp and Paper Company and the Quebec Investment, the latter two being subsidiaries of Price Brothers.

The number of directors of Howard Smith Paper Mills, Limited will be increased from twelve to fourteen. Shareholders will be asked to approve this increase at a special meeting, convened for this purpose, to be held in Montreal on November 5.

Jones Bros. of Canada, Limited, has, according to information given The Financial Times, increased production this year about 50 p.c. The company, which took over the Walker, Bin and Store Fixture plant at Kitchener, has been able to acquire the services of a large number of experienced craftsmen in the woodwork industry which has enabled it to meet the increasing demand for its products to advantage.

Oils Lead Activity On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (Canadian Press).—Week-end trading was slow with prices steady on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Oils continued to show activity. British American Oil led this field in sales and was up ⅝ at 51. Hiram Walkers dropped ¼ to 80½ following its change from the Curb to the Toronto market. Imperial Oil advanced 3½ to 95, with Service Station going up ½ at 54½, while International Petroleum at 49¾ and Super Petroleum Preferred at 92½ were down ¼ and ½ respectively.

Profit Taking Sales Turn Prices Irregular

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (Canadian Press).—Heavy pre-election profit-taking sales turned the course of stock prices irregular to-day after opening intervals of strength. Trading was relatively quiet, indicating the temporary withdrawal of many large traders from the market. Several soft spots cropped out throughout the list, but there was no evidence of any concerted "bear" selling.

Leading commission houses emphasized caution in view of the record-breaking loan totals. While some observers attributed the large gains in loans to the unusually large volume of new financing in recent weeks, others saw evidence of widespread distribution of stocks.

Week-end trade reviews generally were favorable. Steel output continues at high rate, and seasonal recession in automobile production and sales has been less marked than usual. The demand for copper continues unusually heavy and further improvement is noted in the oil trade.

to Peterborough, will be at the EMPRESS HOTEL, Friday, all day and evening, NOV. 9TH, and will remain Saturday until noon only, NOV. 10TH, who will fully demonstrate to men, women and children his method of treating rupture in Nature's way. Why put off such an important matter when you can be free from truss wearing in from four to six months. It would pay you to leave your work for one day to learn how you can overcome the danger of strangulation or cost of operation. He will also have in his possession the latest and most comfortable rupture appliance that can be obtained in America. No leg straps to chafe or gaul, allowing free circulation to all parts of the body. Don't forget the dates, Nov. 9th and 10th. Ask for Mr. Thompson's special apartments. 3d-3,7-8.

Mr. Peck also made the presentation of a wrist watch, donated to V. J. Tully, to little Miss Orrie Herron, who secured the most new members for the Seckatary Hawkins Club during the Fair week.

Old-Fashioned Concert

A re-presentation of the Old-Fashioned Playlet which delighted audiences during the Kiwanis Fair week, was the concluding number on the program, and received plenty of enthusiastic applause. Every member was in costume and an entertaining episode in the life of old-time people was presented with plenty of jollity and mirth. Those taking part were: A. Jobe (Grandfather); Mrs. C. Telford (Grandmother); R. H. McConkey (Father), Mrs. R. H. McConkey (Mother); Marion McConkey, Doreen McConkey and Beatrice McConkey (Daughters); Orval Waiman (Son) and a surprise party composed of C. Telford, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Blade, Bert Jones, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Robson, Lorne McDonald, O. McConkey, Jean Blade, Rollie Windover and C. McImoyle. Walter Fitzgerald acted as Master of Ceremonies. Little Orval Wainman contributed a harmonica solo and step dance to the Old-Fashioned Playlet.

Presentation of prizes in the harmonica contest, donated by the Kohner Company of Toronto, were as follows:

Harmonica (Open).—1, Ward Rosebush; 2, James Dummett; 3, Edgar Chiel.

Harmonica (12 to 16 years).—1, Stewart Clark; 2, Alfred Mills; 3, Thomas Martin.

Harmonica (12 years and under).—1, Jack Skitch; 2, Orval Wainman; 3, Keith Jarvis.

Step Dancing.—1, Daniel O'Brien; 2, Walter Fitzgerald; 3, William McIntyre.

Assisting the Harmonica Band last night were Miss Laura McFarlane, playing the piano; Frank Clarke, the banjo; and Harold Ball, the drum.

At the conclusion of the program hearty votes of thanks to all those taking part were voiced by Dr. J. J. Craig, who thanked especialy C. S. Thompson, bandmaster, and H. J. McCannan, who was in charge of the concert.

APPLES PLENTIFUL FARMERS' MARKET

Potatoes Quoted at 25 Cents a Peck, Butter 43c. and Eggs 60c.

The fish that lay with scales glistening under the raindrops appeared to be the only produce that really enjoyed the damp weather at the farmers' market this morning. The vegetables drooped uneasily under the moisture and the shaggy coat of a small collie pup roughened in the chilly dampness. He thrust a small, confiding nose into friendly hands and asked him mutely with brown eyes, for someone to take him along and give him a nice home, in exchange for two dollars.

Potatoes were priced at 25 cents a peck and other roots were quoted as usual. Brussels sprouts were 10 cents a quart.

Pears were $1 a peck. Apples were plentiful. Spies sold at 60 and 65 cents, and Wolf Rivers and Wealthys at 50 cents a peck.

Pork was priced at 18 and 20 cents, in front and hind quarters, and lamb was 25 and 27 cents a pound.

Honey was 10 and 13 cents a pound, in dark and light quality.

In the basket section, dairy produce was fairly plentiful. Eggs were quoted at 55 and 60 cents a dozen, butter at 43 cents a pound and chickens were selling all the way from 35 cents down to 23 cents a pound, with the latter as a late hour quotation. Ducks were 35 cents a pound, either alive or dead. A couple of lively black and green Rouen specimens were bought at that price.

of the juvenile members of the Harmonica Band, sang the fetching child song, "The Wasted Crust," the composition of Mrs. W. E. Groves, of Toronto, and an encore in "Old Mother Moon," and then obliged with a step dance, to the tune of "Turkey in the Straw," played by H. J. McCannan and Frank Clarke.

Stunt Work

C. S. Thompson, leader of the band, gave a demonstration of stunt work on the harmonica, playing with his ear, his nose, and through a tube which conducted the breath to the instrument, held in his fingers. This proved very entertaining.

John Anderson sang in his clear, ringing robust tenor voice the old Scotch favorite, "Scots Wha Hae," receiving much pleased applause.

In making the presentation of prizes, Mr. Peck alluded with interest to the attraction of the music played by the Harmonica Band and also to his pleasure in seeing Frank Clarke, "that old-time performer" in action, and to the varied accomplishments demonstrated by Joseph Wearing and Herb McCannan, members of the Harmonica Band.

Several of the prize-winners, Daniel O'Brien, Ward Rosebush, James Dummett, Stewart Clark, Jack Skitch and Planning a Better Future

The possibilities of the world to-day constitute a real challenge to ability. The world's work is being steadily pushed forward by men and women who possess the energy and ability to do things. The unfortunate ones are those who lack the zest for new things, progress, enjoyment and the capacity to accomplish anything worth while because of poor health or low vitality. They no doubt yearn to regain their bodily vigor and get back into the procession of progress.

A MOST EFFECTIVE WAY

to regain and maintain health is to keep your nervous system in proper tone. This can be accomplished by Chiropractic spinal adjustments. When spinal nerves are free of constriction and pressure you have the vigor and stamina to forge ahead. CHIROPRACTIC IS A SCIENTIFIC HEALTH METHOD AND HAS A LONG RECORD OF SUCCESS TO RECOMMEND IT.

ARE YOU GROUCHY AND IRRITABLE?

Ninety-nine people out of every hundred are suffering from faulty lubrication.

In all probability you yourself are a victim of this unnatural condition, yet you may not know it. Grouchiness is only one of the symptoms. There are many others, and the insidious part is that these early warnings are so often neglected or attributed to other causes.

"HEED THE WARNING, GIVE NATURE A CHANCE."

If allowed to continue, faulty lubrication causes serious trouble. First constipation, which soon becomes chronic, then as the system becomes poisoned, sick headaches, dullness of mind, mental irritability and depression, hardening of the arteries, Bright's disease, apoplexy and even paralysis are apt to follow in fairly rapid succession. When the mechanism of the body through which the poisons are destroyed and eliminated breaks down, it can no longer accomplish its purpose. But a properly and NATURALLY lubricated system will not break down, and now you can provide lubrication, NATURE'S WAY, and at the same time enjoy NATURE'S RICHEST GIFT, HEALTH.

"HOW?"

The method is easy. Phone 100, Campbellford, for an appointment. Do it now.

BOY IS SHOT HUNTING ON OREGON TRAIL

Two Criminal Cases at Cobourg

Docket Is Heavy One

Toronto Man Faces Charge of Manslaughter in Cobourg Court.

DAMAGE ACTION.

Campbellford Man Faces Serious Charge Under Criminal Code.

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 5 (Special to The Examiner).—Mr. Justice Raney, on the occasion of his first visit to Cobourg since his elevation to the bench, opened the Assizes today and the docket before him includes two criminal cases.

J. L. Corkhum of Toronto faces a charge of manslaughter as the result of a motor accident on the Provincial highway a few miles west of Port Hope. It is alleged that an auto he was driving crashed into a horse-drawn vehicle, resulting in the death of A. E. Symens. A Campbellford man is also to be tried, the charge against him being a serious one under the provisions of the criminal code relating to morals.

$15,000 Damage Action.

On the civil list the Toronto General Trust Corporation, administrator of the estate of Emily M. Garland, late of the village of Brighton, County of Northumberland, is the plaintiff in an action brought against the Canadian National Railway Company and the Northern Ontario Railway, for $15,000 damages. The construction of the C.N.R. line is through the property of Emily Merla Garland, and the plaintiff's claim that proper ditches were not constructed and maintained.

Somewhat similar, but for a lesser amount, namely, $5,000, is the suit brought by Robert and Reid Morton against the Corporation of Hope Township, asking damages for overflow of water and flooding of land. Plaintiffs ask also for an injunction restraining the defendants from stopping up a culvert or causing any diversion of water through the plaintiffs' land.

When the Sir Arthur Currie libel action was tried at the Assizes here last spring a civil action on the docket was Randall vs. Fellowes. This was put over to the present court. The plaintiff is Mrs. Eliza Randall of Clarke Township, who is suing on behalf of herself, children and an infant grandchild. Justine Fellowes, an engineer of the Provincial Department of Highways, is the defendant. The case arises from an accident in October, 1927, when Henry Randall, husband of Eliza Randall, sustained injuries which are alleged to have caused his death. The wagon, it is alleged, on which the deceased was riding, was struck by an auto. Negligence on the part of the defendant is claimed.

MINISTER HAS NOT RESIGNED

Although Excluded From Government South African Minister Fails To Resign.

CABINET CRISIS.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—Hon. W. B. Madeley, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, has not yet resigned from the Cabinet, although excluded from the government. (A Pretoria announcement of November 2 stated that he had resigned from the cabinet and that as a result a crisis had arisen).

Mr. Madeley states that the question at issue is not one of meeting the natives' demands, but one of recognizing and carrying out the principles of collective bargaining which was fundamental to the trade union and Labor party movement.

Hon. Tielman J. de V. Roos, Minister of Justice, who spoke at Johannesburg Saturday, declared emphatically that the Nationalists could not possibly have political "truck" with anybody sympathetic to the Industrial and Commercial Workers' Union, which was a native organization.

The Cape Town Argus, an Opposition newspaper, says: "The National Labor pact is dead, although a long time may elapse before the funeral ceremony takes place."

WAR VETERAN KILLS HIS WIFE, THEN HIMSELF

Also Wounds Woman Friend of Estranged Bride—Ordered Them To Pray.

MARRIED FIVE MONTHS.

Couple Had Often Been in the Courts and Were Not Living Together.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 5.—While his estranged wife and her chum knelt in prayer by the side of their bed, clad in their night clothing, Aurin Bugbee, veteran of the World War, opened fire on the two women killing Mrs. Bugbee and seriously wounding her woman companion, and then ended his own life.

The killing was the concluding act of five months of married life and five months of domestic unhappiness largely caused by the jealousy of the husband who was obliged to make frequent trips out of the city, and was always suspicious of his wife's behavior during his absence, according to the authorities.

Frequent Quarrels

There had been frequent quarrels and numerous appeals to the courts. The husband had caused the arrest of his wife, the wife the arrest of her husband. The courts had been petition by Mrs. Bugbee for a divorce and for a peace warrant.

Several weeks ago the couple separated and Mrs. Cora Heckman, also separated from her husband, came to Atlanta to live with her friend. Bugbee at once began to suspect that the newcomer was exerting a "hypnotic domination" over his wife, preventing him from effecting a reconciliation.

Early Saturday morning, he unlatched the screen of the window and entered the room. Going to the side of the bed, pistol in hand, he awakened the sleeping women and ordered them to get on their knees and pray.

"I am going to kill you both," he said.

"God help us, he's mad" cried Mrs. Bugbee as she began to pray, and then Bugbee opened fire.

Three Letters

He left three letters, including the following to his brother, addressed to 17 Battery Place, New York:

"Dear Lute:

"A few brief lines. Maybe you'll read in the papers about what I have done. Maybe you will not. So these few lines will tell you something.

"I've always loved you and hope you will forgive me for anything I've ever done that has caused you annoyance. The woman in this case, or women, caused me untold suffering, for my love for this second wife of mine was far greater than my first.

"I have advised Mr. Herman Meister to pay you out of my assets $150, and I hope to God he does so. I have never amounted to much, and have tried real hard.

"Please forgive me. Tell mother, Yolande, Yvonne and your wonderful mother-in-law I love them, also your wife and all my relatives. God bless you and keep you in prosperity and health."

RAILWAY LOSES OLD EMPLOYE

Robert Chambers Served Canadian National For Fifty-four Years.

DIED YESTERDAY.

The death of the late Robert Chambers, which occurred in this city on Sunday morning removed one of the Canadian National Railways oldest and most faithful employees, for he had been connected with that company, and its predecessors for more than fifty-four years.

The late Mr. Chambers was born in Kingston on July 29, 1856 and when a lad of 18 years, became a track man on the old Grand Trunk railway, Kingston district. From that time onward, the dates of his situations with the railroad show that in 1876, and for the next year he was a member of the Bridges and Building department of the same district. From 1877 up to, and including the year 1880 he was a trackman in various sections and his promotion to section foreman over the Keene and Hastings section took place soon after. In this capacity, he served his company for 28 years and from 1908 until last July 1, 1928 he was a signalman at the C.P.R. diamond for the Grand Trunk and later, the Canadian National Railway.

With eye undimmed, and faculties alert even to the last hour before his death, it was only his age that had brought about his retirement and to him had been extended an unusual courtesty by the railway—an unconditional pass over all lines of the C.N.R. given only to those who have served the company fifty years or more.

The late Mr. Chambers was of a quiet, almost retiring disposition, but he was, according to railway officials, was ever alert and attentive to duty under all circumstances.

MOTH PLANE BADLY DAMAGED

Airplane of Col. C. H. Ackerman Returned To Factory For Repairs.

HANGAR COLLAPSES.

The trim little D.-H. Moth airplane of Lt.-Colonel C. H. Ackerman of this city figured in a crash on Sunday morning, in which it was somewhat damaged, but the crash came, not as it circled or dived to the surface of Little Lake with its human cargo, but rather, as it reposed with folded wings in the storage hangar, erected for its accommodation near Mark street wharf.

In some way, the building collapsed, doing considerable damage to the plane, and last night between nine and ten o'clock motorists on Charlotte street or the Peterborough—Port Hope Highway were somewhat astonished to see a plane, mounted on a large motor truck, travelling westward. It was the Ackerman plane being taken to the Weston plant of the DeHavilland Company for repairs.

EDWARD COURTNEY DIES AT HOME HAD LIVED IN CITY FOR 59 YEARS

He Was Also Interested in Welfare of City, Epecially Ashburnham.

CABINET MAKER.

Born in Liverpool in 1844, He Came To Peterborough in 1870.

In the passing of Edward Courtney at his home, 533 Armour road, on Saturday, this city loses one of its most esteemed and honored citizens. Mr. Courtney has lived in Peterborough continuously for almost sixty years and during that time he lived a life without reproach and by his noble character and kindly ways he gained a hosts of friends who will long cherish his memory.

The work of Mr. Courtney's hands will long stand as his epitaph. He was a cabinet maker by trade and much of the finest work on the interior of the banks and public building throughout the city was done by him. His wormanship for artisty of design and painstaking care in every detail could not be equalled. He won wide renown for his reproduction in inlaid wood of Shakespeare's home at Stratford-on-Avon. This model was made of over two thousand pieces of different kinds of wood ranging in size from that of a pin head to two inches long, and it was exact duplicate of the poet's home in coloring and to the smallest detail. This model was entered at the World's Fair in 1893 at Chicago, and won a bronze medal and a diploma which states that it was awarded for "Excellence of Construction, High-class Inlaying and Cabinet Work; for Historic Value." Mr. Courtney delighted in putting forth all his artistic skill and dexterity of workmanship in everything he made.

Ardent Churchman

He was an arden churchman and was long a most active member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. He joined Mark Street Church after Union.

Besides being an indefatigable worker, Mr. Courtney took a keen interest in municipal and national affairs, and the epistles he has addressed to The Examiner on such topics as temperance, the street railways, and the Armour Hill Memorial Park would fill quite a respectable volume. He always advocated temperance. He worked continuously to secure better transportation facilities for East City and was delighted when he saw the buses running over the bridge. He took a great share in the work of the Patriotic Association during the war. He never ceased in advocating the Memorial Park on Armour Hill, soliciting many donations, and he personally fixed the giant flagpole on the summit of these.

Mr. Courtney was born in Liverpool, England, on November 1, 1844. He spent his early years in Stratford-on-Avon living across the street from the old home of the poet Shakespeare. He received an ordinary school education and then apprenticed himself to the cabinet-making trade, working in the same firm with his father. He added to his education by studying mechanical drawing at night school, finding this very useful in his trade. During these early years Edward Courtney was laying the foundation for that useful and upright life which has left its mark upon this city.

Came in 1870

Mr. Courtney came to Peterborough in 1870, and he immediately began working at his trade. He had a store on the east side of Water street be-

STANDARDIZATION OF HOME WIRING AIM OF LEAGUE

Manager of Electric Service League Tells of Work of Organization.

GREAT DEVELOPMENT.

Electricity the Basis of Continent's Prosperity, Rotary is Told.

The story of how the Electric Service Leagle has so successfully promoted the idea of a standard system of electric wiring that 80 per cent. of all the new houses in Toronto carry the red seal that means their wiring has been approved by the League, was told to the Peterborough Rotary Club at its luncheon to-day by George W. Austin, manager of the organization and formerly editor of the Peterborough Review. Mr. Austin's informative talk upon electrical development in general and the operations of the Electric Service League in particular was much appreciated.

At the beginning of the luncheon President W. R. Morris referred to the death of Mrs. J. J. Turner and the Rotarians stood for a minute in silence as a tribute to her memory and a gesture of sympathw for the bereaved husband and other relatives.

Rotarian John H. Seels, chairman of the Boys' Work committee, suggested as a means of keeping in touch with the boys who attended Rotary camp last summer that a meeting should be arranged to be addressed by Judge Mott, of Toronto.

Rotarian A. L. Killaly announced that at the request of the Toronto club an inter-city meeting to be attended by the clubs in Eastern Ontario would be arranged at some central point in the district.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Rotarian S. R. Armstrong, who referred to Mr. Austin's former connection with the Review and with the Toronto Mail and Empire.

Mr. Austin, after a jocular reference to political conditions here when he formerly lived in Peterborough called attention to the important place occupied by electricity and to the rapid developments that had tak place in the last 40 years. Great as these had been he felt assured that there would be even greater progress made in the next ten years, for the surface had been but scratched. El-

Medical Faculty Rules With Iron Hand

KINGSTON, Nov. 5. — At a meeting of the Medical Faculty of Queen's University a method of dealing with the habit of whole student years in "cutting" classes when the spirit moves was decided upon. It was announced by Dean Connell yesterday that each time hereafter when a class absents itself from lectures without arrangement with the professors, the pass mark of its final examination will be increased by 1 per cent. It appears that there has been a good deal of class "cutting," by the junior years particularly, and the faculty is meeting the situation with an iron hand. If the new method works out in the Medical Faculty, it is stated that other faculties will adopt it.

FINAL SHOTS FIRED TO-DAY

To-morrow United States Electors Go to the Polls to Elect a President.

$9,000,000 IN FUNDS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Democratic and Republican political gunners are firing their final shots in the Presidential election campaign to-day. To-morrow voters go to the polls to decide whether the next occupant of White House will be Governor Al Smith, of New York, or Herbert Hoover.

Both sides are full of confidence as the hour of polling approaches, and both predict success. Candidates will make their final appeals to electors to-day.

Governor Smith at noon to-day made a strong bid for support in farm country, attacking the Republican farm relief policies. To-night from his home town of Palo Alto, California, Hoover will also speak over the radio.

Funds Exceed $9,000,000.

The Republican and Democratic parties have collected more than $9,000,000 and spent about $8,800,000 in the present campaign, according to reports filed by the treasurers of their national committees with the Clerk of the House of Representatives.

The total of funds received by J. R. Nutt, both as treasurer of the Republican National Committee and as "agent" for the Republican State Committees, for all purposes up to November 1, was $4,911,744.52, while the disbursements were $4,744,361.07.

The Democratic National Committee collected $4,088,933.09 and its disbursements were $4,008,023.68.

The report shows receipts of $770,465.32 between October 25 and October 31, dividing this sum into $447,220.62 directly for the National Committee, $115,000 sent to State committees and $208,244.70 received as "agent" for the State committees. In this period, the National Committee spent directly $447,648.46.

POLICE END SEARCH FOR BODY

Authorities Investigating Overturning of Car Into Welland Canal.

WELLAND, Ont., November 5 (Canadian Press). — No further dragging has been done for the body of Stanley Pesowsky, said to have been a passenger in the car driven by Frank Huffman or Kohmann, Jr. which plunged into the Welland Canal carrying Frank Kohmann Sr. to his death. The finding of a toy revolver in the car which was raised from the bottom on Saturday is understood to have started police on a new line of investigation upon which they decline to give out any word until after the inquest. Divers and grapplings worked all day on Saturday to rescue Pesowsky's body, but without any result.

Four Generations Occupy Same Farm in Cavan Land Was Drawn From the Crown in 1820

Terminating one hundred and eight years continuous occupancy by four successive generations, the farm of T. W. McCamus, on the first concession of Cavan township has recently been rented and Mr. McCamus, with his son, has removed to Millbrook where they will reside.

On November 1, Mr. McCamus held a successful sale of his farm stock, representing termination of his association with the farm which was first occupied by Thomas McCamus who came out from Shercock, County Cavan, Ireland in 1820. The land was drawn from the crown. Succeeding the original occupant, his son Robert McCamus resided there and he was followed in turn by his son Thomas. T. W. McCamus, his son, has represented the fourth generation, and given the farm a record of having been occupied by the same family, direct descent for 108 years. Two relatives whose mother was born on the farm, reside in Peterborough, namely, Mrs. Dr. Holloway and Robert Fair.

Mr. McCamus has two brothers and two sisters, all surviving residents of the old homestead, namely, Robert, residing at Ida, James L. McCamus, ex-warden of the counties Mrs. Harry Armstrong, who resides near Bailieb oro, and Mrs. Harry Ball, whose home is near Millbrook.

Ross Lytle Is Shot In Forehead When Boys Fire At Bear

Boys Come Upon Trail of Bear Leading Into Swail, One Goes in and the Others Take Up Positions On the Border.

SEVERAL SHOTS ARE FIRED AT THE BEAR ROSS LYTLE DROPS WOUNDED IN HEAD

Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith and Dr. Willis Held a Post Mortem Last Night—Inquest Is Ordered, With Preliminary Being Held To-day.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DEER BAY, November 5. — Ross Lytle, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Lytle, was fatally wounded late yesterday morning while out deer hunting on the Oregon Trail, four miles north of Buckhorn, in the Township of Harvey. The boy, along with four companions, Charles, Nelson, John, and Kenneth Ireland, left their homes early in the morning to spend the day in the woods north and east of Buckhorn hunting deer.

When they reached a point about five miles from the Lytle home they came upon the track of a bear which led into a small swail. The boys separated, one of them going into the swail to drive the bear out. The other four took up positions around the swail so that they might be able to shoot the bear when it appeared. Kenneth Ireland had apparently accomplished his task of driving the bear out when the shooting occurred.

Who fired the fatal shot has not yet been determined, but so far as is known there had been two shots fired from the rifle of Ross Lytle and several from the rifle of John Ireland.

When the smoke cleared away after the boys had shot at the bear Ross Lytle was seen to have fallen, pierced with a bullet through the forehead. Medical aid was immediately summoned, but before Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield or Dr. Willis of Hall's Bridge could arrive, the boy died.

A post-mortem was held last night by the doctors, but the results were not made known. A preliminary inquest is called for this afternoon in Buckhorn, and the main inquest will in all probability be held some day next week. Provincial Constable Harry Thompson, along with Sergeant Wigg and Constables Pearson and Webster, went back to the scene of the shooting.

Ross Lytle had worked all summer as a fireman on one of the Carew Company lumber boats and he, like many of the boys in the northern part of the county, was an expert with firearms, and liked to go on hunting expeditions in the woods. The Ireland boys were all older, ranging in age from thirty to eighteen years. Each boy except one carried a rifle, and the fifth had a shotgun.

BROADCASTING OF TRIAL STOPS

Judge Orders Radio Broadcasting To Cease in Toral Trial.

A CHANGED MAN

SAN ANGEL, Mexico, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Radio broadcasting of the trial of Jose De Leon Toral, assassin of President-elect Obregon, and Mother Conception, his alleged accomplice, was ordered stopped when the case resumed to-day.

Newspapers also were ordered to cease publishing or comments on the trial. The court announced in future the newspapers would not be given official stenographic reports. No explanation of the orders were given.

A Changed Man

Toral was a completely changed man from a coupel of months ago, when he was pale, heavily bearded, fresh from his crime and declared at Police Headquarters that all he wished was to die as soon as possible. This morning he wore a smartly cut black coat and vest and striped trousers, was clean shaved and carried a black ring with stones appearing to be diamonds. Mother Concepcion unable to wear nun's garb because of the religious restrictions, was gowned entirely in black, her dress fastened high up to the neck and reaching down to ankles, with black stockings and low-heeled shoes. Her hat was fashionable in model. Around her neck she wore a chain of the "Noble Holy Ghost."

Considerable time was spent in rearranging furniture in order to provide accommodation for lawyers, reporters, photographers and others. Finally, Judge Alonso Aznar Mendoza called the Court to order and the jurors were sworn in. Six of them had to be replaced, chiefly because they could not read or write, and one because he is a Government employe.

The pistol with which the crime was committed lay on the Judge's table, not half a yard from Toral's hands. Over the Judge's head and directly before Toral's eyes was a large and lifelike portrait of the slain man. When they entered both prisoners were extremely calm and chatted smilingly, but when Toral gazed at the picture his attitude changed to one of seriousness. His brows knitted and he seemed to get a lump in his throat.

MAN RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

Motorist Attempts To Miss Striking Man Lying On Road.

INQUEST CALLED

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press.)—Mike Cicsocki, 40, was instantly killed last night when an automobile ran over his head, bursting it open. The driver of the car, who was not held, said he saw the man lying on the road and swerved to the ditch, but it was too late to avoid running over him. An inquest will be held.

AUTO CRASH KILLS TWO

Two Automobiles Meet in Head-on Collision Near Stratford.

FOUR INJURED.

STRATFORD, Nov. 5.—One of the most serious automobile crashes of the season in this district late yesterday afternoon claimed the lives of Mrs. Harry Fetter, aged 45, of Centreville, near Kitchener, and Frankie Fraser, aged 3, of Kitchener. Four others were seriously injured: Harry and George Fisher, Otterville, and George Tune and F. Peller, Stratford.

The accident occurred about 6.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon on Highway No. 8, about four miles west of New Hamburg. Mr. and Mrs. Fetter and son and the little Fraser boy had spent the afternoon in Stratford and were returning home. The other car, driven by Tune, was travelling west toward Stratford. The automobiles met head-on just at the Perth-Waterloo boundary. The Tune car is said to have turned out to pass another machine, but this has not been verified. In any event the Fetter car was hurled into the ditch on the south side of the highway and the Tune car almost into the ditch on the north side. Mrs. Fetter and the little Fraser boy were killed almost instantly.

IN POLICE COURT

Two months in the common jail was the sentence imposed upon a local girl when she appeared before Police Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning, charged with theft. At the same time, the magistrate warned her that the fact of this being her first offence had saved her from a more serious punishment.

YANKEE DOODLE MONOPLANE CRASHES IN NON-STOP FLIGHT

Pilot and Passenger Owner Are Killed When Airplane Strikes Mountain.

WITNESSES CRASH.

Enroute From Los Angeles To New York On Non-Stop Flight.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—The monoplane Yankee Doodle, holder of two trans-Continental records, caught in a blinding rain and fog in the Bradshaw Mountains Saturday night, struck against the side of a wall in Crook Canyon, 23 miles south of here, and sent Captain C. S. Collyer, pilot, and Harry Tucker, passenger-owner, to their death.

The plane was en route from Los Angeles to New York, on a non-stop flight.

Scattered bits of airplane wreckage, strewn along the canyon yesterday, told searching parties the story of the wreck, and resulted in positive identification of the aircraft and the bodies of Collyer and Tucker.

It was believed by members of the sheriff's searching party, which found the strewn wreckage late yesterday, that the craft had struck the canyon side with a tremendous force and that the heavy load of gasoline exploded with the impact.

Parachute Open.

The open parachute of the pilot and the passenger indicated that the pair, realizing their plight too late, had made an effort to jump. Their landing flares had also been released.

T. B. Tomlinson, manager of the Storm Cloud Mines, was the only eye-witness of the crash. He said he heard the plane come down through the canyon, sputtering as if the motor was failing, and after it had scraped the tree tops for a distance, crashed. He said a loud explosion immediately followed the crash.

The rugged character of the terrain prevented searchers from reaching the scene of the tragedy until late yesterday, when a 20-year-old youth, Frank Shields, found the scattered remains of the proud cross-continent record-holding monoplane.

Motor Not Right.

Reports received from the mine on Saturday night said that the plane had circled over a little cluster of mining prospectors' cabins in the vicinity about 7.30 o'clock. At that time the motor was functioning with such irregularity that the condition was observed by the miners.

The irregular purr of the machine faded in the distance and the lights were swallowed up in a misty rain.

The Bradshaw Mountains, where the plane fell, previously proved a barrier to the Yankee Doodle in a non-stop flight less than two months ago. With Art Goebel, famous trans-oceanic aviator, at the controls, and Tucker as a passenger, the Yankee Doodle was forced down 20 miles north of Prescott, when the gasoline supply became exhausted.

The Yankee Doodle took off from Mines Field, Los Angeles, Saturday at 3.29 p.m. for a continuous journey from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

To Break Record.

While the pilot, Collyer, had stated that pressing business engagements demanded his presence there, he admitted that he would attempt to better Goebel's mark of less than 19 hours for the trip.

After establishing a new east-to-west record recently in their Lockheed Vega craft, Collyer and Tucker said they would set about to make a wholesale revision of aviation records.

The plane had just been released from the factory, where it underwent a complete overhauling after the record trip from New York.

THE WEATHER.

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—The depression which was over the Great Lakes on Saturday has passed to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Pressure is now low in the Western Provinces and high over the Central States. Showers have occurred in the Maritime Provinces, and the weather has been rather cold in Manitoba and Northern Ontario.

Lower Lakes—Moderate winds; fair and cool.

Georgian Bay and Northern Ontario—Northerly winds; fair and cold.

Ben Nevis, the highest mountain in Britain, has been pierced for the longest water tunnel in the world—fifteen miles in length when completed.

EADE GRAHAM NEW PRESIDENT

Young People of Lindsay Presbytery Meet in Woodville Church.

MANY ADDRESSES.

DUNSFORD, Nov. 5.—Eade Graham, who has been president for the past two years, was re-elected at the annual convention of the Young People of Lindsay Presbytery of the United Church of Canada held in Woodville, on Wednesday. The gathering for the morning session was not large while more than one hundred and fifty delegates registered for the afternoon and evening sessions.

Rev. W. A. E. Doe pastor of the Woodville church in a brief and pleasing speech extended greetings to the members of the convention. This was followed by an address by William Newman, M.P.P. for Victoria County on "The Young Person as a citizen," in which he impressed upon those present the tremendous responsibilities resting upon young people in the church and the great opportunities of service that confronted them. Mr. Newman assured the young people that the destiny of the nation was in their hands. If they lived noble lives and did things worthy of them the future would be fuller of achievement than was the past. The balance of power for greatness or littleness for good or evil lay in their control. At the afternoon session Rev. A. K. Edmison, of Little Britain, chairman of the Lindsay Presbytery spoke on "Growth in Personality and Character" assuring the young people that the ministers and laymen of the church were behind them in their work. "How children are raised today and not how they were raised when we were young is what counts," the speaker stated. If the young people fail the church will fail. Mr. Edmison used Peter as a character illustration. He stated that there was a period in Peter's life when people kept their children away from him for fear his shadow would fall upon them and contaminate them, and then a later period when people brought their children to Peter that his shadow might fall upon them in healing and blessing them.

Life Enriched

"The change," said the speaker, was due to Peter having come into contact with Jesus. God laid his finger on Peter and showed him that there was a work for him to do, other than simply catching fish. Peter did not want to take the work God had for him to do. "This," said the speaker, "was evident from the story of the sheet let down from Heaven. Peter when spoken to had said, 'Lord, I have never eaten anything common or unclean.' Peter's life was enriched, he became useful when he became willing to undertake the thing God had for him to do. God saw what was in Peter and called him into service. Some folk are not missed or noticed as they go and come in the work of life the presence of some is a curse to society and the presence of other folk is a blessing. Touch with God makes life a blessing.

In closing the speaker said, "You young people have in you possibilities that God wants. Take the work God gives you in your different spheres and societies and put your very best into it and wonderful things will be accomplished through you."

Round Table Conference

Rev. Manson Doyle, of the Toronto staff of Young Peoples' workers held the attention of the convention for nearly two hours of speech-making and in a round-table conference. Mr. Doyle in his own effective way urged young people to put a premium upon themselves in relation to their moral characters and their influence. He said, "The young people of our churches can route evil in its crude and devilish forms if only they become interested in right living and in service of a high type. Church services have a power all its own found in the fact that each one offers an opportunity to worship God which is not true of any other sort of meeting. People come to church

Hamilton Woman Fires At Phantom Burglar Men Seeking Clothes Are Ordered Out

HAMILTON, Nov. 5. — While Hamilton's mystery burglar, otherwise known as the pants thief because of his inclination to steal trousers to get the small change in the pockets, is still at large and is still operating in this vicinity, police believe that he nearly met his Waterloo in Burington near here a few days ago.

Mrs. J. Harrod of that place was in bed shortly after midnight when she heard a noise downstairs. She went down, thinking that her daughter had returned, and found two men in the house. She ordered them to leave the place and apparently thinking that they could frighten her, ordered her to supply them with some clothing. Instead Mrs. Harrod retreated to the bedroom and returned armed with a .22 caliber rifle.

She gave the two men a few seconds to get out. They hesitated and then, muttering a few curses, started to leave. When they failed to rush out, Mrs. Harrod fired at them and believes she hit one as he was seen to lurch badly as he ran. Police were called from Burlington and Hamilton and although armed with good descriptions, they made a fruitless search of the district.

The A.Y.P.A. held its annual Hallowe'en party on Monday evening last. The committee spared no effort for the success of the party for which they received unstinted praise. The earlier part of the evening was spent in playing old-fashioned games. After refreshments were served, the remainder of the evening was given up to an informal dance. The committee in charge were Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Dyke, Miss Verna Payne and Milford Hampton.

Nine tables were played at the weekly euchre party of St. Paul's Church on Tuesday. Miss Laura Garvey and Bruce Preston were the prize winners and Miss K. Garvey and J. Nolan won the consolation prizes.

On Tuesday evening, Lakefield Post No. 77 of the Canadan Legion, gave a very successful dance. The music and floor were good and an excellent supper was served.

AUCTION SALE IS SUCCESSFUL

Team of Horses Sells For $500, Cattle $100 to $180 and Sheep $17.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

CAVAN, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence)—T. W. McCamus, of Cavan held a large and successful auction sale on Thursday afternoon. Cows sold from $100 to $180, Sheep brought $17 and $18 each and brood sows sold from $35 to $40 each. Mr. McCamus disposed of ten registered horses, besides his work horses. One team sold for $500, another for $380. A year-old filly sold for $145. Brood mares sold from $100 to $150. Implements brought fair prices. The auctioneers were George and Ted Jackson, of Port Perry, and S. S. Staples, of Cavan.

Hallowe'en

Hallowe'en passed off very quietly. A number of the young people motored to Peterborough to see the Examiner Hallowe'en parade.

Tax Bills Distributed

Cavan tax bills are being distributed. Taxes are again higher this year. One 100-acre farm has a tax of about One Hundred and Fifteen dollars, and a 200-acre farm next to it, has a tax of about One Hundred and Ninety-nine dollars. The taxes are enough for a rent on a year like this, when the cash crops were destroyed by the rain. Practically all that farmers have this year is feed for their stock.

Personals

Dr. Turner, of Millbrook, and Medical Health Officer for Cavan, made an official visit to S.S. No. 7 on Thursday.

Messrs. Archie Dilson, shrdlush Heaslip, Herbert Neal, Wal. Mr. and Mrs. R. Matchett, on Thursday evening.

BOTH PARTIES ARE EXPECTING GREAT VICTORY

Republicans Claim 409 Votes in United States' Electoral College.

CLOSING SPEECHES.

Democrats Claim 402 Votes, 266 Needed To Have Majority.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Both party headquarters last night predict an easy victory for their candidates in Tuesday's Presidential election. The Republican prediction is that Hoover will have 409 votes in the Electoral College. Democrats predict 402 for Smith.

Final Advice.

PUEBLO, Col., Nov. 5.—Herbert Hoover in the last set speech of his Western campaign swing counselled a group of Colorado people who met him here Saturday night not to entrust the Democrats with tariff revision.

Leaving his train to make a brief talk after a day of acclaim in the towns through which he passed, the Republican Presidential candidate declared that in the whole of the campaign "we have not heard from any representative of the Democratic party the complete acceptance of the term 'protective tariff' as defined by the Republican party, and, as a matter of fact, the Democratic candidates for Congress are pledged by their party platform to another 'competitive tariff.'"

"In 1922 they voted against all the provisions of the Republican party for protection of the industries of Colorado. They have continuously preached against it, and as late as nine months ago nearly all of them voted to bring about the instant reduction of the tariff. I do not believe for one moment that you are prepared to entrust to these men a revision of the tariff."

Hits Anti-Saloon League.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. — Alfred E. Smith, in his final personal appeal to an audience in this campaign on Saturday night, raked his Republican opponents from end to end for their stand on prohibition, farm relief, water power and a number of other issues, and had a home crowd cheering, shouting, yelling and tooting horns from almost the moment he entered Madison Square Garden until he left.

He accused the Republican party of being under the "powerful and dominating influence" of the Anti-Saloon League, and then declared he had been amused watching that party try "to disclaim responsibility for the antics" of the league and the Ku-Klux Klan.

Again the nominee declared against any general revision of the tariff and accused the Republicans of attempting to set up a "smoke screen" on this issue along with others. He said he had no intention of letting down the bars on immigration, and on water power he reiterated his belief in government ownership and control.

As to farm relief, the nominee declared the control of the surplus was the problem to be met and that the cost of this control must be borne by the farm crop to be benefited. He assailed the Republicans for what he said was a failure to take any action in the farmers' behalf.

SCHOOL PUPILS HOLD MASQUERADE PARTY

Seventy Guests, Forty-five of Whom Were in Costume at Dummer School.

On Tuesday evening, October 30, the pupils and teacher, Miss Vera J. McInmoyle, of Pleasant Plains, S.S. No. 4, Dummer, entertained over seventy guests, most of whom were in costume, at a Hallowe'en masquerade party held at the school-house. The school-room was artistically decorated in Hallowe'en colors.

At 8 o'clock ghosts and witches were seen hovering about the gates of the school yard. The evening entertainment opened with a grand march. Guessing those in costume caused much laughter. The last one to be identified was Mrs. Jordan Crowe. The company was then divided into two groups by means of colors, orange and black, after which a series of games followed, such as passing through the hoop and potato race; the orange being the winning team.

An apple eating contest followed, in which twenty boys took part, and then a similar contest for the girls in which about fifteen took part. The winners were Miss Velma Payne and Mr. Albert Harrison.

After the refreshments, the lights were turned out, and Miss McIlmoyle read a thrilling ghost story, assisted by Miss Velma Payne.

Prize-winners were as follows:
Last identified: Mrs. Jordan Crowe.
Best dressed: Mrs. H. Little.
Guess on number of beans in pint jar: Mrs. Henry Little, guess being 491; number of beans, 487.
Apple eating contest: Girls—Velma Payne. Boys—Albert Harrison.
Threading the needle: Mr. W. Little and Mr. L. McCracken.

AGED MAN IS STRUCK DOWN BY AUTOMOBILE

Henry McNaughton Collided With Automobile on Campbellford Street.

NOT SERIOUSLY HURT.

Acknowledges To Chief of Police Accident Largely His Fault.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Things might easily have been of a much more serious nature than they were when an aged gentleman stepped out into the street Saturday night and was knocked down by a motor car. A few cuts and bruises is apparently all the injuries suffered.

It appears that Henry McNaughton, Grand road, stepped off the curb and began to cross Tice street at a point about opposite Birk's drug store when he collided with a car driven by Cyril Sloggett. Sloggett was going at a very moderate rate of speed and was not to blame any more than the man who had apparently not noticed the car approaching. Mr. McNaughton was removed to his home, and Sloggett summoned a doctor at once. Chief Light was also on the scene, and when interviewed later stated that McNaughton had admitted that the accident was largely his own fault.

MAN IS GIVEN FOUR MONTHS

Ray Copperthwaite Appears Before His Honor Judge L. V. O'Connor.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Ray Copperthwaite appeared in county court in Cobourg Saturday before Judge L. V. O'Connor to answer to three charges of theft and of escaping from the lawful custody of an officer. After hearing the evidence presented, Judge O'Connor submitted the boy to a very straight-forward lecture as to what was required of a good citizen and also included some advice which, if followed, would tend to keep him out of trouble in future. The judge ordered that Copperthwaite should serve the four months to which he had originally been sentenced and then be placed under suspended sentence for a period of twelve months. When this period had elapsed, he would be placed on his good behaviour for another twelve months.

MANY HERE END COLDS QUICK, PLEASANT WAY

Unique Method Doctors Advise for Home Use Gives Almost Instant Relief

Glad that she took her doctor's advice instead of allowing neglect to make her feel more miserable, Mrs. Albert H. Haines now realizes how quickly one can get rid of a cold. For doctors are now advising home use of a pleasant hospital method that has brought surprisingly quick relief to numbers of people in Peterborough, Lindsay and vicinity.

Mrs. Haines had neglected her cold three days in the hope it would "stop itself." Instead, congestion started spreading so that she called the doctor, who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Relief began almost instantly, he reports. In another hour or so the medication of wild cherry, terpin hydrate, etc., was absorbed by her system, loosening up congestion. By night her temperature was normal, the "achy" feeling was gone and in a day or so there was no trace left of the cold.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

This hospital certified medicine quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps allay congestion and drive out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists—50c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

MISSIONARY SERVICE HELD

Rev. Newton Bowles, Returned Missionary, Tells of Work in China.

DUNSFORD, Nov. 5 (Examiner Correspondence).—A missionary campaign service was held in the United church here on Thursday evening, at which Rev. Newton Bowles, returned missionary from West China and Rev. C. C. Washington of Fenelon Falls gave addresses.

Mr. Bowles related several practical happenings to show just what his work in China involved. He referred to Jesus looking upon the multitude with compassion because they were as sheep without a shepherd and said, "There is a difference between looking and seeing. Jesus might have viewed the multitude as just a crowd, or he might have felt their sorrows or he might have looked with contempt and said, 'Your condition is the result of your own doings.' But he looked with compassion. Jesus was not looking for their faults, failings and defects, but for a chance to do them good."

"Some folk," said the speaker, "refuse to support the church's program because there is something in the budget which they do not approve. China is a great nation struggling for something new and better. The people have often gone blindly about their task. They have made mistakes and have had to retrace their steps. Selfish and evil-minded men from the West have capitalized upon the situation in China and yet the Chinese have refused to turn back in their quest."

Better Government

The Chinese are trying to set up a more progressive form of government in their country. They have

Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Cameron were in Welland on Saturday, for the wedding of Dr. Donald Cameron to Miss Margaret Van Sittart Livingstone, daughter of Judge and Mrs. L. B. C. Livingstone.

Miss Margaret Cameron was in charge of arrangements for afternoon tea, served on Saturday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., at the conclusion of the regular meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. Tea was poured by Mrs. D. Loucks, assisted by the Misses Amy Beal, Florence Adams, and Violet McKeown. The table was very pretty with its bowl of yellow 'mums and yellow candles in silver holders.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Above is shown a leather sports glove with light-weight wool glove to be worn inside. In the center a glove with tight cuff of beaver to keep the wrist and hand warm and then a sports glove with flaring cuff and lining of soft fur. The mitten of white wool with colored stripes has a section for the first finger for the convenience of motorist or flyer.

In school we learned that the whole is always equal to the sum of all its parts, but when you experience the warmth-giving properties of a pair of the new winter sports gloves you are convinced that sometimes the whole is even greater than the parts contained. There are over gloves of leather with inner gloves of light-weight wool that are really more than twice as warm and cozy as either part would be alone.

The advantage of this type of glove to the girl who indulges in winter sports or who sails her own airplane, is that the inner gloves may easily be washed and dried and kept soft and clean. Then, too, I suppose the slight air space between the outer and inner gloves becomes heated from the hands and helps to keep them warm without any additional weight or bulkiness.

Nothing so mars the beauty of the hands as cold. Even the slight chilliness of hands that some women experience on cool days indoors makes the hands look red or mottled and increases their tendency to wrinkle. For ordinary street wear you probably don't want to wear mittens or fur-lined gloves but for motoring and sports it is highly desirable to give the hands ample protection. If you drive your own car you may have a pair of roomy woolen gloves to draw on over your regular gloves when you drive. They protect the gloves besides adding needed warmth.

Fur-lined kid gloves are a comforting addition to the wardrobe of the girl who indulges in winter sports. An interesting pair of woolen mittens that I saw the other day, which were said to be especially suited to the needs of the aviatrix or motorist, had the first finger as well as the thumb separate.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

HAVE you been looking through seed catalogues planning your garden for the spring? Pictures of spring are already being shown to us. The seasons seem to chase each other around so fast that we hardly have time to look around until another one is here.

• • •

The autumn seed catalogue covers present a very tempting picture with all the various colors, consisting of the deep rose, pale lavender, vivid orange and the purple tulips. I notice that a great many of our Peterborough gardeners have already planted the bulbs for the spring, but while September and October are really the planting months, November is not too late if it doesn't snow. By planning definitely to have a spring garden, you may have flowers in your garden six weeks earlier.

• • •

The border seems most important in the garden just now. For your spring one you may have varieties of tulips and crocusus, scillas, daffodils, lilies and iris. Peonies, too, should not be forgotten. Among other flowers suggested for fall planting in the catalogue are bleeding heart, hyacinths, lily of the valley, narcissus, pansy, snowdsops, freesia and anemones.

• • •

When once well placed in the garden and growing satisfactorily, peonies should be left undisturbed. Old clumps that have to be moved, should never be reset whole. They should be lifted carefully so as to prevent breaking of the brittle roots. They should also be left to wilt just enough to make them pliable and permit disentangling. Then with a sharp knife, they should be so divided as to leave from three to five eyes on each division and the long roots shortened to about seven inches. After the peonies flower in the spring, they require a short rest before they send out the new shoots, and these if they are properly divided make the new plant.

Bonemeal is pronounced by gardeners as a 'fool proof fertilizer' as the plants will take up only what they need, and as it disintegrates slowly it has been said to be available for plant food for several decades. When setting the bulbs and plants make sure the earth is well sifted and lightly packed down. Ashes are recommended by growers as good top dressing in the fall; but only when thoroughly decomposed and should be put in a circle away from the plant, so as not to touch the crown.

• • •

It is a good plan too, and I notice a good number of Peterborough folks are doing it, to label each variety. Otherwise after a while the names will be forgotten and the plants lose much of their interest.

• • •

The bulbs should be planted at a certain depth and distance apart. The crocus, snowdrop and scilla bulbs are all planted two inches deep, the first two, two inches apart and the scilla three inches. Both jonquils and tulips are planted three inches deep and four inches apart. Four inches is the right depth for hyacinths and narcissus, and six inches apart. The lily needs five inches of soil above it, and twelve or more in width. The colored bulbs add much to the perennial border, as the colors commence early in the spring and keep up until the other plants start to bloom.

• • •

One has to, of course, cover the beds with a certain amount of leaves to keep out the frost, but leaves seem to be no scarcity this fall. I noticed in the north end of the city the other day enough leaves on the sidewalk, I think to cover all of our bulb beds for miles around. No one apparently will take the trouble to sweep them off—but it could be done in about fifteen minutes, and how much more healthy it would be for the little children playing in them, for they have been tramped till there is nothing left but dust.

• • •

From a straight piece of velvet twenty inches wide and about sixty long you can make a perfectly charming crush collar to use on a homemade evening wrap or as a bit of refurnishment for an old one. It may also be used for a last season's coat in need of a new collar. All this in other words, is the help for the week. Just send in the coupon, which has to be, of course, filled in. One lady last week, forgot to sign it, so I just had to wait and hope that she would send another.

• • •

I was sitting at home, the other day, watching out the window, a woman hanging the clothes on the line (she must be one of those who doesn't mind being seen), and it seemed to me that she had never put a thought to the way they would look when they were hung up. That day, she happened to have a number of flannette blankets, some double and some single, but every one of the blankets was pulled about three inches too much at the ends where it was pinned to the line. You have noticed, haven't you, how they look when they come off the line—you simply can't get that corner pulled back into shape.

• • •

I hope she notices this and rectifies her mistake, for I can't help remarking about anything like that, where a little use of common sense would make her job so much better.

• • •

I have noticed a number of those small bookcases which you can buy very reasonably now, being used to fill up an awkward corner in the living room. Books make such a colorful addition to an almost impossible corner.

• • •

Remember the old fruit pictures we used to have? Fashion says we should dig them out of the attic and have them renovated and hang them in the living room—they are really stylish.

• • •

Have you noticed the new floating dishes which are now on sale? They are used as soap dishes and will certainly save a great amount of soap, when in use in the bathtub.

• • •

Once again I remind you of the letters which you are going to help me out with for the Armistice Number. I hope you haven't forgotten. They should be in by Wednesday, so please hurry!

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

In Saturday's Whatnot you did strike a chord in harmony with my whole idea of good manners, when you spoke of urging people to eat or not urging. Had anyone happened to refuse anything and later asked for it, my Quaker grandmother would calmly have refused, with "thou shalt not make thyself a liar in my house," said in the sweetest, gentlest tones.

We were taught to offer a second portion and possibly a third, and sense what was wanted, but if refused, not to urge. Anyone who refused either had enough, or possibly did not care for the article, or did not have honesty or gumption enough to take what was offered. Urging was bad manners and annoying from every point of view.

Not only does this apply to table, but to everything. Some people can be urged to do almost anything, they know they should not; they do, because urged. Sometimes a call or a short visit is turned into a nightmare, because half the time one is begged to stay longer, when it is absolutely necessary to return, and one does not feel at all times willing to tell one's reasons. Sometimes, indeed, deliberate things are done to delay one—with the best intentions, I grant, but most annoying.

It would seem that the man who can firmly and kindly say no, and act no, has a far better chance to amount to something, and that the woman who welcomes cordially, whole-heartedly, will not urge, and will be appreciated for it. Business is far better with one whose yea is yea, and whose nay is nay. There are, of course, cases when the unexpected happens, when one finds himself in the wrong, the thing then necessitates a change, but in the ordinary course of life, one should think and think on all sides quickly, decide and act and feel uncomplimented, rather than complimented, if anyone has the temerity to urge a change just for gratification there would be less unhappiness in the world.

Sincerely yours,
QUID EST."

Your letter is very interesting, "Quid Est," and just develops so much farther my little idea. I like the way you apply the illustration of urging at table to other events in life, and I think your whole letter eminently sound in principle.

It IS very embarrassing to be pressed to stay longer on a call when one knows duty calls elsewhere. I notice it particularly, because I am really very busy. But what can one do when one's hostess adopts that "slighted" air and threatens to become huffy?

"Dear Marion:

I received the pattern for baby's jacket and thank you so much. I wonder if anyone of the readers would give me a good recipe for making pie crust. I always fail on it. I am sending a recipe for doing apples and hope it is acceptable.

Wishing your page every success, I remain,

MRS. H. S."

Thanks for the recipe, Mrs. H. S., which I know many neighbors will appreciate. To tell you the truth, I haven't a very good recipe for pie crust; mine is just ordinary. I hope the neighbors will send us some. Thanks for your good wishes.

CULINARY TITBITS

Fruit should always be served, accompanied by a silver knife.

• • •

Good flour should smell sweet and nutty and have no hint of mustiness.

• • •

The canned pimentos give an added brightness and a more professional look to a creamed dish than do the plain green peppers.

• • •

Do not stir sponge cake batter after the whites of eggs have been added, but fold the batter over and over, enveloping as much air as possible into the batter.

To warm over clam or oyster stew, place it in a pan over another pan containing water or else use the double boiler. Either method will prevent curdling.

PALATE PATTER

Thin slices of pickles and stuffed olives make an attractive garnish for the cheese paste.

• • •

Some people like the flavor of curry with creamed chicken now that sherry is out of the question.

• • •

Don't forget grated young carrots in your vegetable salad. They add flavor, nutriment and attractiveness to the salad.

• • •

Grapefruit "baskets" filled with sweetened grapefruit pulp and cubes of mint jelly make a lovely beginning to the course dinner.

ONE GOOD TURN

Turn your window boxes or plants once a week so that they do not always grow in one direction, towards the sunlight. A lopsided plant is not pretty.

School Days are Happier with SHREDDED WHEAT

Keeps youngsters healthy and mentally alert. Contains the right amount of bran in digestible form.

If you have a problem, or want advice, or a recipe, the neighbors will be glad to help out. Write to Marion, who will present your request.

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy reading the Women's Page very much and have been wondering if any of the neighbors could advise me what I could get to clean baby's white kid shoes. They are perfectly good but very badly soiled.

I shall appreciate very much any information which might be given.

Sincerely yours,
Lakefield. MRS. H."

Will some neighbor oblige, please?

Pillow slips should be ironed lengthwise in order to get entirely rid of wrinkles.

Be chary about the amount of water used in wiping up or mopping floors. Too much water means swelling and warping of the boards.

A double crochet thread can be used to sew on the kiddies' buttons and will prove far more secure than ordinary sewing cotton.

NOTHING TO HOPE FOR.

There is no comfort for the Canadian farmer in contemplating a Republican victory in the United States to-morrow.

Mr. Hoover's closing speech of the campaign left no doubt as to what will follow his election as President.

High as is the tariff on farm products entering the United States at the present time, Mr. Hoover is definitely pledged to increase it.

It is one of the steps by which he proposes to improve conditions for the American farmer, and it will shut what little of the market across the border remained available to the Canadian producer in the face of the farmers of this country.

An increased tariff on Canadian farm products will follow a Hoover victory as surely as day follows the night.

Nor in the face of Governor Smith's Louisville address, repeated again in New York on Saturday night, can a great deal be hoped from a Democratic triumph.

True Governor Smith has not promised higher tariffs, but he has intimated that they will be left about as they are, which is not much solace for the farmer on this side of the line.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN.

The annual appeal on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, that wonderful institution that has given a fresh chance in life to thousands of youngsters, should be readily answered throughout the Province.

Just at present the Hospital for Sick Children is particularly in need of assistance, inasmuch as its present plant has ceased to be sufficient to meet the increasing demands made upon it.

As a result of this condition there has just been completed a branch hospital at Thistletown, near Weston, where children requiring prolonged treatment, consisting largely of more fresh air and sunshine than is to be had in the middle of a city, will be taken.

This will immediately make 100 beds in the parent hospital available for active cases requiring constant attention.

For half a century the Hospital for Sick Children has opened its doors to sick children of every class, color and creed, and no institution in this country has done a more noteworthy work.

The present appeal should be met by a generous response on the part of the people of the Province.

POPPY DAY.

Under the auspices of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion, Saturday will be observed as Poppy Day in Peterborough, and it is hoped that every citizen will buy and wear a poppy, the flower of remembrance, as a tribute to the memory of the unreturning brave.

The funds secured by the legion from the sale of poppies is devoted to relief work among needy veterans and dependents of those who gave up their lives in the Great War.

Thus two most desirable purposes are served.

The universal wearing of poppies is a proof that Canadians have not forgotten the gallant men whose death was part of the price of victory.

And the money obtained by this means helps to smooth the path for men who fought and suffered or for the families of those who were not spared to come back.

In commending the objects of Poppy Day to its army of readers, The Examiner is satisfied that the response on this occasion will be as generous and as representative as on previous appeals of this nature.

THE RADIO'S PART.

Canadians will await the result of to-morrow's presidential election with much more interest than they usually display in the political battles of our neighbors in the United States.

Undoubtedly the radio is responsible for this condition.

As never before, the people of Canada have been able to keep in touch with campaign developments because of the general use of broadcasting facilities by both parties.

On Friday night, for example, set-owners all over the country were able to hear first Mr. Hoover, then his opponent, Governor Al Smith, and finally Senator Borah, of Idaho, in a fighting address on behalf of the Republican candidate.

Canadians, as a result of such opportunities, are unusually well informed as to the presidential campaign—in fact, they have been able to hear more political propaganda from across the border than it has ever been possible to hear in campaigns in their own country, owing to the hookups of many powerful American broadcasting stations that carried the words of the speakers and the noise of excited crowds to listeners everywhere on the Continent.

LAW OBSERVANCE IN THE PETERBOROUGH DISTRICT.

Ontario is not going to the dogs by any manner of means. There may be crime waves so-called in the large centres, "pants" burglars and other culprits at large. But they do not reflect on the law-abiding instinct of the great majority of the people who live in the smaller cities, and the outlying towns and villages of this Province. A case in point might well be cited and there is no doubt it can be duplicated in Lincoln County, although this county is close to the international border, more populous and is liable to have more depredations and misdemeanors.

During the past year, Peterborough had 104 men and seven women confined in the County Jail. At times, there was only one inmate in the jail. The highest number at any time was 16. Some of these were harmless vagrants merely put in "durance vile" for a short time. That is a most commendable record. On top of it, we had at the Fall assizes, white gloves presented in several cities, one of which was Hamilton.

All this was not because police officers had failed in their duty to follow up crime. It was because there has been an absence of serious crime in most communities. It is a splendid condition of affairs for Ontario, and doubtless prevails all over Canada. Why? Because law is enforced in this country, there is no collusion between judges, politicians and police and no power on earth can stay the hand of justice for a culprit deserving of punishment. That is the will of the people of this country, notwithstanding that attempts are made at times to make inroads on tradition. It can't be done. We have seen men in high places don the prison garb, doctors have gone to serve long sentences, also bank managers. Regrettable as these cases were, they served an object lesson.—St. Catharines Standard.

THE AMUSEMENT TAX.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors of Ontario are asking the Provincial Government for an elimination, or at least a reduction, of the Amusement Tax, so far as it falls upon the patrons of motion picture theatres. It is a request, we think, that deserves consideration. The Government, constantly pressed for expenditures, and anxious to make the best possible showing, both in the way of service to the Province and debt reductions and surplusses, can hardly be blamed for wishing to retain a source of revenue that is profitable and easy to collect. Moreover, recent years have seen so many encroachments by the Federal authorities in the field of direct taxation, the Provinces have found themselves hard pressed for new sources of necessary income. It is because of this, indeed, that local governments have had to resort to what are commonly known as "nuisance" taxes.

It is very desirable, however, that, wherever and whenever possible, the Provinces should try to eliminate such taxes, particularly when it can be shown that they fall upon a class of people with the minimum of capacity for taxation. This, we think, is true of the Amusement Tax. No one could very reasonably argue against the proposition that an individual willing and able to pay two or three dollars for an evening's entertainment should not be made to pay an extra quarter into the provincial exchequer. But the Amusement Tax, in Ontario, falls largely upon people for whom it is undoubtedly a hardship. And amusement, it should be borne in mind, is in the true sense not a luxury: it is a necessity; for living means something more than mere physical existence.

That being admitted, there does appear to be a good case for the Government, if it can see its way at all clear to do so, at least to reduce the Amusement Tax. It might take the question under immediate consideration, to the end that a beginning be made by following the example of the United States and having the Amusement Tax apply only to entertainment tickets of $2 or more.—Ottawa Journal.

"TILL DEATH US DO PART."

By common consent one of the sweetest songs that Robert Burns ever wrote was that of "John Anderson, My Jo." In simple and beautiful language it paints a picture of a worthy couple who journeyed through life together, who faced the difficulties, disappointments and rebuffs that come to all, but have preserved their love and fidelity through sunshine and shadow, and, though hair is grey in one case and brow is "beld" in the other, they plight their troth to the end. To judge from the clamor that is being made in some quarters to-day for the establishing of a divorce court in Ontario, and from the opinions of "modern" writers expressed in popular magazines and ephemeral novels, one might be disposed to believe that such a picture of marital felicity and fidelity was a thing of the past. It is not so.

In the Globe last week there were published the pictures of another Mr. and Mrs. Anderson—of Hastings County—who on the twenty-ninth of last month celebrated the seventy-third anniversary of their wedding day. While it is given to few to reach such a ripe age as this couple, the pages of the press record many cases of "golden" and "diamond" weddings. This week two of Toronto's well-known citizens, Hon. Thomas and Mrs. Crawford, observed their golden wedding, while the number of happy unions of Ontario citizens that were consummated less than half a century ago is legion.

These facts should be remembered. Unfortunately, they are too often forgotten by the protagonists of easy divorce, who would have it appear that the welfare of the country depends upon the facility with which marriage vows can be annulled.

It is not greater facilities for divorce that are needed to raise the moral tone of the country, but a purer and loftier conception of the sacramental responsibilities of the marriage relationship. Old-fashioned this may be, but here, if in anything, the Divine admonition is: "Stand ye in the old ways, see and ask for the old paths and walk therein." It will never cure the ill of mismated unions to make the abolishing of the marriage tie a simple matter of legislative action by a Provincial court. Rather will it eventuate in the other direction. Canada has the example of the United States before her eyes as a warning.

In the majority of cases divorce is sought as a preliminary to another marriage. When a union is once dissolved there is no reason why another should not be contracted, and the process repeated ad infinitum, until the sacred institution has entirely lost its divine character and becomes a purely "companionate" contract to be broken at will. The many happy marriage anniversaries of fifty years' standing celebrated by honest, God-fearing, decent folk who took seriously their vows "till death us do part," ought to inspire determination to maintain stability in marital relations. It is such as these who are the backbone of the country, such as these who enjoy "an old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night," and who provide a bulwark against the wave of immorality sweeping the world at this time.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Only a short time left to make guesses as to the United States election. It's all over to-morrow.

Governor Al Smith may not be particularly happy to-morrow night, but he has shown that the warrior part of it is not a misnomer.

The brown derby has been in the thick of the fighting. The Governor of New York has been able and willing to do his own battling.

Whatever the result to-morrow, it will be a high tariff victory. Mr. Hoover promises to increase protection to the farmers, and in his New York address Saturday night Governor Smith said there would be no general revision of the tariff were he successful.

The Question Box

T. N.—Q. What are Canada's coal resources?

A. Canada's coal resources as estimated are colossal in their total, viz. 414 billion metric tons of an actual reserve and 819 billion tons of a probable reserve, chief in Alberta. The annual coal production is steadily increasing, having reached in 1926 over 16,000,000 tons worth $60 000,000. Nova Scotia led with 6,747,477 tons and Alberta next with 6,503,705 tons. The coal industry is in a much better position than for several years past.

L.S.—Q. What are the chief facts regarding education in Canada?

A. The educational system of Canada has an enrolment of 2,228,000 enrolled in all schools and colleges. There are 23 universities with an enrolment of 50,000 and 85 colleges with 21,367 students. There are 62,394 public school teachers, eighty percent being women. Canada also has nearly a thousand libraries.

A.H.C.—Q. What are the exports of Canadian grain?

A. The total exports of wheat and wheat flour for the year ending July 1927 reached the high total of $409,654,715. Of this sales of wheat represented $348 237,878 and of wheat flour 9,257,824 barrels worth $61,416,-837. The wheat shipments amounted to 251,265,788 bushels of which 185,-345,710 bushels were sent to the United Kingdom, 58,295,512 bushels to other countries than the United States and 7,624,566 bushels to the U.S.

A Thought

REVENGE—AVENGE—VENGEANCE

The thoughtless or careless often misconstrue the meaning of these words— Revenge— Avenge— Vengeance.

Revenge is malicious injury in return for an injury or offense received. Revenge is retaliation and almost always an act of passion.

Revenge is the basest of all actions, for it is gratified only by inflicting pain without any prospect of advantage therefore, diametrically opposed to any real religion.

To avenge is to punish the offender and protect the helpless.

Injuries are revenged. Crimes are avenged.

Perhaps the next three paragraphs will more clearly expresse my meaning.

To revenge, is to punish for one's self.

To avenge, is to punish in behalf of another.

But how surely the conscience convicts, and how severly it punishes, and this may explain what is meant by that line: "Vengeance is mine..."

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press).—Owing to the Winnipeg wheat situation Saturday an easier feeling developed in the local cash market for wheat and prices were reduced 1⅛ cent per bushel. Manitoba No. 6. wheat sold at 38⅛c, and feed wheat at 33½c per bushel, ex-store. There was some demand for Canadian western oats and a sale of 150,000 bushels of No. 2 feed were made at 55⅛c per bushel, C.I.F., Quebec. Spot prices for Canadian western oats were steady.

The demand for spring and winter wheat flour was fair and values were firm.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the improved demand from United States buyers and a moderate amount of business was done. The local demand was fair and values were unchanged.

An active business was done in butter and the undertone to the market was firm. Receipts Saturday were 256 packages.

The local and export trade in cheese was fair and prices were well maintained.

The undertone to the market for fresh eggs continued firm owing to the good demand and the scarcity of supplies. Receipts were 1062 cases.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press).—Jolted by a straight-from-the-shoulder notice that Russia is not to be a buyer, wheat prices Saturday flattened out. The notice came as a decided surprise to wheat bulls who have recently been making capital of reports that large purchases of wheat for Russia would be witnessed.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1½c to 2c net lower, with corn ⅝c to ¾c off, oats showing ¼c to ½c, a ⅝c decline, and provisions varying from 2c set-back to a rise of 15c.

Almost from the outset, the wheat market Saturday was on the downgrade, and the finish was at but a small fraction from the day's bottom level of prices. An unusual lack of buying support developed early, and predictions Friday that Mr. Hoover's St. Louis address dealing with the agricultural situation would have a bullish influence appeared to have spent their force in advance. It was not, however, until explicit word come that Russia is in no need of wheat, and that contrary to current reports no purchases whatever of Canadian or other grain is in prospect that the market here began to plunge downward in earnest.

In this connection, U.S. official trade representatives of the Russian Government were out with a statement declaring that the wheat crop this year in Russia is satisfactory. Subsequent upsets in price were accelerated by execution of standing orders to let go of holdings at various fixed limits in order to stop losses. On top of such factors was knowledge that export demand Saturday for North American wheat was inconsequential, and that signs pointed to further enlargement to-day of figures on the United States wheat visible supply.

Under such circumstances, efforts to rally the market proved for at least the time, to be without practical result.

Corn and oats weakened with wheat. Forecasts of better weather for field work in the corn belt gave some advantage to the selling side of the corn market. Besides, corn export demand Saturday was less in evidence, although word was received that the Roumanian corn crop is officially estimated at 98,000,000 bushels, an amount 46,000,000 bushels under last year's total.

Provisions held steady, paralleling the hog market.

GOD'S MINUTE.

We trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of those that believe.—I Tim. 4:10.

Our God and Father, for the protecting care of the night we give Thee thanks. For the new day, a fee gift of Thine, with its message of renewal and tireless interest on the part of our Father, we give Thee thanks. Teach us anew with this new day the meaning of home, friendships, and opportunity to do our work for God and our fellowmen.

Set our faces in the right direction as we go out to live another day. Fortify us that we may not be overcome by any evil. Restrain us from any untoward tendencies. If the way grow dark, cause us to see Thy light. If loneliness should be our lot, let us be mindful of Thy companionship.

By Thy help may we add some joy to other lives, and live out this day with the blessed thought of having done something worth while.

And as the shadows of the evening creep over us we would again give thanks and commit ourselves anew to Him Who careth for all. We make our requests in the name of Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

GOVERNMENT URGES MORE TREE CULTURE THROUGHOUT DOMINION

James H. Neilson Writes Article Dealing With Information On This Subject.

MAKE PROVINCE BEAUTIFUL.

A strong plea is being made for the conservation and improvement of native nut trees in Canada, as well as the introduction of suitable species, such as the Japanese heart nut, from foreign countries, as these trees present great opportunities in making our own, as well as other Provinces, more productive and beautiful.

The Department of Agriculture, through its horticultural section and its representative, James H. Neilson, who is the extension horticulturist for Eastern Ontario, is urging this matter of nut culture in this Province, and in response to a demand for general information on the subject, Mr. Neilson has written the material which follows, under the above heading. A pamphlet on "Nut Culture in Ontario' is by the same author, and may be secured from the Department of Agriculture on request.

Among the happy recollections of youthful days none stands out more clearly than those associated with the pleasures of trips into fields and forest in search of nuts. These expeditions in quest of nuts were events of interest to old and young alike, and were looked forward to with joyous anticipation. What fun it was to tramp through the countryside looking for good nut trees, and having located these, to gather their delectable stores.

Some of the nuts were eaten on the spot, but, of course, the greater part were taken home and stored in the attic for winter use. During the long winter evenings these nuts were brought down, and helped to contribute to the pleasures of many an evenings entertainment

The opportunity to obtain supplies of good home-grown nuts for family use are becoming fewer as the years go by. This is due, partly, to natural depletion, and more largely to the cutting down of trees for timber purposes. What is equally to be deplored is the fact that very little has been done to replace these useful trees with other good nut-bearing kinds.

The general neglect of our nut flora was apparent to the writer even as a small boy, and was the cause of much regret that more attention had not been given to our useful nut trees. This situation generated a desire to do something to help save our nut trees, and extend their culture, so that the boys and girls of the future might enjoy some of the pleasures of nutting time Besides this, there was a vision of the possibilities of ultimately producing within our own borders a fair portion of the nuts we now import from various foreign countries.

After many years of patient waiting, an opportunity presented itself to work out the desire formed in boyhood days. In 1921 a definite plan of nut cultural studies was therefore outlined, and entered upon. This work was directed along four main lines, as follows: (1) A survey of Ontario to determine the distribution of the native and introduced kinds, and the location of the best individual trees of each species; (2) The improvement of the ordinary native species by top-working with scions of superior varieties; (3) Introduction of the best varieties of hardy species from foreign countries; (4) Educational work by means of lectures, press articles, and exhibitions of Canadian-grown nuts. Owing to pressure of other work and to the lack of a definite appropriation to cover nut cultural investigation, there has been comparatively little time available for this work. Notwithstanding these limitations, some valuable and interesting data has been obtained, particularly with reference to a number of species adapted to our climatic conditions.

The improvement of ordinary nut trees by grafting with scions of superior varieties offers interesting possibilities, and should be carried on to a much greater extent than has hitherto been done.

Plant introduction is also a promising field of work. As a result of work done largely by private effort some really excellent varieties of walnuts, chestnuts, hazel and hickories have been introduced. In this respect China, Japan and the northern United States are the countries from which the best material has so far been secured. The good results of individual effort would indicate that much greater and possibly better work could be done if an extensive scheme of introducing the hardy varieties from foreign lands were adopted.

Nut trees have a wide sphere of usefulness, and thus are more valuable than other more commonly planted trees. Their most important use is in the production of nuts, but they are also as valuable as ornamental, and as timber trees. The use of nuts as a food is increasing each year, and our imports are now said to be approximately $5,000,000.

Inasmuch as several valuable native and introduced species are found to do well in certain parts of Canada, it seems regrettable that a wider use is not made of these trees. There is room on farms in this country for several hundred thousand trees, and could also be planted without crowding other useful kinds. Granting that the best varieties of walnuts, hickories, hazels and chestnuts were planted in regions suited to their growth, and given fair attention, we could not only greatly improve the appearance of our country, but in a in towns and cities many thousands large measure meet out requirements millions of dollars which are now for nuts, and thus retain in Canada

The following selection from the writings of Edouard Andre is especially applicable to the idea of planting nut trees, and is given to the reader with the hope that this beautiful message may be an inspiration:

"Beautify then the place that was your cradle, or that of your children. Think at the same time both of your own happiness, of that of your family, and of those who live in your shadow. Know that in making your own home beautiful you are adding to the beauty and wealth of your country, by making the landscape more beautiful, and causing it to be admired by other peoples. Praised and honored by your fellow-citizens, justly renowned from afar, blessed by your children, you will have journeyed onward doing good, and deserving that that to your memory be applied these beautiful words that I could scarcely believe finding written in a poor little village in Spanish America: 'The just die in their turn; but falling as the flowers, they leave on earth their fruit that outlives them.'

Locally, as far as can be learned, only one citizen has as yet tried raising the Japanese heartnut, Mr. Charles Thorndyke having a dozen or more seedlings on his grounds, all of which are doing well. The nuts used for planting were secured from Mr. Neilson, and no trouble has been experienced in promoting growth. At present the trees are only of bush height, but give promise of growing true to type, and of attaining rapid progress, which is a characteristic of these trees.

Rapid growth, early and heavy bearing, and marked beauty of form and foliage are listed as inducements to cultivate the heartnut. The nuts are heart-shaped, thin-shelled, and crack easily, the kernel being of good quality and resembling the butternut in flavor.

Black walnut trees grown on the lawns in this vicinity are not so rare as the heartnuts. Several years ago the late Alfred Leach planted a number, and when they were large enough gave a quantity of them away. Mr. Thorndyke has two on his lawn, and they are to be seen on several farms in the surrounding countryside. "Walnut Farm" designates Edmund Dawson's farm, at Bailleboro, because of the trees of this family which outline his property along the highway.

The nuts are said to be rather strong in flavor, dark in color, but if put through the food chopper may be used satisfactorily for culinary purposes.

YOUNG WOMEN HEAR INSPIRING ADDRESS

Mrs. J. Forbes Allan Speaks at Knox Mission Circle Thank offering.

The young ladies of Knox United Church Mission Circle held their autumn thank-offering service on Friday evening with many representatives from the various United Church circles of the city in attendance. A program of more than usual interest was given with Mrs. Williamson, the president, presiding.

The opening devotional service consisted of inspiring missionary hymns, a scripture lesson, read by Miss Morrison, and earnest prayer led by Mrs. W. Watt, president of the W.M.S.

A devotional leaflet, "Our Possessions" was effectively ready by Mrs. Clegg.

The thank-offering was received and Mrs. Morrison offered the dedicatory prayer.

The chief feature of the meeting was the splendid address of Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, who carried her audience in unbroken interest to it's conclusion.

Mrs. Allan based her remarks upon the prayer in the twentieth chapter of Jeremiah.

"Sometimes we become discouraged in our work, but this passage is an inspiration to us, for if ever a man met with opposition it was Jeremiah. He was called when but a boy to be a prophet. His natural timidity was overcome by the force of his call. He warned his people of an impending catastrophe, but they called him a fanatic and would not listen to his words. His heart saddened and sometimes well nigh broke. Doubts of his call flooded his soul and many times he was tempted to give up his task but always a light from within held him to his work.

Needed In This Age

"In this great age of materialism we need to sound just such a note of idealism as Jeremiah did. In doing this we are sure to run counter to those around us. Christ's success spelled failure in a worldly sense. The church which is true to its ideals is bound to incur hostility. But, if necessary, let us be fools—for Christ's sake.

"Jeremiah's greatness does not lie in the fact that he attracted great crowds, for he did not, but in his fearlessness and in the greatness and the heroism of his stand for Christ. We, too, must take a definite stand, on one side or the other—there is no half-way course. We must labor, and labor hard not only for to-day, but for all the to-morrows.

"The question is often discussed as to whether or not the church has failed in her mission. The church can never fail—it is only her members who do not keep up to the standard. Let us learn to put all trivial and unwholesome things out of our lives. Christ gave of his best for us. Let us do as much in return,—we, sometimes only give Him our second best. We must try to recatch the wonder in the heart of a little child and come back to the simple things in life."

Best in Her Home

"At home, a woman should be at her best, but her life will be enriched by outside interests. Sometimes when we will not step out of our home circle, God compels us.

"Many women have made their influence felt over a wide circle. Florence Nightingale, a cultured woman, when she went to the relief of the soldiers in the Crimean War, was held up to ridicule. But when she returned home, she was acclaimed not only by the soldiers, but by all the people. She was granted a large sum of money, and she it was, who founded the Victoria Order of Nurses.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning, a delicate woman, practically an invalid, by the power of her pen led to great reforms in child labour by her poem: "The Cry of the Children." Many other examples of the great work done by women could be cited, such as that of Mrs. Bramwell Booth and Elizabeth Fry."

Make Use of Our Talents

"We should make use of our talents in our own W.M.S. meetings. A society that can teach its members to pray is performing a great ministry.

WOMAN SO NERVOUS COULD NOT SLEEP

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Masson, Que.—"I was very nervous, so nervous that sleep was almost impossible and I was all run-down. I saw your ad in the paper and have taken eleven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could not wish to feel better than I do, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. Delphine Laframboise, Masson, Quebec.

New Carlisle, Que.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a run-down system and it helped me. My nerves are better and I have a good appetite now. The Vegetable Compound has been of great benefit to me and I will answer letters from women asking about it."—Mrs. Willie Buttle, Jr., New Carlisle, Quebec.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

RINGWORM

It has been estimated that practically one half of the adult population of the United States has had ringworm sometime during life. This is a popular name for several diseases of the skin caused by small vegetable fungi or molds.

All forms of ringworm are very contagious and are easily transmitted from one person to another. These diseases are frequently found on cats, dogs, cattle, and birds, and are sometimes conveyed, by handling, to humans.

The ringworm of the foot is a frequent occurrence wherever people use common dressing and bathing rooms. Infected premises should be thoroughly scrubbed with some powerful disinfecting agent. Ringworm of the body is easily cured by the use of a cleansing diet to clear up the condition of acidosis which is always present and painting the infected area night and morning with a solution of silver nitrate, iodine or mercurochrome.

Ringworm of the body usually begins with a small patch which spreads out in a circle, with a red, scaly margin. The skin toward the center of the patch may have partly recovered and appear normal. This gives the disease its characteristic ring-like form.

Persons with thin, light hair are much more susceptible to ringworm of the scalp than are brunettes. This form of the disease usually only occurs to children under the age of fourteen, and is frequently carried from one child to another by combs, brushes, and hats.

Ringworm of the beard, or barber's itch, is frequently conveyed by means of the common lather brush used in barber shops. Many Boards of Health now insist on a thorough sterilization of all brushes and utensils used in barber shops. This ringworm of the beard produces great irritation, and each hair is surrounded by a small capsule of pus.

The fingernails are sometimes attacked by ringworm parasites and become discolored, thin and brittle. When this parasite attacks scalp, beard and nails, it is much harder to eradicate than when the body is attacked, and a course of many months or years of treatment may be necessary. The hair should be cut short and the affected area treated carefully.

Only those children who have been fed on improper combinations develop ringworm. In the rare cases where close physical contact with another child suffering from ringworm produces the disease, the ringworm on the child with healthy blood usually quickly disappears.

Unless the systemic condition is removed by diet, the disease, although cured in one place, will usually reappear in another.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Cold Hands and Feet.

Question: Mrs. I. A. asks: "Could you please tell me what causes cold hands and feet? My hands and feet are cold in even the warmest part of the summer. Is there a cure for this?"

Answer: You undoubtedly suffer from defective circulation. I would advise you to take additional exercise, especially systematic calisthenic exercises for all of the muscles of the body. This, of course, increases the flow of blood to the extremities, and should overcome your tendency to cold hands and feet.

Orange Juice Before Breakfast.

Question: Mrs. B. V. writes: "My child who is just of school age likes orange juice every morning. Is it best to put a little sugar and water into it, and how long should she have it before milk and cereal?"

Answer: It is all right to take pure orange juice a half hour before breakfast, but no sugar or water should be added. Use only whole grain cereal and season it with cream—and again, no sugar!

Tapeworm and Obesity.

Question: Mrs. F. C. H asks: "Is it possible for a person weighing 218 pounds to have a tapeworm? I have noticed for some time worms in the stool, and recently passed one fourteen inches long. It was flat and white in color, and was in sections about one inch apart. Can you advise me about this?"

Answer: It is possible for a person who is overweight to have a tapeworm. If you eat enough you can feed both yourself and the tapeworm. Any druggist will be able to recommend a tapeworm remedy for you. After you get rid of the worm, be careful about using meats which are imperfectly cooked.

TOOK THE HEART OUT OF HIM

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Restored Vim and Vigour.

What a blessing "Fruit-a-tives" proves to those worn out and weary by the day's work. A blood purifier, a builder of health and strength, this marvellous medicine, made of an extract from fruit juices, combined with the finest medicinal ingredients, is just what is needed to regulate bowels, kidneys and skin—sharpen the appetite—steady the nerves—and restore the whole system to its former vigour and vitality. As Mr. John O. Ringheim, Wynndel, B.C., writes: "My nerves were completely gone and I was so tired out and rundown that work seemed impossible. Since taking "Fruit-a-tives" I am eager to work and life is worth living again."

One cannot realize, until he has gone through the mill, how fine it is to be well again. I owe my present good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Try it. 25c. and 50c. a box—at dealers everywhere.

Nothing matters but that we are sincere. We must lose self-consciousness and get God-consciousness.

"Is our religion strong and robust enough to stand up against obstacles?" asked the speaker. "Could we burn at the stake as did our Scotch ancestors? Our religion is made too easy. There is an attempt to turn out standard souls.

"John Ruskin says a nation takes its ideals from its women. We must create a more intense longing for the things pertaining to God. It is strange that while we have so many mechanical time-savers, we have less time than ever.

"Missionary work is a direct command from God. No one who has seen the immigrants on a steamer bound for our country can doubt the need for either Home or Foreign Missions. A missionary church is always a strong church. There is great need for unselfish leadership in our work."

In closing, Mrs. Allan recommended John Onenham's poems as an inspiration to anyone interested in missionary work and read one of her favourite selections from his works.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Allan for her very inspiring address. Mrs. Spicer then sang very sweetly, "Ever at Rest" after which Rev. M. McDonald closed the meeting with the benediction.

GOVERNMENT OF RUMANIA HAS RESIGNED

Whole Country Thrown Into Political Dilemna By Action of Regency.

TITULESCU RETURNS.

Developments Favor a Peasant Government Led By Maniu.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press.)— The political dilemna into which the Regency plunged when it forced the resignation of the government headed by Premier Vintilla Bratianu to-day depended for solution upon the return of Nicholas Titulescu, former Foreign Minister. Titulescu, who became Minitser to London on his withdrawal from the Bratianu government, is neutral politically. He will arrive in Bucharest either to-morrow or Wednesday. No action will be taken until then by the three Regents, Prince Nicholas, uncle of young King Michael, G. Buzdugan, former president of the Supreme Court, and Miron Cristea, patriarch of Rumania.

The belief was expressed in some quarters that the Regency might ask Titulescu to form a coalition government in an attempt to placate all parties and to carry through the projected stabilization loan of $250,000,000, part of which was expected to be absorbed in the United States. Titulescu's friends said that he would almost certainly decline such a task, as the life of such a government would be short.

Developments appear to favor the peasant government led by Julia Maniu as the successors to the powerful capitalistic Bratianu regime which has held sway for half a century with only brief interruptions.

CHIEF JUSTICE ASKS OTTAWA TO AMEND CODE

Change Law To Prevent Police Shooting Fleeing Suspects.

CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Justice Meredith Would End Use of Revolvers as a "Necessary Force."

TORONTO, Nov. 5.— Death from flying police bullets will no longer be one of the hazards common to fleeing suspects if Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, adopts representations made to him from no less impressive a source than Hon. R. M. Meredith, Chief Justice of the High Court division of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Only about three months ago William Dinnen, a Toronto constable, shot and killed Albert Samson, an escaping suspect.

Also recently a Quebec constable shot and killed a construction worker whose only offense was the violation of a provincial enactment.

Assize court juries have since upheld the constables who committed these killings, but they have failed to convince the Chief Justice that the deaths were merited. In fact, Hon. Mr. Meredith seeks to make their recurrence impossible. To this end he has written to Ottawa urging an amendment to the Criminal Code which will put an effective curb upon police bullets.

"Like a Fleeing Rat."

The aim of His Lordship is to rectify the situation whereby "an unresisting, unarmed, fleeing person, who is merely suspected of having been guilty of some petty offence and who does not want to spend the night in police cells, may be shot down and killed as if a fleeing rat or other vermin."

The effect of the Chief Justice's representations would be to remove the revolver from the category of the "necessary force" which a police officer may use to prevent escape. The argument by which the Chief Justice supports the restriction is two-fold; it is claimed primarily that the revolver defeats the purpose of bringing the criminal to justice, since a dead body cannot be tried; and emphasis is also laid upon the right of a man to claim his life to its last merited moment for the salvation of his soul.

SHOCKING TO PESTS

LONDON, Nov. 5.—A new electrically charged plow is claimed to be death to pests and a boon to crops. Experiments show that as the two blades of the plow pass through the soil, an electrical field is created, which kills insects and weeds and puts nitrogen into the soil.

Vinegar will remove most stains from the hands.

MUSIC CLUB HONORS LIFE OF SCHUBERT

Hundredth Anniversary of the Death of Masterly Musician is Commemorated By Members.

The Women's Music Club held their regular meeting on Friday afternoon in the Conservatory of Music, when the life and works of Franz Schubert were given in a splendid program arranged by Mrs. J. Forbes Allan.

The rooms were filled with a large attendance of members and visitors. The president, Miss Mabel Clarry, in her opening words referred to the hundredth anniversary of the death of Schubert and that all over the world this anniversary was being commemorated.

The program was opened with the Austrian national anthem, played by Mrs. Logan, after which Mrs. Allan gave a most intimate and detailed talk on Schubert, which was most instructive and brought to her hearers a knowledge of the wonderful gift of melody possessed by the master musician

Miss Margaret Dickson sang "Du Bist Die Ruhe" and "The Troret" by Schubert, while Maurice Park sang "Angel of Beauty," Schubert. Both singers gave very fine interpretation of these beautiful songs.

Miss Glady Renouf, a recent addition to the staff of the Conservatory of Music gave two very fine piano numbers, "Hark, Hark the Lark" and "Impromptu" in Ab by Schubert.

Miss Clarry announced the visit of Dr. Ernest MacMillan of the Toronto Conservatory of Music on Tuesday afternoon, November 13th. He will speak on "Amatuer and Professional Points of View in Music."

BANS BEGGING

JERUSALEM, Nov. 5.—The council of the Jerusalem Jewish Community is planning to stop begging in the Holy City. More than 1000 persons who have gained a livelihood through alms obtained in the immediate vicinity of the Wailing Wall, will be forced to go to work.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

NOT PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The editorial in to-day's (Monday's) Globe opposing or at any rate mildly criticising my article in the local "The Fortnightly" on Hydro in Eastern Ontario and upon the prevalence of drunkenness, ought to be replied to before the next issue of The Fortnightly ten days hence. If you will allow me, therefore, I will say in answer to The Globe that Hydro in Eastern Ontario is not a public ownership as in Western Ontario, but government ownership, which is just as inefficient and undesirable as public ownership (municipal ownership) is desirable. Government ownership has been formed in Eastern Ontario simply to block us up tight, as Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., has so vigorously proved, and we want a change. Although we have democratic government no one expects the people to protect itself or to do anything worth while in a crisis like this, because the people do not know. The majority which elects members depends upon those members and has no idea in the world how to do what is best for itself. If a district has poor members it soon becomes a poor district and therefore it is for our representatives and our government to do (and here the Globe is right) justice to these cases.

Regarding "liquor" it is no commendation that Ontario hoped to make money out of selling whiskey and not selling so much as hoped there is a deficit. That kind of government has mistaken its vocation. Liquor selling is a method of control, not of money-making. It is a side issue and should be treated as such. The minute it is stressed as a branch of industry "good night" to it. The repressionists will once more come to the fore.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States, where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage, to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland he meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But, after he realizes that he really loves her, he finds out that she is a cousin of the JULIE FARROW whom his brother loved. He tells her the truth—of his mistake, and that, because of his marriage, he cannot marry her. He meets her later in London, to find that she is leading a wild, gay life, and is apparently heartless. One night Julie meets an older man, whose wife has recently died, named SCHOFIELD. He has just inherited a good deal of money. He decides he wants to marry Julie. Chittenham meets the other Julie, and goes to see her.

The silence of the room was unbroken. Julie was sitting forward now, the firelight playing on her beautiful face and golden brown hair, and her eyes were raised rather pathetically to Chittenham's face.

"I don't look like it, do I?" she queried whimsically. "But it's true all the same. I don't in the least know why I'm telling you, of all people. We've never met until tonight, and I've always been horribly afraid of you in my mind. Rodney—poor Rodney—used to hold you up as such a paragon of all the virtues! But now we have met I'm not a bit afraid. There's something about you—" She broke off, to resume again after a moment: "Well, that's that! I've got to die. It's quite signed and sealed, with no hope of a reprieve. I won't bore you with the details. I've been to every specialist in London who would take my money, and they all say the same thing. There could be an operation, but I won't have it. I hate the idea of the knife, especially as it can't be a cure—but only just a way of prolonging life for a little while. I don't think I want to prolong it, either. It's not been such fun when one looks back."

"What are you going to do, then?"

"I'm going abroad. Hunter—that's my maid—she's the most faithful friend I've ever had—will come with me. She knows all about me—all about what's the matter with me and everything. So we're going right away to hide ourselves till it's over." She shivered a little, but almost at once she smiled again. "I couldn't bear the idea of dying here in London where so many people know me. I couldn't bear the idea of a nursing home and people bringing flowers and being left [illegible] and columns in the papers, and photographs—so I'm going right away where I shan't know anyone, and nobody will know me. What do you think of it, Mr. Chittenham?"

"I think you are a very brave woman," Giles said, and suddenly he leant down and took her hand.

To his surprise the tears welled up into her eyes and splashed on to her frock.

"That's foolish of me, isn't it?" she said. "And they're not because I'm frightened, these tears! It's just because the way you took hold of my hand reminded me of someone"—she drew a hard breath as if of pain—"someone I really loved. There was a man I once really loved, Mr. Chittenham."

"I am sure there was."

"He died." Julie sat very still for a moment, then she gently drew her hand away. "That finished me, in the same way that something of the kind has finished the other Julie too. He died, and then it was as if I died too, all that was best of me at least, and all the hateful, rotten part lived on! My cousin Julie is like that now! It must be in the family. Perhaps you don't know her well enough to see it, or recognize it, but I do! I knew directly she came home from Switzerland. We've never been great friends—I told you she didn't approve of me—but the day after she came home—about six weeks ago, I suppose it must be, or more—she came to see me, and she said: 'I want to ask your pardon for all the hard things I've said to you and thought of you. You've been right and I've been wrong all the time. It's no use trying to be good—it's no use trying to lead a decent life. The only way is to get every ounce of pleasure possible, never mind at whose expense. That's what I'm going to do in future!'—that's what she said."

"And what did you say?"

"I said: 'You poor little fool! There's no man in all the world worth breaking your heart over.' She wouldn't admit anything, of course, but I knew." Julie laughed softly. "Isn't it strange? A few hours ago you and I had never met, and yet now we're sitting here together and I'm telling you things I would not tell to any other breathing soul."

"I'm glad."

"I'm glad too. It makes life—or death—seem less lonely somehow. And you'll never tell anyone else, Giles? It seems as if I ought to call you by your Christian name. I've heard it from Rodney so often."

"Please do."

She rose from her chair and came to stand beside him.

"I suppose you ought to go."

"I'm sorry. I've stayed too long."

"No. I wanted to talk to you. And now there is something I want to ask you—something I want you to do for me."

"Of course, if I can."

"Will you be kind to Julie—the other Julie? I'm so sorry for her. I know just what she's going through. I've been through it all myself, you see. And I think you could help her. You're the sort of man who understands. If you'll just be friends with her—"

Giles tried to answer, but no words would come, and Julie went on.

"I don't expect you and I will ever meet again. I'm leaving London next week. Nobody knows. We're just going to slip quietly away without any fuss, but if you could just promise me this—" She laughed a little. "I don't know why I'm asking you. I hardly know you, and I've never cared very much about Julie! Perhaps it's just sentiment—perhaps it's a sort of swan song!"

"I'll do anything I can, but—"

"She's got amongst a horrible set of people," Julie said. "Not really vicious people, but silly and worthless! They do such silly things. I know, because I've done them all myself. They'll make her drink too much, and swear, and sit up all night—and she's not that sort! She won't be able to bear it as well as I used to. I saw her the other night. She's got hold of a new friend—"

"You mean Schofield? He's not a bad fellow."

"No. It's a girl—a common little American."

"American?"

"Yes—a girl named Sadie Barrow. Why, do you know her?" For Giles had made a sudden convulsive movement.

"No—yes—at least—no, I don't know her."

Not know her? Sadie Barrow—his own wife!

So Sadie had come to London without acquainting him of the fact. Giles Chittenham felt cold with anger.

His own cynical doctrine to Rodney, months ago, had been the correct one. Women were the very devil, and he, who had boasted of his immunity, had twice proved the truth of his own words.

In his relationship with his wife, and also with Julie Farrow, he had forged a double chain about his neck which would not easily, if ever, be broken.

How the devil must be laughing at this successful double-cross which had not only brought Sadie to England when he least wished to see her, but had thrown her across Julie's path.

What had made her suddenly change her plans and come to London? She had spoken of staying for several months on the Continent. But that was like Sadie; she changed her mind very nearly as often as she changed her clothes.

Perhaps some sudden freak had made her desire to see what he was doing; perhaps, even, she might have heard something about Switzerland.

Well, no matter, anyway; things were so bad already that nothing could greatly add to his burden.

Confound all women, Chittenham thought; then he looked again at the one sitting crouching in the chair before him.

All her gay insouciance seemed to have deserted her; she was just a sick woman facing as bravely as might be the dread future.

He stooped impulsively towards her and took her hand.

"I should like to be your friend too, if I may. I should like to be able to help you."

She looked up with grateful eyes.

"I am sure you would, but you can't. At least the only thing you can do for me is to forget everything I have told you tonight."

"It is forgotten already."

"Thank you, and—Giles—"

"Yes."

"I was never quite so wicked as people have made out. It was not my fault about—Rodney. I told him so many times it was useless; he was only a boy compared with me—a spoilt, weak boy."

"I am afraid he was."

"So don't think too badly of me." She drew her hand gently away. "And, now—please go. I'm so tired."

Goodbye, then—"

She shivered a little.

"I hate that word. As a rule I never let people say it to me, but this time—well, it really is goodbye."

She did not look at him or rise from her chair, and Giles walked reluctantly to the door, pausing when he reached it to look back. It seemed horrible to leave her like that—alone; horrible to think that of all the friends and lovers she had known there was not one to stand by her now and hold her hand as she went through the dark valley lying before her.

Impulsively he spoke her name.

"Julie—if there is anything in the world I can do—"

He felt almost as if he were responsible for her; as if she were some sacred trust left to him by his brother.

She answered without turning her head.

"Please go, that's all," and without another word he turned and went out.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as one of the rarely lucky days in the calendar of the year, for many benefic aspects prevail.

For persons who occupy positions in the Sun the greatest good fortune is indicated and this includes constructive work of great importance to the nation.

Jupiter is in a place read as favorable to business and to the general good of the people.

There is a sign supposed to threaten some sort of last minute newspaper boomerang on election day when the vote will be much heavier than it has been in recent national contests for power.

Neptune is in an aspect menacing and uncertain in its trend, but the stars are read as presaging a period of tremendous national development.

The evening is like the earlier hours of the day, most auspicious for men who have attained success and have won public confidence.

Whatever pertains to oil, mineral waters and even to tonics or other distillations of alcoholic content is today under a sway presaging changes that disturb existing conditions.

Education now assumes a place of even more importance than in the past, for methods are to change radically.

The public is to be instructed as never before in ideas making for real progressive development, the seers prophesy.

New demands for entertainment will cause the introduction of many novel amusements in the coming winter, it is foretold.

Men and women will continue to avoid the sort of thinking that leads them to face unpleasant facts, astrologers foretell and for this reason there will be continued longing for diversion.

Honors for women are indicated at this time when new leaders are to be recognized.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year that should be beneficial to health and pocketbook. Retirement to pleasant resorts or resting-places is indicated for persons past middle age.

Children born on this day probably will be happy in finding just the right riches in life. The subjects of this sign of Scorpio are often devoted to humanity and able to render great service to the human race.

LYRICS OF LIFE

BABY SHOES.

Baby shoes are little shoes,
For baby feet are small,
Baby shoes, such tiny shoes
They're hardly shoes at all.
Baby shoes are quiet shoes,
Their tread you hardly hear;
But there's not another sound
As sweet to Mother's ear

Baby's feet have learned to walk
And Baby's feet to run,
Baby's feet have found the world,
Their journey just begun.
Farther, farther, Baby goes,
And longer, longer, stays,
But her feet will never turn
Back to baby days.

Older, older, Baby grows;
Fast the moments fly:
Guide her guard her, down the path
To the bye-and-bye.
Sometime, with another joy,
You will sit and muse,
And will show another babe
Her mother's baby shoes.

Remove the Film: Teeth Grow Whiter

You merely think your teeth are dull, "off color." The new dental way amazes — it combats serious tooth and gum disorders, too

MOVE your tongue over your teeth. You will feel a slippery coating. This is film. Film is the great enemy of teeth and gums—the chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of most tooth and gum disorders. Film absorbs the stains from food and smoking and gives that cloudy look. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

To remove film use the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film and easily remove it in gentle safety to enamel.

Get Pepsodent at any drug counter or write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 191 George St., Toronto 2, Ont., Canada.

Pepsodent could be sold for less. But it would not embody the costly agents for which science recommends it.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CLIMBING CABBAGE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy said to Uncle Wiggily:

"I wish, while you are out adventuring today you would get a large cabbage, I want to make a shortcake for Sunday."

"You shall have the largest cabbage I can find," promised the rabbit gentleman. "And I will take the wheelbarrow with me to bring it home. For I may find a cabbage so large I can not carry it."

So pushing in front of him the wheelbarrow, Uncle Wiggily hopped over the fields and through the woods looking for an adventure and also for a large cabbage so Nurse Jane could make a shortcake.

All of a sudden Uncle Wiggily heard a voice calling:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"I hope that isn't one of the Bad Chaps trying to play a trick on me," thought Mr. Longears. "I'll just take a peek before I go too close."

The voice came over the top of a little hill and, leaving his wheelbarrow out of sight, Mr. Longears crept on his paws and knees until he could look down. At the foot of the hill was a little brook which, now that the weather was cold, had frozen over.

On the ice stood Jackie Bow Bow, one of the puppy dogs, and Jackie was barking:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "Why do you stand on the cold ice, barking for help? Come off the ice!"

"I can't!" whined Jackie. "I walked on it to see if it was safe to go skating, but it wasn't and one of my paws broke through and I can't pull it out. I'm frozen fast, I guess."

"I'll help you out," said Uncle Wiggily kindly. Going to the edge of the frozen brook he saw that Jackie's paw was caught under the edge of the hole in the ice. It wasn't frozen fast, but might become so if the little dog stayed there too long.

With a pole, as he stood on the bank,

It was easy pushing the wheelbarrow.

Uncle Wiggily broke the ice around Jackie's paw and then the little puppy dog boy could pull out his leg and run home, which he did, after thanking Uncle Wiggily.

"Run fast!" said Mr. Longears, "so you will feel warm and not catch cold." So Jackie ran very fast. And after this adventure Uncle Wiggily hopped on, pushing his wheelbarrow until he came to a farmer's field. The farmer was kind and had left some cabbages out for the rabbit gentleman to take.

"Here is a fine large one," said Mr. Longears and after some hard work he boosted the big cabbage up on the barrow and started to wheel it to his hollow stump bungalow for Nurse Jane to make a shortcake.

All went well until Uncle Wiggily reached the top of the hill where he had seen Jackie caught in the ice. It was hard work pushing the wheel-barrow load of cabbage up the hill.

"But it will be so easy going down hill that I shall not mind it," said Mr. Longears.

Well, it was very easy pushing the wheelbarrow and cabbage down hill. It was so easy it was no work at all, and after a while Uncle Wiggily had to run to keep up with the load. Faster and faster the rabbit gentleman had to hop, skip and jump, for the wheelbarrow was trying to run away from him and then, all of a sudden, he struck a stone. Up in the air bounced the cabbage and then it began rolling down hill all by itself.

"Whoa! Stop! Whoa!" called Uncle Wiggily. But the cabbage, not being a horse, didn't stop. On it went rolling faster and faster down hill and Uncle Wiggily ran after it.

There was a turn in the hill and, once around that, the cabbage was out of sight. But still Uncle Wiggily ran on and soon he was at the bottom of the hill. He knew the cabbage must have come to a stop here, but, as he looked around, he could not see it. He saw Mr. Twistytail, the pig gentleman, sitting on a stone at the foot of the hill.

"Did you see my runaway cabbage, Mr. Twistytail?" asked the rabbit.

"Yes," grunted the pig gentleman. "I did. It climbed that tree," and he pointed to one with a slanting trunk that was like a hill.

"A climbing cabbage! Impossible!" laughed Mr. Longears.

"But it is so, I tell you!" grunted the pig. "Your cabbage rolled down here and then it rolled up the big trunk of the slanting tree and it's up in that tree now."

And, surely enough the climbing cabbage was up in a Y-shaped part of the tree where it had climbed. Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Twistytail soon had it down and took it home and Nurse Jane made the cake. It was the first climbing cabbage the rabbit gentleman ever saw.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE WASTEFUL

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Carelessness, indifference and laziness are probably the chief factors in waste. It requires effort, care and the expenditure of energy to conserve. Most people use up their stock of energy in a sort of hand to mouth existence which leaves them no inclination to conserve what gains they have made. A team or an army may be too tired to celebrate its victory.

Wastefulness is a habit, a disposition. It has very little to do with the amount of money a man has. Some of the richest men are the most thrifty and some of the poorest are the most wasteful.

In some the desire to show off leads to wasteful habits. Now and then you run across a smart alec who lights a cigar with a ten dollar bill. This shows a childish state of mind.

Wastefulness is an ancient practice. The Roman emperors went so far in their wasteful extravagance as to feed their horses gilded oats. Certain types of wasteful acts put you in a class by yourself. It isn't everyone that can afford to feed gilded oats to his horses. Very few can afford to buy horses fast enough to feed them such oats.

Sometimes we are wasteful out of fear of being regarded as tightwads. We prefer to appear generous. Wastefulness in this sense is generosity gone to seed.

Ignorance of the values involved often leads to waste. A little here and a little there is looked upon as a trifle, but it all counts up.

We are prodigal not only with our money substance, but more ruinously wasteful are we with our time which is the stuff of life and more precious than gold.

Of course it is a lot easier to waste what does not belong to you. Why take pains with conserving the property at the expenditure of energy when the loss does not hurt you? If people are so careless and wasteful with their own things we can't very well expect them to be over-careful with what does not belong to them.

We are wasteful to show off, to avoid the charge of being a tightwad, and to save ourselves the trouble of looking after things too closely. The time and energy that we save by our careless habits often pay. Wastefulness is not an unmixed evil.

Why Do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson, write him care of this paper, and send stamped addressed envelope for reply.

A SOUND LESS WHISTLE

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Police of this city now have whistles with which they may summon help without making an audible sound. The notes are pitched so high that the ear cannot detect them. But concealed microphones get the signals, in Morse code, and flash the message to police headquarters, where flying squads are always ready to dash to the scene.

LITERARY SOCIETY MEETS IN SCHOOL

Fifth Form Supplies Program at Regular Meeting of Literary Society.

Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5.— Fifth Form was responsible for the program at the regular meeting of the High School Literary Society held in the auditorium of the school on Friday afternoon. The usual business was dealt with before proceeding with the regular order of the program. Miss Isabelle Bygott was elected assistant pianist for the remainder of the year. An orchestra selection was the first number on the program by the fifth form orchestra, Ralph Sperry, piano, Eric Douglas, banjo, Franklin Linton, violin, and Thornton Ibey, drums. Their opening number was "My Ohio Home." As an encore they played, "Laugh Clown Laugh." Later in the program there was a second number by the orchestra and an encore.

Miss Muriel Kingston brought the students well up to the times with her sketch of the current events. This is always an interesting and effective number on the literary society program. Miss Mary Magregor and Miss Hilda Jones, Hastings, played piano solos. Thelma Hall's biographical sketch of Pauline Johnston and Marion Comrie's recitation of Pauline Johnson's poem, "The Pilot of the Plains," were greatly appreciated. A similar sketch of Dr. Drummond and his poem, "Blase," by Miss Dorothy Barnum and Miss Enid Richardson, respectively, were extremely interesting. "Little Baptiste," another of Dr. Drummond's poems, was recited by Miss Kathleen Crosson. After hearing the Critic's report (Lawrence Marriott) the meeting closed with the national anthem.

MISSIONARY SERVICE

gotten into a great tangle with foreign nations for which both the foreigner and the Chinese are to blame. We must give them whatever help we can in this day of their need or our work in the future will be made more difficult.

The people of China are meeting what England had to face many years ago. All the Communistic and Socialistic ideas abroad in the world are today being flooded in upon the Chinese. It is hard for them to find the way and easy to miss it. The Chinese have a new Bible of their own which is being given pre-eminence, the ideal in many respects is all right but the outline of the way to reach the ideal is a terrible failure. There is a moral and religious crisis in China to-day. The students of China say they worship nothing. They are turning to agnosticism and this constitutes the church's greatest problem. The Christian schools are educating and sending out men and women who are meeting the arguments of the Chinese scholars, and in time will offset the anti-Christian campaign that has been widely carried on throughout the country.

Opium Great Evil

The great evils of China are the use of opium, child disease, insanity, blindness and poverty. Poverty is in the extreme. The Christian church has a tremendous task in China, said the speaker in closing. The moral and social life of the people, their all-round need of God is a challenge to every man and woman who knows the way of life as it is in Jesus Christ.

Mr. Washington very briefly summed up the situation for the local church congregation by a reference to the story of "The Good Samaritan" and said the church is doing a great work and could do much more as the way is wide open. What is needed is people who will stand loyally behind the church in her effort to do God's will in the world. He said, "Let us become interested and then put our shoulders under the task in an earnest way and the work will be done."

The meeting was in charge of Rev. J. F. Everson, pastor of the church.

to worship therefore we ought to stress the worship idea and cause it to meet the expectations of those who attend. The church is the only institution that stands for religion. Make your meetings religious and worshipful, said the speaker. Young people can receive much help from working in co-operation with other ones and older people can benefit from mingling with the young.

In closing Mr. Doyle referred to his experiences this fall when travelling through the West with Dr. Henry Carter, of England and stated that the outlook for the church so far as its young people are concerned never was brighter.

Evening Service

In the evening the newly elected officers were installed by Rev. J. J. David, secretary of the Lindsay Presbytery, who in a neat speech gave assurance of help from every worker in the church and told the officers something of what was expected from them that the work for which they had assumed responsibility might be a success.

Rev. Merrit Price, of Coboconk, gave an address on, "Good Sportsmanship" in which he used illustrations from the ball field, football, hockey and various sports to show that success could only be expected in any sphere when the game was played according to the rules. Obedience to the rules and a careful observance of them would teach many lessons that applied to life if one is to count for the most and serve his day and generation.

Rev. R. R. Nicholson, of Cannington, who was scheduled for an address on "Evangelism" was unable to be present on account of illness.

The convention next fall is to be held in Fenelon Falls, United Church.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—In spite of weather that made motoring anything but a pleasure, approximately fifteen rugby fans from Campbellford motored to Kingston to see McGill down Queen's to the tune of eight to two.

There was only one permanent business to open its doors for the first time here Saturday, but before the day was many hours old, three temporary places of business were doing considerable trade. The Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church held their annual rummage sale in the sample rooms, Bridge street, and scored a decided success. Next door was an attraction of a different nature. The ladies of St. Stephen's United Church, Hoards, were open for business with home cooking and allied articles for sale. Afternoon tea was served to shoppers who felt so inclined. On Front street, in the property lately known as Queen's Hotel, the young ladies' mission circle of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church sold home cooking, fancy work, and all the other articles that comprise a bazaar. They also served afternoon tea and did a capacity business.

P.C.I. SENIORS TO PLAY-OFF WITH OSHAWA

COLLEGIATE TEAM WHITEWASH COBOURG 22-0 ON SATURDAY

Victors To Play Off With Oshawa H. S. To Decide Group Winner.

FORCE THE PLAY.

Gains Made On Line Plunges—Game Free From Fumbles.

Coach Browne's P.C.I. senior rugby team again demonstrated their ability and superiority when they whitewashed the Cobourg C.I. twelve 22 to 0 in their game in the interscholastic series of the O.R.F.U., played at James Stevenson Park Saturday afternoon. The victory makes necessary a play-off game with Oshawa H. S. to decide the group winner.

The P.C.I. team's well-coached plays worked smoothly and they forced the play except for a few minutes in the second quarter. There were several long runs but most of the gains were made on line plunges. The game was very free from fumbles considering the sloppy field and the wet ball.

The Garnet and Gray line tore big holes in the Cobourg front line and the ball carriers made big gains through the holes. The outsides got down quickly on Gemmel's punts and attempts to run back the kicks. Hewitt, Dunkerly, Cuthbertson and Magee were called upon frequently and they were consistent yard gainers.

Hodgett, Cobourg's hefty half, did the brunt of the work for the visitors, and his plunging and punting were the bright spots in the Cobourg play. Ravensdale, their speedy flying wing, showed a fast pair of heels when he had a chance, but he only got away once. Roddy, the right outside, was their only man to demonstrate any form in tacking, Cobourg proving especially weak in that department.

The Play

P.C.I. kicked off and immediately took control of the game. Magee, Johnson and Hewitt made big gains, and Dunkerly on a long pass from Gemmel skirted the Cobourg end and ran twenty-five yards for a touchdown. P.C.I. 5.

Dunkerly took Hodgett's kick-off and ran it back to the Cobourg 40-yard line. The Pete's worked two fake extends, and Cuthbertson got away on a real play for a twenty-yard gain. Gemmel kicked for a rouge. P.C.I. 6.

Hodgett booted to Cuthbertson on P.C.I. 50-yard line and Johnson and Cuthbertson ripped through for yards. Hewitt found a hole and ran thirty yards to the Cobourg 10-yard line. Magee plunged through for seven yards, but Cobourg held the next two plays and P.C.I. lost the ball. Hodgett kicked out of danger on their first down. Play remained in Cobourg territory, each team making little headway, taking two plunges and a kick. At quarter time Cobourg had possession at their own 20-yard line.

Replace Regulars

Ward, Doukas and Young replaced some of the P.C.I. regulars. Hodgett got away for a nice gain of twenty yards; Hewitt stopping him with a flying tackle. Cobourg made their first yards of the game on bucks by Hodgett and Cooper. P.C.I. lost ten yards on an offside, and Hodgett gained twenty-five yards on a fake kick. Hodgett kicked and P.C.I. got the ball on their 20-yard line. P.C.I. gained yards on two extends and Gemmel kicked to centre. Doukas broke through and stopped a Cobourg play before it got started. Petes worked the ball down on plunges by Johnson, Gemmel, Doukas, Cuthbertson and Magee, and then were called back ten yards on a forward pass. Gemmel kicked to Cobourg 8-yard line. Hodgett kicked out of danger but P.C.I. came right back and Gemmel kicked for a rouge. P.C.I. 7

P.C.I. made big gains and Gemmel kicked the ball over the Cobourg touch line, and Magee going down fast forced the Cobourg backs to make a safety touch. P.C.I. 9. Play was at mid-field at half time.

Second Half

P.C.I. made yards repeatedly, and Gemmel kicked to the Cobourg 10-yard line. Cobourg was forced to kick and P.C.I. got the ball twenty-five yards out. Magee gained yards and Dunkerly broke through for a touchdown. P.C.I. 14.

P.C.I. made repeated gains on line plunges and Gemmel kicked for rouge. P.C.I. 15.

Play moved back and forth and then P.C.I. worked the ball down to Cobourg's 15-yard line, only to lose it on a fumble. On their very next play Cobourg lost the ball on a fumble. Gemmel made a gain of fifteen yards and Hewitt went over for the touchdown. P.C.I. 20.

Hewitt converted, making a nice drop kick with the heavy ball. P.C.I. 21.

P.C.I. kept the play well up near the Cobourg line, and Gemmel kicked for a rouge and the last point of the game. P.C.I. 22.

The lineups were:

Cobourg C.I.—Snap, Mitchell; insides, Woods and Murray; middles, Shrum and Johnson; outsides, Dufton and Roddy; flying wing, Ravensdale; halves, Jack Hayden, Cooper and Hodgett; quarter, Harold Hayden; subs, Fields, B. Cooper and Jamieson.

P.C.I.—Snap, Preston; insides, Wiman and Hall; middles, Johnson and Armstrong; outsides, Glover and Green; flying wings, Dunkerly and Megee; halves, Hewitt and Cuthbertson; quarter, Gemmel; subs, Reynolds, Dearborn, Clayton, Doukas, Young, Ward and Wagar.

Referee—C. S. Browne; Umpire, Bruce Fraser.

Harry Wismer, better known as "Heinie," one of the best known hockey men in Western Ontario, who says he is through with hockey as a pilot and henceforth will be found on the spectators' bench. Heinie has managed the Twin City Greenshirts, one of the most outstanding clubs in the intermediate and senior O.H.A. for 18 years, and in that time he conducted the club to one intermediate and two senior titles, the 1918 club winning the Allan cup championship. In 1914 his intermediates won the Intermediate O.H.A. title, and last year the seniors won the Ontario title but lost out to Montreal Victorias in the Eastern Canada final. The Greenshirts have always had a powerful senior aggregation and it was Wismer's team that gave the Granites, world's champions of 1924, and the Grads, world's champions of 1928, their hardest battles in the senior O.H.A.

ARGOS PLAY TO 1-1 TIE

Senators Need To Win On Saturday To Gain Third Position.

PACKED WITH THRILLS.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 5. — (By Canadian Press). —Unless Ottawas accomplish the seemingly impossible task of taming the tigers in their lair next Saturday, there is nothing left for the Senators but the lowliest position in the inter-provincial rugby union standing this season.

A weakened Argonaut squad successfully beat back the rough riders drive for third place in the big four here on Saturday when before a chilled gathering of 2,500 fans, the smallest attendance of the season, the oarsmen battled their old capital rivals to a 1-1 draw over a mud-soaked gridiron that made footing and catching uncertain but nevertheless provided the most thrilling senior rugby match witnessed here this year.

The tie result was the first chalked up in the big four this season and the final count was a correct indication of the run of the play. Neither team showed any great power in straight line plunging due to the slippery footing and most of the efforts at opening the way for scores were made via the aerial route with Harris of Argos and Tubman of Ottawas providing a merry duel after the first quarter. Despite the handicap of a greasy ball, the catching of both backfields was errorless and the all-round display of the veteran Joe Tubman was a treat in itself.

Veterans Star in Play

Ottawa fans, who braved a cold north wind and drizzling rain to witness the final home match on the big four program, came out to cheer on the promising juniors now holding down regular positions on the Senator team but instead they had to hand most of the bouquets to the veterans with Tubman and Eddie Emerson leading the way. Tubman's performance was the best of the afternoon while Emerson was the most effective of the locals through the line. Claude Harris, the Argo youngster who replaced the injured Turville on the backfield, was the outsanding star for the visitors and kicked and caught a great game throughout. "Pee Wee" Chantler also sparkled on the rear guard while the defensive play of Hutchison and Irwin at outsides and "Red" Wilson, subbing for the injured captain, Tommy Barrett at flying wing were other bright features of the oarsmen's play.

Kempen-Rodak Team Win Bicycle Race

CHICAGO, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—The team of Peter Van Kempen and Mike Rodak won the Chicago six-day bicycle race Saturday night. They led the field with 2,406 miles and 9 laps.

Second place went to Bobbie Walthour, Jr., and Willie Fenn, with 2,406 miles and 8 laps.

Caesar de Baetes and George Dempsey were third with 2,406 miles and seven laps, the same distance recorded for Charlie Winter and Willie Coburn, although the latter team was awarded fourth place. A tie for fifth place developed between the teams of William King Poles and George Price, and Leroy Garrison and Louis Benzatto, with 2,406 miles and 6 laps each.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

There were many upsets in Saturday's rugby games, and the old dope sheet made many an error.

P.C.I. did the expected and gave Cobourg C.I. one fine lacing. While P.C.I. were beating Cobourg the Oshawa H.S. was playing Lindsay in Oshawa. Oshawa won after a hard tussle 23 to 12. Now Oshawa and P.C.I. meet in a sudden death game in Port Hope next Saturday to decide the group winner.

* * * * * * *

Coach Browne will give his team some real stiff workouts in preparation for the big game. On Wednesday afternoon it is understood he will have his team play the Grove School first team. This ought to give the team a real practice.

* * * * * * *

It would appear on the records of the two teams that the garnet and grey should win the game in Port Hope. They have had fewer points scored against them than the Oshawa team, having only eight points chalked up against them.

Bowmanville High School tied up the Intermediate series when they beat Oshawa 5 to 3. So that now Coach Legon's team will have to play Bowmanville to decide the group honors. Bowmanville are a husky team, and the P.C.I. boys will have their work cut out for them.

McGill by beating Queen's gives Varsity a chance to tie up the Intercollegiate group by beating McGill in Montreal next Saturday. There hasn't been a game played in the college group this year that the home team won. If Varsity loses McGill will be champions, but you may be sure Varsity will be fighting hard to cash in on the opportunity Queen's defeat has given them. It should be a thriller.

Hamilton Tigers made sure of their entry into the play-offs when they beat Montreal right in Montreal 8 to 6. It was a hard game to lose and definitely settled Montreal's hash for this year.

Balmy Beach will have to play with themselves a little longer because Varsity Orphans' defeat of Kitchener ties up that union, and several more games will have to be played before a winner will be declared.

The Albion Knitting Company has made the sweaters for many of the N.H.L. hockey clubs. C. E. Wolfe said that each team generally sends in an order for twenty-five sweaters and then another order in the middle of the season for that many more. Those pro. players must be hard on their knitting-wear.

GOLF COURSE FOR MARMORA

Enthusiasts Would Build Course On South Shore of Crowe Lake.

HOLD MEETING

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, November 5. — There is a strong movement afoot for the construction of a golf course on the south side of Crowe Lake. On Thursday, Col J. E. Mills of Toronto, visited the village, and later inspected Dr. W. G. MacKechnie's property at the lake. As a result a very encouraging meeting was held at the Royal Hotel on Friday evening by those interested in the project, the business being of a preliminary nature. A nine-hole course is under consideration. It is felt that if the project is carried, Marmora's attraction as a summer holiday resort would be increased.

Walthour-Daulberg Win Detroit Honors

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Eighteen-year-old Jimmy Walthour and his German partner, Franz Deulberg last night won Detroit's international six-day bicycle race, finishing with their one-lap advantage obtained Friday over the French pair, Letourner and Brocardo. Walthour and Deulberg covered 1,435 miles, 9 laps.

Two laps behind the winners came the other French team, Cugnot and Blanchonet, after making a last minute effort to overtake the leaders. Debasts and Van Nek were 4th, three laps behind, with Hy Kockler and Carle Stockholm fifth, four laps in the rear.

TIGERS CLINCH ONTARIO TITLE

Huck Welch Kicks Hamilton Team To 8-6 Victory Over Montreal.

PLAY IN RAIN.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press.) — The ability of Huck Welch, Hamilton's youthful backfield star, to kick a rain-soaked and greasy ball, gave the Tigers an 8 to 6 victory over Montreal at the M. A. A. grounds on Saturday. The victory clinched the Interprovincial League championship for the Tigers, who have now won five straight games. Saturday's contest was played in a sea of mud during a continuous fall of rain. While perfect football was out of the question, the fans, 3,500 of whom braved the inclement weather, witnessed a tight struggle in which Welch's punting, Cap Fear's tackling, and several long runs by Perry and Moore, the local team's sensational backfielders, featured.

Figuratively speaking, the Montreal front rank had much the better of the battle between the two lines, the locals gaining yards nine times as against three times for the much-vaunted Tiger forwards. The visitors, however, made more use of their backfield than of their front rank, and many times, Welch was called to punt on first and second downs. Welch apparently found the heavy ball as much to his likeing as a dry one, and his kicks were consistently good. On the other hand, Beano Wright, the local booter, who can average 45 to 50 yards per punt with dry ball, could do nothing with the soggy oval, and was consistently outkicked by his youthful opponent.

Counts Three Singles.

Welch counted three singles with his toe, as against one by Wright, while each team scored an unconverted try, both touchdowns coming as a result of fumbling by the opposing team.

The Tigers opened the scoring in the first quarter when an onside kick for thirty yards out went for a rouge. Moore grabbed the ball and was well on the way to turn it out, when Fear made a daring tackle to bring him down on his own line. This point came shortly after Moore had fumbled one of Welch's high ones on his thirty-five yard line.

The Winged Wheelers tied the score in the second quarter, when Wright got away one of his few long punts of the day to send the ball past the deadline from Hamilton's thirty-yard line. A thirty-yard dash from his own territory by the versatile Red Moore put the locals in the position from where Wright scored the point. In this session, the Wheelers completely outplayed the Bengals, and only several poor punts by Wright as compared with Welch's long hoists, kept them from taking the lead.

Welch continued his deadly boot work in the third quarter, and the Tigers ran up a 7 to 1 lead, as a result of one rouge and an unconverted try. The visitors got their first break when they blocked one of Wright's attempted kicks on the Montreal 35-yard line. From there, Welch punted over to Perry who was overpowered by Timmis for a single. The Tigers kept up the pressure, and again Welch booted to Perry behind his line. The diminutive local backfielder caught the ball, and started to run it out. Several Tigers swarmed around him, and he dropped the slimy oval as he was tackled, and Glenn Small pounced on it for a try.

On the change over for the fourth quarter, Welch continued to hold the desperate Montrealers at bay with his superior kicking, and soon added to Tigers' count with another single point. The locals continued to fight, however, and got a break when Gibb fumbled one of Wright's punts on his 20 yards line. Before he could recover, a bevy of Montreal tacklers surrounded him, one of them giving the bounding oval a kick towards the Tiger line. Out of the swarm of players, dashed Johnny Burrell, Montreal middle wing. He dribbled the ball across the visitors' line and fell on it for a try to bring the locals within striking distance. The locals continued to press, but time was called before they could add to their count.

ILLINOIS OUT IN U.S. CAMPAIGN

Three of Foremost Contenders For Rugby Honors Eliminated Saturday.

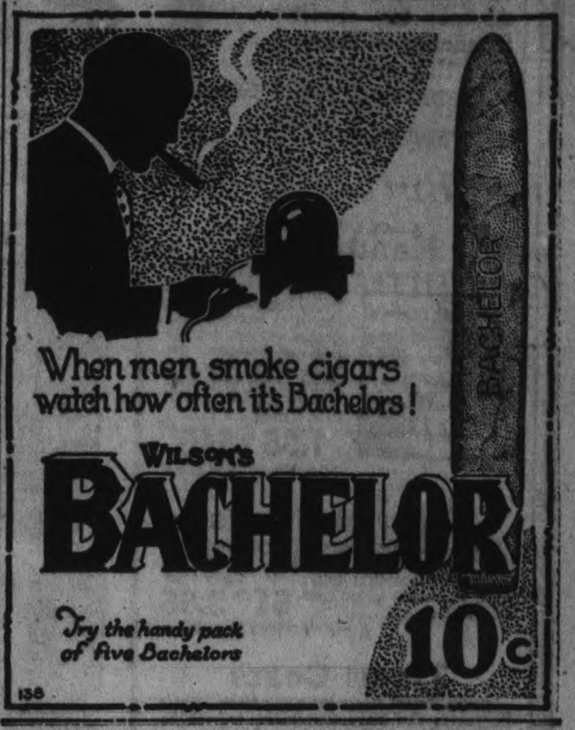
NEW FAVORITES.

(By Alan J. Gould—Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Old Man Upset, with an assist here and there from Pop Weather, spilled the championship football aspirations of three of the foremost contenders by way of celebrating the start of the crucial November gridiron campaign.

There were others who fell by the wayside in the storm and strife of Saturday's scramble for the slippery oval, but nowhere was the detonation so terrific as that accompanying the downfall of Illinois, 1927 western conference champions, Stanford, pace setters for the past two years on the Pacific coast and New York University, one of the east's mightiest arrays.

Illinois was the victim of the Michigan Wolverine, which decided it had been kicked around enough and broke a losing streak of four straight

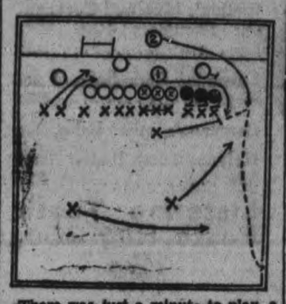


FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Thirty years ago Brockville had a mighty fine rugby team in the old Quebec Rugby Union. Ottawa College and the island city teams met three times in 1899. On its home grounds the garnet and grey opened the season with a 1-0 win. Rather close. Brockville defeated the collegians at Brockville. Each won the remaining games and on November 18 that two formidable "fifteens" met in the final championship struggle at Montreal. The final score was 11-9 for Ottawa College.

Quarter-back McGuire called on his team throughout the game to work an old play, one of Ottawa College's pet plays. The quarter-back sneak and punt. He used this play to get out of a bad position just one minute before the final whistle. Here it is:



There was just a minute to play, a miscue of any sort might have meant the loss of the game. Quarter-back McGuire, No. 1 in the diagram, called on McGuckin, No. 2, to punt the ball. The latter was standing behind his own goal line. He implored the collegian line to hold back the last and final tremendous charge of the Brockvillians. Clancy, College's famous centre scrimmager, heeled the ball out cleanly to McGuire. He faked a pass to McGuckin, then sneaked along close to the ground behind the left side of his own forward line. Just as he rounded Brockville's right end he tossed the ball to the college punter, who kicked a beauty into touch at midfield. The line-up: with a little booting of its own, the final score being 3 to 0.

Ottawa Coll.		Brockville.

Stanford's Cardinals, big favorites to ride the far western crest once more, ran into the Trojan wall and took a 10 to 0 licking from Southern California to help scramble the coast situation.

New York University's hitherto unbeaten eleven, squandering its opportunities by inability to handle a muddy ball, bowed to a Georgetown team that cashed in on its big chance to score and won 7 to 2, to keep its own slate clean.

University of Texas Overthrown.

Add to these reversals the overthrow of the University of Texas hopes in the South-Western Conference by Southern Methodist, plus the defeats of Texas Christian and Clemson College, after each had won six straight games, and Old Man Upset's main accomplishments are about complete.

It wasn't all rough going for the favorites, however, at least so far as the final results were concerned. Two of the country's mightiest arrays, University of Utah and Nebraska virtually clinched the respective Conference races in which they are involved.

The Utah Tigers, scoring their third straight triumph over an unbeaten rival, turned back the challenge of Colorado College in a 27-21 thriller and just about clinched the Rocky Mountain title for the second time in three years.

Nebraska led by their candidate for all-American full-back honors, Blue Howell, rallied in the second half to break Kansas 20 to 0. The Corn Huskers now stand alone at the top of the "Big Six" since Oklahoma fell before Iowa State.

The net result of Saturday's struggles on muddy eastern gridirons leaves Georgetown out in front with the Army and Carnegie, among the major undefeated and untied outfits, with Boston College and Villanova in the same class. This week the Cadets, after a good workout in beating Depauw, face Notre Dame in the main intersectional spectacle, while Georgetown debates the issue with Carnegie on a neutral gridiron at Albany.

Mr. Louis Yeates, proprietor of the Elite Sweets Cafe, has offered a box of chocolates to the young lady who rolls the high three score at the Duffus Alleys during the month of November.

Miss Jerry O'Connel has already worked her way into an excellent position to secure the pair of satin mules donated by A. V. Lillow, George Street shoe merchant, by piling up the tidy little score of 347 for a single game, while her high three score made last night against the Meteors No. 1, which was 620, might eventually carry off the chocolates.

It won't be Steve Elliot's fault if he has not won the new five dollar hat at the end of November, donated by Maher and Wesley for the gentleman who piles up the highest total for three consecutive games, as he has already made 760 for a high trio score.

O.A.B.A. TO OPERATE SCHOLASTIC SERIES

W.O.S.S.A. Winners To Enter—Dalton Disher Elected President.

TORONTO, November 5. — Formation of an Interscholastic series was the outstanding development at the annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association at Central Y.M.C.A. on Saturday evening. The competition will be fashioned along the lines of that conducted for the past several years by the Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association. The "Wossa" winners will enter, marking the first appearance of teams of this organization in O.A.B.A. competition.

Players will be eligible for teams in the Interscholastic series must have attained an academic standard of at least 50 per cent. in their examinations, and must have an attendance record of at least fourteen hours a week. In order to preclude the possibility of working a hardship on any teams, this rule will not be put into effect for twelve months.

New Canadian Body?

Representatives of the six district associations of the O.A.B.A. were present at the meeting, which was the best attended in the history of the Association. The delegates approved the withdrawal of the O.A.B.A. from the Eastern Canada Basketball Association, and commended the steps taken toward the formation of a proper Canadian association. The proposed constitution of the new Canadian body provides that the president and second vice-president will be elected from the West in the years that the first and third vice presidents are Eastern Canadamen, and vice versa. The positions will alternate from East to West yearly.

There was considerable discussion regarding the advisability of allowing players of O.A.B.A. teams to take part in games outside the jurisdiction of the association. A rule was passed that O.A.B.A. players cannot play for teams in any organized league not under O.A.B.A. control. There is still some controversy regarding the status of Windsor players who are also members of the University of Detroit team. It is the claim of the Windsor officials that, as the University of Detroit is not affiliated with any United States Association Border Cities players competing for Detroit will be eligible for O.A.B.A. games. A ruling on this point will be made later.

The work done by President Walter McKinnon and Secretary Frank Eagleson was highly commended, and these gentlemen were urged to retain office. Owing to pressure of business, both refused to reconsider their decision to retire.

Officers were elected as follows: Hon. president, Arthur J. Hardy, Toronto; immediate past president, Walter L. McKinnon, Toronto; president, Dalton Disher, St. Catharines; first vice-president, Thomas Armour, Kitchener; second vice-president, F. Begley, Windsor; secretary-treasurer to be appointed by the president, and to be a St. Catharines man. The executive will be composed of the above, and the presidents of the six district associations.

The committee increased scale of referees' fees from $5.00 to $12.00 in senior, and from $4.00 to $5.00 in intermediate. The next executive is to take up the problem of having a Referees' Association formed or qualified referees, and to confirm appointments to qualified referees.

Howard Crocker informed the meeting that Canada could and should be represented on International Joint Rules Committee, which fixes the rules for basketball. The Joint Rules Committee is likely to be reorganized in the near future, and it is felt Canada should appoint some one officially to represent her. This is to be passed on to the Canadian Basketball Association.

HIGH STRUNG FIRST PIMLICO FUTURITY

Courageous Colt Lowers Record to 1.39 — Wins $51,650.

PILMICO, Md., Nov. 5.—High Strung is a game colt. Twenty-five thousand persons roared their appreciation of the courage of the son of High Time—Emotion when he appeared beaten at the sixteenth pole in the Futurity here, and then came on again with a surging rush, and brought him under the wire winner over Walter J. Salmon's Dr. Freeland.

That burst of speed in the closing strides earned $51,650 for Marshall Field, and cracked the Futurity record of 1.39 1-5 by a fifth of a second, just as his victory in the Belmont Futurity six weeks ago smashed the track mark on the New York course.

Dr. Freeland Challenges.

Linus ("Pony") McAtee was in the saddle, and when Dr. Freeland flashed alongside in the stretch he laid two cracks of the whip on High Strung's flank. Light strokes they were, but High Strung leaped forward, held Dr. Freeland even, and ran straight for the line, giving all he had for a victory that places him among the great figures of the turf of this or any other year. It was the second Pimlico Futurity for Field, he having won with Stimulus in 1924.

In six starts Field's colt has scored five times, and won $153,640 to make himself the greatest money-winning juvenile in American racing, and to earn a better claim than Blue Larkspur and Jack High to this season's two-year-old championship. Domino holds the two-year-old money-winning record of $170,890.

Neddie in Third Place.

Back of High Strung's flying heels were E. B. McLean's Neddie, trailing by five lengths, to be third, and then, in order, the Greentree Stable's Comstockery, Harry Payne Whitney's The Nut, the Greentree Stable's Justinian, and four others. W. R. Coe's Igloo suffered his first defeat finishing last of ten that started.

High Strung was clocked in 1.39 for the mile. The race gave Bob Odom, High Strung's trainer, and McAtee a double on the day, for the former saddle Sandy in the Annapolis Handicap and McAtee rode him to victory.

AN ONION CAN MAKE ANYONE CRY; THERE IS NO VEGETABLE THAT CAN PRODUCE LAUGHTER

That's Colleen Moore's Way of Saying It's Harder to Make People Laugh Than to Bring Tears—Comedy Must Ever Be New or Novel—While the Same Situation Always Makes People Weep, Says Star of "Oh Kay!"

"An onion can make anybody cry, but there is no vegetable that is capable of producing laughter."

Such is the apt reply of Colleen Moore, piquant screen star, to those who place comedy on a lower artistic level than serious drama.

Comedy, points out Miss Moore, frequently depends on deft exaggeration in the portrayal of a character for the sake of humor, while dramatic work demands only the normal and natural reactions of life from a player, whose work is all the more effective if he acts as much as possible as he does in real life.

The talented Miss Moore is in a position to speak authoritatively on this subject, for her latest comedy, "Oh Kay!", now showing at the Regent Theatre, was preceded by two dramatic productions in which she was equally successful— "Happiness Ahead," a wistful love story, and "Lilac Time," a screen adaptation of the famous stage romance.

TO-NIGHT THE CAPITOL AGAIN OFFERS "THE BUTTERFLY KIDDIES" THE CLEVER JUVENILE COMPANY WHICH TOOK PETERBORO BY STORM A FEW WEEKS AGO, IN NEW SONGS AND DANCES. RAMON NOVARRO AND RENEE ADOREE IN "A CERTAIN YOUNG MAN" ON THE SCREEN.

"The best vaudeville attraction seen in Peterborough in years", is what everybody said that witnessed the performances of the Butterfly Kiddies at the Capitol a few weeks ago. Manager Stewart has been successful in getting a return engagement of this clever Company before they open on the Big Time Pantages Vaudeville Circuit, at Pantages Theatres in Toronto on Saturday of this week. This clever Company of five little girls whose ages range from six to thirteen years will be seen at the Capitol to-night and Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and evenings, in news songs and dances. If you have seen these little girlies before, we know that you will see them again, and if you did not see them on their initial visit, you must see them this time, so don't let anything prevent you from hearing them.

"A Certain Young Man" with Ramon Navarro, the Screen Feature.

Lord Jerry Brinsley, a philandering young nobleman, is famous in London for his love affairs with a sprightly Mrs. Crutchley and others. Finally he becomes involved in a love affair with a woman who, to his disgust, turns out to be the wife of his valet. To hide his chagrin he leaves for a fishing trip in Europe.

On the train he meets Phyllis, pretty daughter of an American business man, and falls genuinely in love with her. The girl's father, observing this, cables London and gets a report on the former activities of Lord Jerry.

They visit Biarritz and other places in the south of France, and the young couple fall deeper and deeper in love. Jerry proposes and she accepts him, and goes to tell her father. The father shows her his detectives' report of Jerry's life as a roue in London, but she defends her lover.

Meantime Jerry meet Mrs. Crutchley, who has followed him to Biarritz. He tells her all is over—that he is really in love now. Mrs Crutchley appears. Jerry hides the woman in his rooms, and Phyllis comes to tell about her tilt with her father, and overhears the two men. To save Jerry she enters the room and claims a handbag which Mr. Crutchley insists was his wife's. Mr. Crutchley leaves—but when Jerry turns to Phyllis she repulses him in anger.

Jerry is in despair, and prepares to return to England, when he gets the surprise of his life. A humorous twist to the story irons out all his difficulties.

A.Y.P.A. LEAGUE

The Blackfeet overwhelmed the peaceful Hurons in Friday night's encounter, taking three games and strengthening their position in the race to a considerable extent. Doug. Miller was the keen-eyed marksman for the winners with a high single of 234 while his teammate Rollie Krant walked off with high three honors with 491, but both of these players were eclipsed by the efforts of Miss Clemena Long, who scored 495.

The battle between the Iroquois and Dakotas was of a more sociable manner, the former taking two points out of three, although the Dakotas pressed hard in the second game assisted by the stellar performance of Robinson. M. Fowler chalked up the strikes for a total of 241 which was high single for these two teams. G. Manning collected a trio of scores that totalled 598.

The Micmas had their battle with the Crees well in hand until the third game, when the fighting spirit of the prairie tribe asserted itself and enabled them to strike and spare their way to a neat victory. F. Darrell was the "Big Chief" with 208 and 528 and J. Price proved his ability as a bowler with 526. Bob Kitchen for the Micmacs came through with a single total of 225.

Despite their hard work the Oneidas were blanked by the cleverness of the Mohawks, who salted three games in their war-bags and had the comfortable margin of 300 pins in total pinnage. S. Rigby and H. Ross were the warriors who carried the Mohawks to victory with high single 209 and 518 high three respectively.

Algonquins and the Sioux staged the peppiest scrap of the night, keenly contesting every game right up till the last frame with the result that the Sioux won 2 out of 3. H. Hutchinson of the Algonquins hit the wood hardest, making 207 in one game while Darrell and Moore for the winners were almost as good, collecting 201 and 202.

The Chippewas and Senecas made their league tournament a regular family affair, using more players than any other two teams in the section. The Seneca tribe biffed the pins hard and often and took the big half of the three game fixture with the assistance of Bill Gore, who trotted out a big league brand of bowling, getting 243 in one and 662 for three which was also high three score for the night. O. Heap was the only member of the losers who showed up extra well, having secured 187 and 527.

The latest news regarding the competition that the lady bowlers are engaging in, in an effort to win the satin mules donated by Mr. Lillow, is that Miss V. Langton has amassed a high single score of 275.

It may surprise the public to know that in the C.G.E. Bowling League alone there are eighty teams or approximately 450 players.

The second largest bowling organization among industrial concerns is the Peterborough Brinton Carpet Company, which boasts a schedule comprized of 18 teams.

C. G. E. SHOP LEAGUE

The C.G.E. Shop League at the Duffus Alleys saw some unexpected results on Thursday night, when the eight teams in Group 6 resumed hostilities. The Tool Room No. 1 carried all before them against Industrial Control No. 2, winning three games which places them at the head of this group. Rollie Richardson was using his duck-shooting eye to advantage and picked off the pins for a high single score of 252, while Bill Bolan was high for three with 569.

Abbie Rose must have thought he was figuring in a senior ball game, judging from the control he exhibited in chalking up 562 for high trio against Tool Room No. 3, who only collected one out of the three games.

The Structural Steel Workers breezed along to a two game win over Tool Room No. 2 in a steady bowling duel that was noticeable for its clever pin picking. Cox was the champion striker for the Toolmakers, with 230 single; Macfarlane collected high three, 848, while Rankin, his teammate, rolled a nice single score of 216.

Reg. Dyer is almost as good at picking off the pins as he was at gathering in the foul balls, during the baseball season, having accounted for high three with 556 in the game between Porcelain and Industrial Control No. 1, the latter winning two games out of three.

Speaking of good and consistent bowling, J. F. Benson of the C.G.E. Engineers' League stands in the limelight at present at the Duffus Alleys, having made a score of over 200 in ten out of the fifteen league games played. The exact scores for these ten are: 238, 218, 234, 209, 272, 220, 215, 234, 209, 217, making a total of 2,286, and an average of 228.6. This is the best record which has come to our notice yet this year.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

PRESENTATIONS MADE TO TEAMS

Cups and Medals Presented To Three Winning Teams in City League.

GIFTS FOR UMPS.

Concluding the most successful season that they have had in many years, the three group trophies and medals were presented to the managers of the winning teams at the final meeting of the City Hardball League held in the Holy Name Society Rooms. The auditorium of the club-rooms was well filled with players, along with the team managers and the executive of the League.

Speaking in glowing terms of the success of the League during the past year, W. H. Prindible, under whose chairmanship the meeting was held, gave a brief account of the business affairs of the League as they stood following the wind-up of the season. In the absence of the donors of the cups, who were unable to attend, the presentation of the three trophies fell to the lot of the chairman, Mr. Prindible, who presented the trophies to the three winners, namely, Mark Bredin Cup to Royals for winning the championship in the Junior series; J. M. Greene Cup to the Kiwanis Juveniles as winners of the juvenile section, while Riley and Hickey team received the Fitzpatrick and Geraghty Cup for the Bantam championship. The players will receive their medals and baseball fobs from their respective team managers.

Presentations Made to Umpires.

Eddie LeBarr and Alec Kay were the next in line to receive presentations, being presented with two handsome mantel clocks as a gift from the League in appreciation for the work and time they spend in acting as umps during the playing of the schedule. Mr. Kay, in reply, briefly stated that he had always taken an active part in the developing of the younger baseball players in the city, and that he hoped that he and his co-partner, as he called "Curly" LeBarr, who acted as his assistant in the umpiring end during the season, would be only too glad to carry on the work next year. Mr. LeBarr, in his reply, said that the credit for the success of the League was due much to the work of the officers whose efforts in selecting grounds and hunting up teams for entry during the trying days of the spring, when things had looked very black, as regards the operation of a league.

Following the presentations to Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Prindible, the players of the Kiwanis Juvenile team were asked to be in attendance at Kiwanis luncheon in the Empress Hotel on Friday afternoon, when they will be presented with medals and cup by the sponsors of the team.

LOCALS PLAY-OFF WITH BOWMANVILLE

Oshawa High School's Defeat On Saturday Ties Up Series.

Bowmanville won the right to meet Peterborough P.C.I. intermediates in the play-off for the interscholastic group honors by reason of the former's 5 to 3 defeat over the Oshawa squad on Saturday at the Motor City. Home and home games will be played, and while it is not yet decided what city will have the first opportunity to see these teams tangle, it is needless to say that Coach Legon will have his squad up to prime condition in order to vanquish the warriors from the Bowmanville Collegiate.

While the game on Saturday meant nothing to the Oshawa juniors, they gave the Bowmanville squad a hard battle, and except for poor defensive work in the first quarter, and which was responsible for Bowmanville scoring a touchdown, might have won the game. The half time score was 5 to 0. Engel and Henley, two subs, went in the game and starred for Oshawa, while Candler and Devitt turned in the best games for the visitors.

When You Catch Cold
Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and works right away. It may prevent a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster.

Musterole is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—cold of all sorts.

BOTTLE BANDITS ARE BUSY IN CITY

Many Milk Bottles Being Robbed of Tickets and Money During Night.

That bottle bandits are getting away with profitable thieving about the city is evidenced by the series of complaints heard from residents not only of the southwest, but also of the north end of the city during the past couple of days. It has become a not unusual occurrence of the customer to leave money or tickets in empty bottles only to awake the next morning and find that their day's supply has not been left at their doors because the vendors could find neither the purchasing money nor tickets. In some cases the empty bottles have been found scattered about.

While no trace of the thieves has led to their apprehension, it is thought likely that the police may make it far from peaceful for the guilty ones, before long.

NEW MINE AREA OPENED UP

Since the Rouyn mineral area has obtained railway outlets to the north, and west, and since Noranda's smelter has come into operation, there has been a rapid opening up of other properties in that section of northwestern Quebec. As a result there is an agitation for a branch railway to serve the Malartic gold area. The people of Noranda-Rouyn argue that such a line should start there and then travel easterly, pointing out that it would thus serve gold-bearing country throughout its whole length.

The mine is owned and operated by the Horne Copper Corporation. The picture shows Mount Cheminis which rears its mass sentinel-like over the Quebec-Ontario boundary. The railway line in the left corner is the Nipissing Central Swastika-Rouyn branch of the Ontario Government-owned Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway. The name Noranda is a contraction of the two words Northern Canada.

CANTON MINISTER TAKES ANNIVERSARY

Fowl Supper Proceeds Amount To $135—Interesting Concert.

(Examiner Correspondence).

ROSENEATH, Nov. 5.—The annual anniversary services at Centenery were held last Sunday, when Rev. Fred Lane, of Canton, was the speaker. Special music was provided by the choir for this occasion.

Fowl Supper.

The proceeds of the Sunday collection and fowl supper, held in connection with the anniversary services at Centenery, on Tuesday evening, amounted to $135. Until it was time to begin the regular program, Fred Borger and Willis Dowler entertained the crowd with violin and guitar.

Rev. M. R. Brown acted as chairman for the program.

The following is the program:

Instrumental duet: Messrs. Dowler and Harvey.

Dialogue: "Irish Reflections," Ray Timlin and Floyd Harvey.

Duet: Misses Beatrice and Jessie Smith.

Vocal solo: Lewis Roberts, responding to an encore, "Where'd you get that hat?"

Trio: Misses Bessie Turner and Mary Mouncey, with their teacher, Miss Hilda Arthur, who is well-known in the musical realm of the community.

Rev. Mr. Barbour, of Gore's Landing, gave an address in which he advised farmers to study and educate themselves in their own homes, and to become more optimistic. Some of Canada's most noted and honorable men were born and raised on the farm.

Willis Dowler favored the audience with a solo and his number was encored

Recitation: "How we tried to lick the teacher," Miss Elva Sandercock.

Piano duet: Misses Hilda Arthur and Beatrice Smith.

Solo: Murvin Smith.

Violin selection: Fred Borger, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. C. W. Varcoe.

solo: Rev. M. R. Brown.

Address: Rev. H. Wilding, B.A., who spoke on the needs of attending church and how easily one can neglect his church duties.

His Gospel message on "Temperance" will leave a profound impression on every one of his listeners.

Solo: Miss Margarite Burrison, who responded willingly to an encore

Rev. Fred Lane, of Canton, was the last speaker, and spoke of the late hour and commented on the supper and excellent program. He concluded his speech with manoeuvres of a speaker, whom he saw but didn't hear a word that he spoke.

The little home-like church has been recently re-decorated, and is indeed a great credit to the congregation.

W. M. S. MEETING.

Cavan Ladies Meet in Parsonage, Will Hold Birthday Evening.

CAVAN, Nov. 5 (Examiner Correspondence).—The W.M.S. of Cavan United Church, met at the Parsonage on Thursday afternoon, with twelve members and one visitor present. It was decided to hold a W.M.S. birthday evening on Friday evening, November 30, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Snyder were appointed to make all necessary arrangements, and Mrs. R. Matchett was appointed convenor of the program committee. A silver collection will be taken. Correspondence was read regarding subscriptions to the Missionary Monthly for 1929, and some subscriptions were received by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Perrin. It was decided to buy the new study book, "Drums in the Darkness" and also the leaflets. Mrs. Rowen read the leaflet, "My Possessions," written by Mrs. W. H. Graham. Other leaflets on missionary work in Africa were read by members. A sketch of the first and second chapters of the study book was given from leaflets and by the use of a wall map. The collection at this meeting amounted to $1.50. The meeting closed with prayer by Miss Weeks.

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting does not remove the cause?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal? That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is an internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, sold by McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store, and all druggists with guarantee of money back if it fails?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause—stagnation of blood in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation.

LAND AIR SERVICES ARE HERE TO STAY

Ottawa Paper Declares Air Mails Are a Reality in Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 5. (Canadian Press).—"While fearless men continue to lose their lives in attempts to fly the Atlantic and experts debate over the practicability of dirigibles, the public is apt to lose sight of the fact that air services over land are becoming a reality," says the Ottawa Morning Journal in an editorial entitled "Air Mails a Reality."

The Journal continues:

"There is a well-established air mail service in the United States; an international air mail service between the United States and Canada; and the whole of the Dominion will soon be linked up in the same way. The latest announcement to this end is that a regular air carriage of mails is to be begun between St. John, N.B., and Montreal.

"The truth is that, regardless of what fate or science may have in store for the future of air traffic between continents, flying over land has passed the realm of experiment, has been established as a reality of commerce and communication. In Government, in industrial, in mining and in several other activities, airplanes to-day are playing their part, and no one who knows anything of their value can at all believe that they are a passing phase. They have, indeed, become as much a reality as railways or automobiles."

Dry, Hacking Cough Was Caused By A Bronchial Cold

Mrs. A. Primeau, 30 Ingram St., Chatham, Ont., writes:—"I am pleased to take this opportunity of telling you of my experience with

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

"Early last winter I suffered from a severe bronchial cold that left me with a provoking, dry, barking cough. After being bothered with it, both day and night, for some time I had a professional nurse recommend the above cough syrup which I took with wonderful results, and, now, it is the only remedy I ever use for colds."

Price 35c. a bottle; large family size 60c. at all druggists or dealers.

Greatly Relieved From Her Troubles!

"I have been troubled with my back and swollen ankles for many years," writes Mrs. F. Baptiste, of Golden Lake, Ont. "A friend recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills and I took six boxes. They gave me great relief. I would not be without a box in the house."

Every woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the finest tonic in the world because, acting directly on the Kidneys, they tone up those organs to do their work of straining all the impurities from the blood.

Prices Remain High On Eve of Elections

Press).—The last session of the stock market prior to the national election found the general course of prices still headed upward to-day. Some irregularity developed during the morning but lowering of the call money rate from 7 to 6 per cent with corresponding easing of time money rates, re-kindled bullish enthusiasm. Trading was moderately heavy for the session sandwiched in between Sunday and the market holiday, total sales crossing two million share mark before end of the third hour.

Merchandising, oil, copper, public utilities, airplane and investment railroad shares gave best demonstrations of group strength. Directors of Tobacco Products Corporation recommended five for one stock split up and 75 cents extra was declared on William Wrigley, Jr., Company.

National Tea soared twenty points to a new high record at 360, Utah Copper moved up ten points on odd sales to a new top at 220, and Kennecott, American and Foreign Power and Buffalo Susquehanna also moved into new high ground, the last named touching 64¼ or just double the year's low.

Liverpool Quotations Steadies Chicago Mart

CHICAGO, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices here rallied today after initial downturns. Unwelcome rainy weather in Northern Argentina together with an unexpected relative firmness of the Liverpool wheat quotations had a steadying effect. Opening at ⅜ to ½ decline to ⅛ advance, Chicago wheat later averaged slightly above Saturday's finish. Corn, oats and provisions were firm with corn starting ⅛c off to ⅜c up, and subsequently continuing to a point higher.

Wheat: Dec. 114¾, March 119½. Corn: Dec. 83½, March 85. Oats, Dec. 42⅛, March 44¼.

Oils Lead Stock List, Prices Continue Firmer

TORONTO, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Prices continued firm on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Imperial Oil was listed on the Toronto market, having previously been on the curb. Oils were stronger. Imperial Oil advanced three at 98, British American 1½ to 53½, International Petroleum a half to 54¼, while Service Stations dropped a half to 52 and Canadian Oil was unchanged. Trading was heavy in International Petroleum, and at noon 11,795 shares had been traded. International nickel was unchanged, while new Nickel stock fell ¼ to 33. Brazilian rose ½ to 71, and Canadian Gypsum 1½ to 75. Massey Harris was up ¾ to 55, while Cockshutt dropped a half to 30½, and Page Hersey ¾ to 114. Hiram Walker continued its upward movement and gained a half to 81, while Seagrams was down ¼ at 21¾ and Carlings remained unchanged. Goodyear advanced five to 181, and Northern Bakeries ¾ to 47, McColl Frontenac a half to 33½.

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC
by JACK MULHALL

Featured with Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good," a First National Picture

1.—The Magnetized Cane. Showing how the loop of silk holds the stick suspended from finger tips.

A loop of black silk thread about 15 inches long should be attached by one end to the lower button of the vest. The performer takes a cane and while polishing it with a handkerchief, "for the development of magnetic qualities in the wood"—slips it through the loop of silk.

He then holds the cane extended to the limit of the thread, presses his fingers against the stick, and it will apparently be suspended without support. It can be moved about and one hand waved over and under it. The effect is excellent and the trick is one requiring no skill but a certain amount of boldness. It can easily be slipped from the loop and handed for inspection at any time.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

You will find many things in the Classified Ads. of the Examiner.

FAMOUS GAMBLER SHOT BY GANGSTERS

Race Track Follower in Serious Condition As Result of Mysterious Shot.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (Canadian Press).—Mysteriously shot, apparently on the streets, Arnold Rotsstein, big time gambler and race track follower, was in Polyclinic Hospital to-day in a serious condition with a bullet wound in his abdomen.
He refused to tell police who his assailants were.
Rotsstein first came into prominence at the trial of Charles Becker, former police captain, who was convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, prominent gambler, and executed in Sing Sing prison. Rotsstein and several other well known gamblers were questioned at the same time, defence attorneys charging that Becker had been framed by certain gambling interests which they said were responsible for the killing.

EDWARD COURTNEY DIES AT HOME

tween Simcoe and Hunter streets for forty-eight years.
Mr. Courtney took an active part in the establishment of a museum in the city and he did much gratituous work and gave many gifts of interesting artcles under the direction of the founder of the museum, T. A. S. Hay.
Mr. Courtney's helpmate and wife, Harriet, died April 17, 1917. They had a family of seven daughters and one son. The children are Mrs. George Carpenter, Mrs. Peter Moffat, of the city; Mrs. Henry Kirk of Detroit, U.S.A.; Mrs. William Lillico of Toronto; Mrs. George Le Warne, of Mount Forrest, Ontario; Mrs. James A. Young of Smith Township, and Mrs. Walter Bothwell of this city. The son, Edward, died in April 1917.
The passing of Edward Courtney leaves another space in the ranks of the grand old men of the city who have written their life and character into the very warp and woof of the city's life and history.

Flag is Flying

The flag on the Ashburnham Memorial Hill flies at half mast to-day. It is in memory of the late Edward Courtney, whose funeral took place this afternoon.
The memory of Mr. Courtney will remain forever green in the hearts of those who knew and loved that kindly old man. One of his pet projects was the beautifying of this big hill, and he longed to see it green with trees and pleasant foliage. He helped the members of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham in every possible way, and he donated the flag pole which now holds the flag that flies at half mast in his memory.
On Thursday last, November 1st, while he lay on what was to prove his death bed, the late Mr. Courtney reached the eighty-fourth anniversary of his birth, full of years and wisdom and that quiet serenity which comes to the very old who have passed their lives in kindly, quiet ways and stretched forth a helping hand whenever possible.
By a curious coincidence, the flag which floats to-day in commemoration of the donor of its standard was presented to the members of the Ashburnham League by J. J. Turner, who has donated several flags for this pole, and whose wife was also buried to-day.

STANDARDIZATION OF HOME WIRING

ectricity he felt, was the basis for the prosperity enjoyed by the people of the United States and Canada, for its extensive use on this continent made possible greater production, and greater spending power. There were some 60,000 uses for electricity, Mr. Austin pointed in sketching the developments made since electric energy was first used.
Explaining the organization and objects of the Electric Service League, Mr. Austin told his hearers that it had the backing of some 70 manufacturers of electrical machinery, the Toronto Hydro Commission, and most of the large electrical contractors, and it had entered the promotion field in 1923 in the interests of electrical development, especially in the sphere of the domestic use of electricity. The condition it found was that large contractors were suffering from the competition of the carpet bag type of electricians, owing to the absence of any standard of electric wiring of houses, and accordingly a League had set to work to have such a standard adopted. It had been so successful that the red seal which testified its approval was to be found in 80 per cent. of the new houses built in Toronto, altogether 6,200 houses having been inspected and passed by the organization's experts. American interests learning of the plan, had asked permission to use the red seal idea and there now existed some 30 or 40 service league in American cities, similar to the Toronto League.
On behalf of the system Mr. Austin said that it was decidedly in the interest of the householder to have his house properly and sufficiently wired that he might avail himself of any particular devices he might want to use. The use of electric energy for various household operations was steadily increasing and it was obviously important that new houses should be wired so as to make the use of these services possible.
Rotarian Gordon Hall expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club to the speaker and President Morris also thanked Mr. Austin for his instructive address.

FOUR ARE MISSING---TRAGEDY IS FEARED

TORONTO YOUNG PEOPLE LEAVE HOME ON SATURDAY FAIL TO RETURN MONDAY

Parents Hear One Boy Has Died As Result of Injuries.

GOING TO BELLEVILLE.

Provincial Police Are Unable To Find Trace of an Accident.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—(Special to The Examiner.) —Mystery to-day surrounds the whereabouts of Louis Mandell, 29 Borden street, Morris Monday, 188 Palmerston avenue, and two Toronto girls, who left Toronto Saturday night to drive to Belleville.

All four intended being at their work Monday morning, but did not show up. Anxious parents sent inquiries afoot and a message to-day reached the Mandell home stating that Louis had died as a result of injuries received in a motor crash Sunday.

This message so agitated the family that the telephone receiver was dropped and no details given, with the result that the family do not know where the accident took place nor where the body of the son lies —if he is dead—or what is the fate of the other three occupants of the car.

Word was relayed to the factory where young Mandell worked as an operator. The secretary there immediately telephoned provincial police headquarters in all towns along the Kingston road between Toronto and Belleville.

No word of an accident involving the young people was found and the telephone search extended to Kingston with the same result.

At the Mandell home it was stated that no word had been received from Morris. The names of the young woman who were passengers in the car are not known.

CITIZENS CAST VOTES TO-DAY

Democrats Held Monster Parade in Buffalo Last Night.

CITIES CELEBRATE.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 6 (By R. E. Reade—Special to The Examiner).—With the biggest Presidential election ballyhoo in history over, the voters are to-day getting down to business in these parts. Everything is orderly enough, in strange contrast to the wild scenes of last night.

The Democrats made the last noises in Buffalo's pre-election hullabaloo.

A monster Smith parade, armed with every kind of ear shocker its ingenuity could think of, made Main Street pandemonium street. All this tumult and shouting was said by local experts to be convincing proof that the majority of Buffalo's 225,000 voters will cast a ballot or rather pull down the pointer for the Democratic candidate.

Around eight o'clock a visitor might have imagined he was in Chicago. Loud explosions, followed by the screams of police sirens, could be heard in the vicinity of the McKinley Monument. But the motor cycle officers were not rushing to the scene of a bomb outrage. They were merely clearing the way for the demonstration of the Italian-Smith Club.

At its head were six enormous star spangled banners, and the men who staggered under the burden of their country's emblem must have envied the fortunate hero who had only to carry the pocket handkerchief, cardboard portrait of Governor Smith.

The band did not rest, but it had this consolation, it did not have to carry any musical script. Its one tune which it played continually was "The Sidewalks of New York." These were some of the slogans, "Good-bye Cal, hello Al," and "They bluffed us for seven years but it's all over now." The spelling of Al Smith as Ale Smith did him no harm with these confident celebrants of victory in advance. One of the features of their parade was a huge ale keg.

In Detroit

Voting on Presidential Election Day in Detroit was a serious and arduous affair, but they give you plenty of time to do it in. The polls to-day opened sharp at 7 a.m. and do not close until 8 p.m., and perhaps not then.

Heroic Father Dies As Result Of Burns

NORTH BAY, Ont. Nov. 6.—(Canadian Press).—George Ferguson, heroic Kerns Township farmer, died in New Liskeard Hospital last night from burns sustained while rescuing his three young sons from his burning house on Sunday. The eldest son Lloyd is still in a critical condition.

After warning his wife and four small daughters who slept on the ground floor, Ferguson made three trips into the flaming upper story to bring out his sons. His body was burned almost to a crisp, and he was naked when he finished. No decision has yet been made as to an inquest.

BIBLE LEADER SAVES LIVES OF HIS PUPILS

Two Hundred Children March To Safety From Burning Church.

ORDER MAINTAINED

Brooklyn Presbyterian Church Is Damaged To Extent of $60,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Two hundred fresh young voices were lifted in a favorite Sunday school hymn.

A Bible teacher, facing his class, noticed a thin blue wreath of smoke curling upward from the floor behind them. The song stopped. The teacher bade his class march to the church door. It was an unusual part of a Sunday school program, but they obeyed.

The Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn was on fire. Before the blaze of Sunday morning was extinguished, it had damaged the edifice to the extent of $60,000.

There was no panic and no confusion. Church-goers gathered in an awed crowd on the street to watch beautiful stained-glass windows crack and shatter and to see vapory coils of smoke twist themselves about the pipes of the big organ.

Harold Meter was the teacher who discovered the first. His class was on the first floor of the three-story building, adjoining the main church auditorium. With the assistance of William Wilkinson, another teacher, he led the children to safety before they were aware of a reason.

Dangerous Blaze

An alarm of fire brought the first fire company promptly, and they immediately saw the blaze had gained serious headway. A second alarm was followed by a third and soon a large force of firemen was engaged in saving the main church edifice.

The fire had started in the basement, it is believed, from a defective flue. It had burned for some time before the smoke reached the Sunday school classroom.

Making the loss all the more serious was the fact that the church had just been redecorated, refurnished and provided with a new slate roof. With the building fund depleted by these improvements, members of the congregation now face the task of doing it all over again.

Frank Moffatt, trustee, estimated the damage at $60,000. The building was erected in 1888.

Pastor Ill

While the church was burning the pastor, the Rev. Peter Albert MacDonald, lay ill in bed at his home, No. 32 Monroe street, within sight of the church. Members coming to the morning service found the firemen still fighting the fire.

The pipe organ was damaged but not destroyed and can be restored. It will be some time before the congregation can return to its house of worship.

HOSPITAL FILLS LARGE POSITION IN COMMUNITY

Apsley Red Cross Hospital Is In Need of More Equipment.

NEW ROOM FITTED UP.

Twelve Chidren Were Born At Little Outpost Last Year.

Tiny Bable Stanley, just a week old, opened his eyes and cried feebly. He wanted some attention, and, like most men, small or otherwise, he wanted it right away. A nurse with crisp white uniform, white shoes and white stockings, came and lifted him out of his bassinet and carried him downstairs.

Stanley had been reposing in the upper room of the tiny Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Apsley. If another baby had come along about the same time, he would have lacked a bassinet because Stanley occupied the only one in the place.

Everything is scanty in this little hospital that is filling such a tremendous place in the life of the isolated northern community that centres about the little settlement of Apsley.

There is just one of everything, apparently, and that one is in pretty constant use. Equipment is extremely limited. In the kitchen, where blue and cream paint has been used over the bare board of the open wall cupboard, there are less than a dozen plates. Cups and saucers are in like proportion and when there are more than two patients in the hospital, the supply of cream pitchers is exhausted and the nurses place their own allotment in a cup. Half a dozen spoons are in the drawers, and the knives and forks are more plentiful only because one of the nurses has a mother who donated some of these to the hospital. One casserole does yeoman service.

Anything Acceptable

Anyone wishing to do something to further a good work and a really charitable service to any community, for these little Outpost Hospitals fulfil the idea of charity in its highest sense, could do nothing better than donate articles. Anything would be acceptable, in the way of silverware, kitchenware, enamelled things, books, rugs, chairs, or dressers. The nurses use boxes covered with white hangings, for dressers. And another bassinet would be a boon also.

In the year that ended with October, twelve children were born in this little place and two people passed away. In the matter of maternity care, it is a blessing to many a workworn mother. Instead of making the long journey over rough roads to Peterborough, she can rest in this cheerful small place, secure in the knowledge that she is receiving expert attention, and yet isn't very far away from her own family. There is a nurse always in attendance and a dietician who also helps out in every possible way. They are cheerful, pleasant faces in the small building.

HIGH WIND SCATTERS LEAVES ON STREETS

Downtown Section To-day is Disturbed By Blowing Leaves.

The high wind was playing merry pranks on George Street this morning. Leaves were caught up and carried high in the air, reaching near the roof tops, only to be deposited during a lull in every nook and corner and strewed on the sidewalks. These leaves must have been carried a considerable distance to reach the centre of the business district, where they were being blown helter skelter. Hats were lifted from heads unless tightly pulled on. One hat was blown right across the street and went rolling and spinning down the sidewalk, with its bare-headed owner in hot pursuit. Papers too were blown about and the whole street looked very unkempt. However, the city's street squad soon got to work and cleaned up the leaves and rubbish and gave the street its usually spick and span appearance.

Resignation Was Handed To President Doumergue at Noon To-day.

PARIS, Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—The Poincare Cabinet, which has been in office since July 23, 1926, resigned in a body to-day after the four Radical Socialist Ministers offered their resignations. The Radicals who resigned were Albert Sarraut, Minister of Interior; Edouard Herriot, Minister of Education; Henry Queuille, Minister of Agriculture, and Leon Perrier, Minister of Colonies.

The Radicals announced that their part in the program made continued collaborating with the National Union Cabinet impossible. Premier Poincare presented the Government's resignation to President Doumergue shortly after noon.

The retirement of the Radical Ministers was decided upon last night after a talk between Premier Poincare and M. Sarraut. In the course of this the Premier said he could not accept the program of the Radical party.

Scientist Believes Moon Will Return To Earth Solar Tides Produced By Sun Pulling It Back

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Visualising the time when the moon may collide on the planet, Sir Oliver Lodge, distinguished British scientist-inventor, declared in a lecture before a group of English collegians that forces are at work upon the moon to make it return to its parent body—the earth.

Similarly, he said, in a few thousand years the moon of the planet Mars may crash upon the surface of its parent body—Mars.

But the people of this planet need have no fears. Sir Oliver believes it will be several billion years before there is danger of a collision with the Lunar body. He said:

"The moon was once a part of the earth and was split from it. Some people have suggested it broke away in the region of the Pacific Ocean which is the lowest part of the earth, and in that way the area now filled with water was scooped out.

"The action that broke it away will tend to push it farther and farther away from the earth for a time, but the solar tides, which are produced by the sun, will gradually pull it back again and make it approach the earth."

UNITED CHURCH WEEK OPENS IN PETERBOROUGH

Dr. Pidgeon Opens Week By Addressing Big Rally in Trinity Church.

AUGMENTED CHOIRS.

Individual's Obligation To Community Was Subject of Evening's Address.

The eyes of United church congregations throughout the province, and even farther afield, are cast Peterboroughward this week to observe the success or failure of the first United Church Week, conceived by the United Men's Association of this city, of which W. H. Dickin is chairman. What they saw last night, the first of the week extending from November 5 to 11, was Trinity Church crowded to overflowing for a great mass service at which the first moderator of the United Church of Canada, the Rev. [illegible], was the special speaker, at which the combined choirs of Trinity and St. Andrew's were heard to greatest advantage not only throughout the post-meeting song service led by Charles H. Leslie of Toronto, but in anthem endeavor during the service proper, and to which the various C.G.I.T. groups marched in force, swelling the already large congregation. All were sincerely welcomed by the Rev. J. E. Toda who presided throughout the evening and to whom fell the honor of introducing the Rev. Mr. Pidgeon.

Obligation to Community

The individual's obligation to his community as the main contributor to his own welfare was strikingly brought out by Mr. Pidgeon, for in his address he traced this thought as expressed by nature whose way of growing a perfect tree is to bring a great number of them together; as expressed by Kipling in quoting the law of the Jungle and as apparent in man's relation to his home, his educational institution and greatest of all, to his church. Israel, the conquered and Babylon, the conqueror, he indicated as a further proof of this principle for while the latter lived for the glory of power, the former lived that the world might benefit.

Previous to his main message, the visiting speaker complimented the United Men's association on the conception and carrying through of plans for such a week. He recalled his first visit to the city when, as Moderator, he attended the first meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Of the two visits, past and present, he believed this one to be the more inspiring.

The Perfect Life

"I was reading from a book the other day" said Mr. Pidgeon, in the course of his address, "and it em-

TRUE BILL IS RETURNED BY GRAND JURY

Cobourg Jury Sends J. L. Corkum To Trial Charged With Manslaughter.

STARTS TO-DAY

Evidence Heard In $15,000 Damage Suit Against Canadian National.

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 6 (Special to The Examiner).—The opening sessions of the Fall Assizes are to-day slowly under way before Hon. Mr. Justice Raney.

The case now before the court is a damage action in which the Toronto General Trust Company as administrators of the estate of Emily Maria Clarland is suing the Canadian National Railways for $15,000 damages alleged suffered by the plaintiff's land as a result of water caused by the railway construction backing up and making it impossible to work the land. A large number of expert witnesses are being heard to-day in this case.

The grand jury to-day returned a true bill against J. L. Corkum, 28 Stephenson Avenue, Toronto, charged with manslaughter in the death of Mrs. A. E. Symons of Hope Township. Corkum was driving from Toronto to Ottawa to attend the funeral of a near relative, and struck the buggy in which Mrs. Symons was riding. The horse was killed, the buggy demolished, and the unfortunate woman's life snuffed out instantly.

The trial in this case is scheduled to start late this afternoon.

PARLIAMENT IS OPENED TO-DAY

Little Legislation is Proposed in Speech From Throne in British House.

FINAL SESSION

LONDON, November 6 (Canadian Press). — With the usual brilliant ceremony, King George opened Parliament to-day. Foreign relations and particularly the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war, were the chief topics referred to in the King's Speech from the Throne. The King expressed satisfaction at the endorsement of the peace pact by all his Governments and other leading nations. It is the last session of Parliament before a general election, and His Majesty had little to say about proposed legislation. He said that with a view to relieving agriculture and industry from the burden of taxes, Parliament would be asked to enable the railways to make lower charges on important traffic.

Employers on the King's Sandringham estate can have the services of King George's own residential doctor in return for a weekly payment of twopence per family.

Grant Of $1000 Is Made

Mayor Requested To Call Public Meeting of Citizens Interested in Event.

PUMPS MUST GO.

Council Stands By Its Previous Order Forcing Gasoline Pumps Off Streets.

The holding of an Old Home Week in Peterborough next summer was endorsed by the City Council at its regular monthly meeting held in the Council Chambers last night. The Mayor was requested to call a public meeting, inviting representatives of all local organizations and everyone interested in the matter, for the purpose of getting public endorsement and for organization. The Council also appropriated a sum of $1,000 to meet the expenses of the preliminary work for the week, which aims to be repaid after the celebration from its receipts. The motion went through without a dissenting voice, and from all appearances the aldermen intend to put all their energies into making the week a real success.

The offer from Samuel Abbott of $700.00, together with the costs of conveyance, for two parcels of land each being part of lots 20 and 21 on McDonnel Street, which were purchased for the city at the sale of lands for arrears of taxes, was accepted and the necessary by-law was prepared for their conveyance.

The arrangements for officials for the municipal elections was referred to the Mayor, Alderman Phelan and the Clerk to bring in a report at the next Council meeting. The City Solicitor to collect any arrears of taxes from the property of Jos. A. [illegible]

The Council's order that the gasoline pumps on the streets be put up will stand, according to the motion carried at by the members. Andrew Brown with his Council, asking that the pump be left on the street, as the lease does not expire for ten months, at which time he expects to sell new property in order to erect a suitable garage. He promised that the pump would not be used to retail gasoline, but only for the use of the garage. Aldermen Cotton and Phelan wanted to grant Mr. Brown's petition, but all the other members present were of the opinion that they could not pick out any one individual, and if he wanted to still use the pump for his own business he might move it inside.

Alderman Cotton: Some of the pumps were ordered to be taken off months ago, and these were not even agents for automobiles, but they still remain on the streets. I cannot see why we should not grant Mr. Brown's request, for I believe it is an isolated case, and he intends to move in ten months' time.

Alderman Macdonald: Are we going to see this thing through? While I have sympathy for Mr. Brown, we will be flooded with similar requests from the other pump holders.

Alderman Green suggested that he move his pump inside, and Alderman Phelan took the same position as he took when the matter was first discussed, that the pumps should be left on the streets.

Alderman Cotton then moved, seconded by Alderman Phelan, that Mr. Brown's request be granted.

Alderman McIntyre, seconded by Alderman Macdonald, moved an amendment that no action be taken, and that Mr. Brown be given his 10 days' notice along with the other pump holders, or legal action would be taken. On being put to a vote, the amendment carried, with Aldermen Phelan and Cotton being the only ones voting against it. The motion was defeated by the same vote.

The Utilities Commission wrote the Council saying that it had nothing to do with the old street railway poles on the streets, and that they were the property of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

Alderman Stocker said the Hydro had no case, and he thought that the poles should be advertised for sale. Alderman Cotton moved, seconded by Alderman Stocker, that the Hydro be written to, notifying them to remove their poles by December 1, or the city would have them removed. All that

Opossum Is Caught By Omemee Trapper

(Examiner Correspondent)

OMEMEE, Nov. 6. — While trapping this week, P. Parsons found in a trap which was set for skunk, an animal which remained on exhibition at his home for some time, before it was found to be an opossum. This is the first one that has ever been known to be caught in this part of the country, being found chiefly in the Southern States. It is whitish-gray in color and the hair is soft and wool-like. Its tail is similar to that of the monkey, thus enabling it to swing from branch to branch of the tree where it lives. It feeds on birds' eggs and small reptiles. It is about the size of a large cat and is the only animal in America which has a pouch for carrying the young. The trap was set a short distance from the water on the government reforestation farm and how the animal came to this country remains a mystery. Mr. Parsons intends having it mounted.

Capital Honors V. C. 8 Winners

TORONTO HONORS EIGHT MEN WHO WON COVETED DECORATION DURING DAYS OF GREAT WAR

Lieutenant Rayfield, of Pontypool, Among Those Honored By Ontario's Capital.

CIVIC WELCOME.

Before War Rayfield Farmed Near Los Angeles, Now Prefers Durham.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—Ten years after the day of victory Toronto paid tribute yesterday to eight Canadian holders of the Victoria Cross, five of whom are Toronto men who gained ofr the Canadian corps much of the reputation it enjoys.

The guns are silent, but still Canada's V.C.'s "carry on" with that strength of character wherein was found the secret of their courage in no man's land. The same qualities which enabled them to adapt themselves to warfare, have enabled them to "come through" in the often no less trying exigencies of peace and readjustment.

About these men still lingers some of the glory of their baptism of fire. For each is a holder of the Victoria Cross, and it was to the cenotaph that thier steps were directed yesterday after a civic reception tendered by the mayor and board of control and council at 12.30 p.m.

At the reception at the city hall, Mayor McBride read the following brief address:

"We are gathered here to-day to do honor to eight soldiers, winners of the Victor. Cross in the great war, who distinguished themselves in the presence of the enemy for outstanding bravery and valor, and have had the honor conferred upon them of being decorated with the Victoria Cross.

"The Victoria Cross is the outcome of a perronal desire of the late Queen Victoria to reward bravery among our fighting men The Victoria Cross is the most coveted award in any of the services of war. It takes precedence over all other decorations. The Victoria Cross is cast from pieces captured from the enemy. Neither rank, nor long service, nor wounds affect the award—the act of bravery alone counts.

"The eight men who can but will not tell waht they endured during the war—men who fought for you and me, morning, noon and night, up to their knees in the muck and mire, in warm and cold weather, in snow and rain, through shot and shell, sick and sore, doing acts of bravery to help others, never knowing when they might be the next to fall—

"The eight super-soldiers, who did their duty, who risked all for for king and country, are with us to-day—

"An' I can assure you that it is an honor for me to have the privilege and pleasure of introducing them to you.

YOUTHS PLAY MANY PRANKS

Considerable Damage Was Done at Madoc on Hallowe'en.

PRINCIPAL ILL.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Nov. 6 — Hallowe'en pranks of last week appear to be many and in some cases considerable damage was done. Gates were carried off, swings upset, fences pulled to pieces, flag poles taken down and broken, and chalk messages appear on sidewalks, doors, school property and elsewhere. The main streets were filled with rolls of wire, wagons, etc., but most of the damage appears to have been readily repaired.

Principal Seriously Ill

He was removed to his home but later taken to Belleville General Hospital, for an operation. The operation was performed on Thursday and while entirely successful, was more serious than expected.

JAPAN WILL ACCLAIM NEW RULER TO-DAY

Hirohito, 124th Emperor, Will Celebrate Formal Ascension to Throne.

TOKIO IN GAY ATTIRE.

Streets Lined With Triumphal Towers—Royalty Will Take Part.

TOKIO, Nov. 6. — (Associated Press).—Japan last night was on the eve of a great national event. To-day millions of Japanese will acclaim a new ruler, Hirohito, 124th Emperor of Japan, setting forth from the capital on his imperial progress to formal enthronement. At Kyote the Emperor will celebrate his formal accession to the "throne of a lineal descent unbroken for ages eternal."

Tokio already bears the aspect of a celebration which comes once in a generation. At nightfall scores of thousands of lanterns of brilliant designs lining the main street were lighted, and illuminated thousands of banners bearing such inscriptions as: "Banzai, Coeval with Heaven and Earth"; "Loyal subjects congratulations."

Towers Line Streets

There were triumphal towers of evergreens, scarlet and gilt, some decorated with representations of the sacred mirror and jewel.

At dark the police began to reinforce the great area enclosing the half mile route of to-day's procession from the palace to the station. Large contingents of police were on duty after 11 o'clock last night in this area, from which all vehicular traffic will be barred from 3 o'clock in the morning until the Imperial train departs at about eight o'clock.

Holiday crowds have gathered in the principal streets, thousands going without sleep last night to insure a glimpse of the brilliant spectacle. The large office buildings lining a section of the route were cleared out last night and all window shades drawn, as no one will be permitted to gaze upon the Emperor from above to-day.

The movement of the court to Kyote began last night several Princes and Princesses of the blood and high officials departed. The populace will be permitted to cheer the procession.

Marmora War Memorial Will Be Completed Early in December.

MARMORA, Nov. 6. —Work on Marmora's Memorial Hall, hampered for a while by adverse weather conditions, is now proceeding more rapidly, and some idea can now be formed of the ultimate beauty and serviceableness of the structure. This past week the bricklayers have been at work. The work is expected to be completed in the early part of December.

DEPARTMENT COMPLAINS OF WATER SUPPLY

Campbellford Council Decided Some Change Is Necessary, But Shelves Matter.

BUYS MOTOR.

Department Says Water Supply Places Citizens in Dangerous Position.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 6. —(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Whether or not the local water supply is to undergo radical change has not yet been definitely decided. Certain it is that some change will be brought about during the next few months. This was the decision of the council last night after reading a communication from the department of Public Health, Toronto. All members of the council were present to hear and discuss the matter. Shortly after the meeting had been opened, Miss Campbell, librarian, appeared in the council chamber to say that there was a decided smell of fire in the library rooms and she was unable to locate its source. The business was suspended while the odour was traced to a switch box which contained some heated apparatus. The blades of a switch were found to be unusually warm. A second occurrence of the same thing came about half an hour after.

After the minutes had been dealt with, Grant Anderson reminded the council that he had presented a petition for the construction of a water main and sewer on a section of Saskatoon Avenue. The work was to be done under the local improvement act. He also pointed out to the council that street water was running into the Trent Valley Cheese Factory whenever there was a heavy rain and he did not think it was quite proper when a cheese factory thought that it was not the duty was supposed to be clean. He also of the owners of the factory to care for the drainage of town water. The petition was received and referred to the clerk for verification and the matter of the water was left in the hands of the road and bridge committee.

Fred Dinwoodie, Rear Street, asked if the council intended to repair the sidewalk that he had brought to their attention early in the summer. He was told by the mayor that the work would have been done last Saturday but for the rain. It would be done the first warm day.

Among the communications was a letter from the Lindsay foundry and pattern works submitting a photograph of their catch basins and soliciting the business of the corporation. The letter was received and filed.

There was also an invitation from the local branch of the Canadian Legion to the council to attend the memorial service at the Cenotaph on Sunday afternoon. The invitation was received and the clerk instructed to draft a reply acknowledging receipt of the invitation

VETERANS PLAN ARMISTICE DAY

Parade Will Likely Be Held—Change in Hour of Services Expected.

HALLOWE'EN.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, November 6. — Plans are on foot for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of Armistice Day, the Lakefield Post of the Canadian Legion has the matter in hand, and it is likely that a parade will be held. The two minutes of silence will be observed as a community affair, when everyone will be united with a common memory and each will wear a scarlet poppy, the emblem of remembrance. It is probable that an alteration will be made in the hours of morni ; service in the village churches, so that the silence may be observed, not in separate groups, but as a unit.

Hallowe'en.

As usual, young folks were out promenading around the streets and calling at the houses where they received gifts of fruit and candy Some chose the later hours for their pranks, and some amusing tricks were played. Some, however, were not amusing, and involved a great deal of expense. Crossings were torn up and fences pulled down. One must feel that the humor of putting barricades on the roads is rather overdone. Harmless jokes which endanger neither life nor property belong to the season.

FATHER SAVES HIS CHILDREN FROM INFERNO

May Cost North Bay Man His Life—Children Are Safe.

RUSHES INTO FLAMES.

He is Now Fighting Courageously in Hospital, Happy Family is Safe.

NORTH BAY, Nov. 6.—With what doctors describe as "one chance in a thousand," George Ferguson, Kerns Township farmer, was last night fighting for his life in the New Liskeard Hospital, a martyr to the gallant spirit that thrice drove him into a roaring inferno early Sunday morning to effect the rescue of three of his young sons, Lloyd, aged 12; Ernest, 8, and Hugh, 5. In the same institution are the lads who owe their lives to their father's heroic action.

On of the boys, Lloyd is in a very serious condition, but will probably recover, but there is a possibility that he may be blind, as his eyes were badly burned. The other two children, provided complications do not set in, will recover.

According to belated news of the tragedy, which arrived here yesterday afternoon, Ferguson awoke about 3 o'clock to find his home transformed into a roaring inferno. Sleeping with him on the top floor were his three sons. Thinking that he could arouse them, he shouted the alarm and then ran downstairs to where his wife and four little daughters were asleep. Within a few moments he had succeeded in getting Mrs. Ferguson and the children into the open air. But even in this brief span the fire had gained considerable more headway, and flames were sweeping up and down the stairs, fanned by the draught caused by the open doors and windows.

Dashes Into Flames

Blind to his own danger, Ferguson fought his way to the head of the stairs, where he fell across the unconscious form of his first born, Lloyd. Picking up the youth, Ferguson staggered down the stairs. On emerging into the open air, he found that neighbors had arrived, but none dared emulate Ferguson's feat. On depositing his precious burden on the ground Ferguson heeded not the pleas of the neighbors to give up the struggle, but again went back into the house.

As he entered, part of the roof collapsed and no one who witnessed the affair expected him to emerge alive. But he did, even though he had been transformed into a living torch and though not a hair was left on his head and in his arms was his second son, Ernest, unconscious from smoke, but no seriously burned.

Neighbors Pray

Realizing the futility of trying to reason with him, some of those who had gathered went to their knees and commenced to pray as Ferguson, without taking a moment's respite, went back into the nouse to save the youngest son. On his hands and knees he grouped in the intense heat and the agonizing fumes until finally he found the baby crouching beneath the burning mattress. With the flames snapping at his feet and searing his body, Ferguson staggered down the stairs with the child in his arms and then collapsed as the kind-hearted farmers wrapped the child in oil-soaked blankets.

Thoughtful farmers' wives immediately anointed with oil the charred and blackened body of the father, and then bundled the four pain-wracked bodies into hastily requisitioned automobiles and commenced the journey of six miles to New Liskeard, where Doctors Farlinger and McCullough, informed in advance of what had happened, had hastily made arrangements for their reception at the hospital.

Government Dredge Completes Work Near Hastings For Winter.

BOY INJURED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Nov. 6—The Government Dredge which has been operating here for about four weeks, left on Friday evening for Peterborough where it will be docked for the winter. A large quantity of rock has been removed from the bed of the river just below the bridge and dam, in order that a better head of water would be available for generating electric power. The work is still incomplete, but owing to high water and bad weather, nothing more can be done until Spring.

Serious Accident

Master Kenneth Doonan met with a serious and painful accident on Friday afternoon while riding a bicycle along Albert street. He was thrown from the bicycle on to the pavement, breaking his knee-cap and receiving a number of bruises. The injured boy was rushed to the office of Dr. W. N. Campbell for treatment. Yesterday he was resting quietly, and his many friends regret that he will be confined to the house for several days.

It has been said that the quality of our sleep is largely determined by our last thoughts before going to bed at night.

King and Queen Will Attend Ceremony in Royal Estate.

WARM DEBATES.

Legislative Program Will Be Dealt With Briefly in King's Speech.

LONDON, November 6 (Associated Press). — The last session of the present British Parliament opens to-day at Westminster, with the King and Queen present in state on their throne chairs in the House of Lords.

The ordinary Londoner's share in the show is a glimpse of their Majesties rolling through the troop-lined streets from Buckingham Palace to Westminster in the great state coach of glittering glass and gold with marching Beefeaters from the Tower of London to guard them

From to-day until next spring, when a national election campaign will be in full swing here, British political parties, Conservative, Liberal and Labor, will jockey for positions of advantage before the country's voters.

The legislative program for the winter months will be dealt with briefly in the speech from the throne to-day, but few measures of great international interest are expected to occupy the Commons during the session. Important debates on international questions, however, are certain to centre public interest on the Commons shortly after the session begins. The Anglo-French naval agreement will draw the fire of its critics in the House, but this question will not be raised until the return of Sir Austin Chamberlain, the Secretary of the Foreign Office, whose health has been restored as a result of his tour in the West Indies, California and Canada. Sir Austen is expected in London about the middle of November.

The battle over protection and free trade will provide numerous encounters during the session. The Baldwin Government is charged with planning to extend its "safe-guarding" policy to iron and steel. Liberal leaders particularly will challenge the Government on this issue, demanding a clear-cut statement of the Government's intention.

The Baldwin Government returns to Westminster with its huge majority intact. Liberals and Laborites plan to make the final session of the present Parliament as critical as possible for the Conservatives under the present Prime Minister.

White Teeth Deceive 4 out of 5 BECAUSE . . Pyorrhea attacks the gums

SO many people think they are secure when teeth are gleaming white. But too often they are fooled.

Lurking behind clean teeth is the marauder that takes high toll in health from 4 persons out of 5 after forty, and thousands younger —dread Pyorrhea. It ignores the teeth and attacks the gums.

Take this precaution: See your dentist every six months. And start using the dentifrice that cleans teeth without the use of harsh abrasives and at the same time helps keep the gums firm and healthy—the best safeguard against Pyorrhea.

Morning and night, every day, use Forhan's for the Gums. Massage your gums daily with this dentifrice, following directions in booklet that comes with tube. Then you provide the protection teeth and gums must have. At all druggists—in tubes, 35c and 60c.

The MODERN BEDROOM Strikes a Note ENTIRELY ITS OWN

THE bedroom of our day is no longer merely a place to sleep in. It is something more .. a room where you can indulge your self-expression to the utmost . . . where your pet theories of decoration have a real chance to blossom forth. We have found how delightfully the various grades and qualities of Barrymore Rugs fit into the most modish bedroom scheme. The colors in the rugs . . . lovely . . . subtle . . . the thick, soft pile (which wears like iron) adding so greatly to the luxurious comfort of the room.

Look at your bedrooms with a critical eye. Picture each room carpeted with a Barrymore. Then visit any leading store and learn the moderate sum it would cost to bring new beauty to your upper floors.

News has reached Mrs. Andrew Forest, Gilmour Street, that the body of her nephew, Private Alexander Goodal, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who was reported missing in the Great War on August 18, 1916, has been found and identified.

The following letter was received from the Imperial War Graves Commission, dated October 3:

"Madam,—I am directed to inform you that it has now been possible to identify the burial place of Private A. Goodal.

"In the course of the work of removing the bodies of soldiers who were buried in isolated or scattered graves to cemeteries where the graves could be cared for and maintained, the body of an unknown British soldier of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders was found in the vicinity of High Wood, and the remains were carefully and reverently buried in Serre Road Cemetery, No. 2 Beamont Hamel, Plot 5, Row F, Grave 7.

"When the removal was carried out pieces of a telegram bearing his name in a damaged pocket case marked 'A.G.' were found, thus proving the body found is his."

ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED

War Memorial Service To Be Held at Campbellford On Sunday.

CADETS IN PARADE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 6.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence)—(Arrangements are all but completed for the memorial service to be held at the war memorial on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The local branch of the Canadian Legion headed by the band will march from the Armouries at half past two. The line of march leads along Tice street to Front Street, thence north of the market where the boy scouts and girl guides will join the parade. The High school cadets will be present in uniform. For the legionaires and other veterans, dress is optional as regards mufti and medals or uniform. The Northumberland Regimental band will be in uniform and will play the music for the service as well as for the parade. Major, the Reverend J. F. Belford, Codrington, will be the clergyman who delivers the address. Four trumpeters will sound the last post.

It is the intention of the Legion to make the service an annual affair, and to make it one of the most impressive events in the annals of the community. The committee in charge of the service are the Rev. N. Clarke Wallace, J. R. Wilkinson and Major A. T. Linton.

DEPARTMENT COMPLAINS

and stating that the council would attend.

The next letter was from A. W. Robertson and Company, submitting prices on two grates as requested for covers to drain inlets. The price was twenty-five dollars for the two, and a motion to purchase was carried.

Motors for Sale

There was also a letter pointing out to the Council that there were several motors for sale at reasonable prices. Among these was the one which the corporation had been using on their gravel crusher. The price of this motor was fixed at $300. After some discussion, it was considered by the Council as a good piece of business to purchase the motor, since there would be much rent saved and the motor was particularly adapted to the use required. A motion to purchase the motor, at the price stated, was passed.

A letter from the Orillia Board of Trade asking the Council to pass a resolution favoring the alteration of the dates of the Canadian National Exhibition, was laid on the table. The letter recommended that the fair be held one week late, with the view of extending the tourist season another seven days. It was believed that the tourist season was virtually over when the C.N.E. started. After considering the fact that many school children and students would not be able to attend should the date be changed and that the local and district fall fairs would be affected, it was decided to take no action in regard to the matter.

Water Supply Bad

The letter from the Department of Public Health called forth the greatest discussion of the evening. An inspector from the department had visited the town and expressed his opinion of the water supply situation as placing the citizens of the town in a "most unfavorable and dangerous situation." It was pointed out that the water system was primarily and apparently exclusively for fire prevention purposes. But it appeared that the water was also being used for domestic purposes. There was also a supposition that hotels and resturants were using the water for drinking purposes. This was decidedly dangerous as shown by an analysis of the water. It was pointed but that the water intake was below the business section of the town and not above it, and that the water might probably be polluted. The water was not chlorinated but pumped directly from the rived to the mains. The installation of a chlorine system would not be entirely satisfactory to the department but it would at least protect any who might drink the water, not knowing that it was not for drinking purposes.

There were other communications referring to the same matter and when these had been read, there was considerable discussion as to the best method to install. Finally it was decided that the work could not be done immediately and that a reply be sent to the department to that effect, and also stating that the council was strongly in favor of the measures they had advised and that the work would be commenced as soon as possible; it would be referred to the 1929 Council.

Two by-laws passed. The first provided for the assessment of certain property abutting the pavement under the local improvement act, the land owners paying twenty per cent and the corporation the remaining eighty. The second by-law was an agreement between the town and S. Buckland to allow the town to enter his property for the purpose of making such alterations to Trout Creek as might be necessary to prevent a flood similar to that this year.

The business of major importance ended, a few minor matters were briefly discussed. Among these were the repairs to a railing that had become badly weathered in parts, the painting of crossing strips at the two main intersections, and alterations to the high sidewalk in front of Harry Bleaker's residence.

It was considered too late in the season to alter the sidewalk as suggested. None of the council could recall having passed a motion granting $25.00 to the bacon hog fair, and no motion for 1928 was found in the minutes. although the members of the council recalled the visit of the district agricultural representative The matter of checkerboard signs was left in the hands of Deputy-Reeve Davidson.

After passing the accounts, the council adjourned at twenty minues past ten.

THE COST OF DEMOCRACY.

Two items in yesterday's papers seem to indicate that the cost of democracy, as it is found in the United States, is on the increase.

The first dealt with the expenditures of the two chief parties, showing that the expense of the election to Republicans and Democrats will be over nine million dollars, a sizable sum even in that land of big money.

And the second told of the elaborate precautions that are being taken in Chicago to-day to prevent election infractions and incidentally to guard the lives of the voters.

An army of 15,000 poll-watchers, the largest number of officials and volunteer guards ever considered necessary at an election in Chicago, will endeavor to prevent kidnapping, sluggings and ballot-box stuffing.

What an indictment of civilization as they know it in the Windy City that the "free and independent electorate" cannot go to the polling booths and register their votes without the protection of thousands of guards!

The Canadian people will prefer their own particular brand of democracy as less expensive and less dangerous.

THE SAFEGUARDING OF EMPLOYEES.

"The safeguarding of industries has been made a live topic by the press in the past few months," says H. B. Morley, general manager, Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, "but hardly enough attention has been given to safeguarding of employees in industry." He states that October has established a new "high" for all time in total number of accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board in any one month. In October there were 8,278 accidents reported to the board, 51 of which were fatal. This figure tops the total for October, 1927, by more than 1,600 reports. Benefits awarded last month, which included a number of heavy cost cases, totalled $707,471.31, of which $114,654.47 was for medical aid.

Death cases have reached 466 in ten months of 1928 against 429 in the whole of 1927. This year's figures are, of course, swollen by the Hollinger fire in the spring and the recent Manasoo disaster. On the other hand, Mr. Morley points out that there is every indication that the fatality experience of the classes of industry in the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations will show little, if any, change in 1928. Up to date the record of deaths in those classes, which represent about two-thirds of the payroll in Schedule 1, is 42 cases in 1928 against 38 in 1927.

ABOLISH THIS TAX.

At a recent meeting of the theatre owners of Ontario a resolution was passed calling upon the Ontario Government to entirely eliminate the Amusement Tax, so far as it falls upon patrons of motion picture theatres, adding that "such a policy would meet with the general approval of the people of this Province."

The Examiner feels that is undoubtedly true, that the majority of people would welcome the lifting of this tax as applied to motion picture houses where the admission charge is low as compared with that made by the legitimate theatre.

The "movies" offer the chief amusement for the bulk of our population, and the burden represented by this form of entertainment should be made as light as possible.

It is scarcely fair to class the motion picture theatre as a luxury; in the sense that amusement is required and is of benefit, the "movies" are a necessity, and there is a general feeling that the tax, already taken off 25c admissions, should be eliminated altogether in the case of motion picture theatres.

In the United States it has been abolished except on tickets of $3.00 or higher, and there is not much justification for it being retained in Ontario where, according to motion picture theatre owners, the Government makes an annual profit of $40,000 above the cost of inspection, censorship and other services for theatres, out of the seat tax and censorship fees collected from the theatre owners.

That is to say, the Government has no need of the Amusement Tax in meeting any expense undertaken in regard to the motion picture business in this Province.

WHY NOT TELL THE PUBLIC?

The Globe, in response to a flood of letters inquiring why it is not censuring Premier Ferguson because of the omission of such names as those of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Oliver Mowat from the book, "Great Men of Canada," authorized for use in Ontario's Public Schools, points out that as early as October 8th it called attention to the absence of these famous names, and adds:

"The Globe was privately, but immediately and officially, assured that the book in question was but the earlier of two volumes, in the later of which justice was to be done to Laurier, Mowat and others, such as Whitney and Beck."

If that explanation had been made publicly when the first volume was issued much controversy would have been avoided.

The Examiner, in common with other Ontario newspapers, felt that the book was unfair by reason of the omission of outstanding figures in Canada's history, and we had no reason, in the absence of any official statement, to know that another volume was being issued.

It was a stupid mistake on the part of those responsible to allow the public to think that an injustice was being done, and if Premier Ferguson feels that he has been the subject of unwarranted criticism he must realize that he has only himself to blame.

There is no reason why the appearance of the first book should not have been accompanied by the announcement that a second volume was to follow, and such a statement would have prevented the criticism that has been voiced throughout the Province

A TOAST TO CANADA.

A few weeks ago R. C. Smith, president of the advertising firm of R. C. Smith & Co., was called upon to respond to the toast "To Canada" at a large banquet of business men. His reply was so inspiring and happy in expression that The Examiner reproduces it;

"Canada"

The world's new Eldorado—

With streets paved with gold—

Where a railway is ballasted with silver—

Valleys strewn with copper, and

Solid mountains of coal—

Iron sufficient to build all the skyscrapers in the universe, and

Asbestos to roof them—

Nickel to burnish up the handles on the big front doors and supply the world's electricians with a metal that will not corrode—

Millions of acres covered with the very finest building timber and forests that supply the world's newsprint—

Rivers that will create power to turn every wheel on the continent—

As the black coal of Pennsylvania is depleted, Canada's White Coal will transform the factories of the northern hemisphere and transfer the centre of industry from the south to the north—

Fisheries unsurpassed anywhere on the globe—

Foothills teeming with cattle and sheep that will feed the hungry and clothe the myriads of Europe—

Wheat fields that are the granaries and envy of the world—

Uncounted millions of acres of open, fertile soil awaiting men who are willing to work and anxious to make a home for themselves—

The "land of hope and glory," where all men are equal, and all men have the same chance—

Where liberty of conscience is supreme and equal justice prevails for all—

Whose native sons and daughters, the product of universities and workshop alike, are in demand as executives in all other countries of the world—

In short, the land that is now, and always will be, a growing market for the manufacturer who intelligently cultivates it.

THE BEST ASSET.

The Hon. William H. Price, attorney-general of Ontario, has launched a discussion that will no doubt be taken up all over the province and that may result in a complete change in the existing system for handling youthful law-breakers.

Colonel Price believes—and he will have many to agree with him—that it is a serious mistake to impose court convictions and perhaps prison sentences on boys and girls convicted or minor first offences. Instead he would have them taken home and given friendly but firm advice regarding their wrongdoing. The attorney-general believes that the youth of Ontario is the chief asset of the province. It is a fine thing, he says, to take a boy from within prison walls and rehabilitate him, but it is a much finer thing to halt a youth on the prison steps, before he gets inside; to turn his footsteps in the other direction before the stigma of jail has been placed upon him, and give him a chance to make good He does not believe it wise to register convictions against the youth of the country for first offenses of the average small type. Let us quote the colonel in this connection:

"I have given two years of thought to this question, and I am deadly serious about it. I am prepared to make a right for what I believe is right against any and all opposition.

"The gesture which the State makes to a boy on his first offense should be one of kindliness rather than a gesture of mailed fist and the clanking of prison doors, even before he is convicted.

"Stop these boys and girls! Stop them on the threshold of prison. They will prove greater assets for the future life of the country if stopped that way than if we convicted them and then suspended sentence, as is often done.

"It's too big a thing to be shoved into the discard because of any personal criticism. And it is not merely a question of whether my views are bona fide or not. It will have to be approached on a large scale, and it will have to be thougnt out carefully."

The attorney-general makes the further suggestion that the idea should be discussed by social service organizations and service clubs throughout the province, and probably it will be. It goes without saying, of course, that the Legislature will hear of the matter.

The chief point made by Colonel Price is that of protecting from further error the youth who has made a slight false step. This end, he feels, cannot be achieved by court conviction. In its details, the Price plan, it is assumed, will call for extension of supervision by probation officers to young people up to 18, instead of 16, and an amendment of the statute. Colonel Price does not propose that juvenile courts should deal with offenders older than 16, as at present. He is convinced that young first offenders ought not to be incarcerated in a jail cell, or even a detention home, before they are found guilty, but left in their own homes, as long as these are fit places, prior to their hearing. Furthermore, except in serious cases, there should not be convictions of young first offenders.

The attorney-general has opened up an important subject and his efforts will be watched with widespread interest. There are those who believe in harsh methods in dealing with juvenile deliquency, but it is probable that they are greatly in the minority. How much more important it is, from the standpoint of the state, that erring youth should be turned from the wrong path and given a chance to make good before, as Colonel Price says, the stigma of police court has been laid upon it. If we forget entirely the humanitarian side of the picture—and can we forget it?—it becomes a matter of sound business to save every possible boy and girl from a career of crime. Criminals do not produce and they are a burden on the state. The obvious thing, then, is to use every means to prevent the creation of criminals. And it wuld seem that Colonel Price's suggestions, in this regard, have great merit and deserve the most serious consideration—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The last shots in the United States campaign were fired to-day. And the word "shots" is used advisedly.

In one respect the presidential battle is normal. Both sides yesterday were confident of victory.

The warm welcome extended by the Canadian Government to Sir William Clark, first British High Commissioner to Canada, will be echoed by the whole Canadian people.

The silence at Queen's Park in regard to the real essence of the Brien charges remains unbroken.

The Question Box

H. W.—Q. Where was Rupert's Land?

A.—Rupert's Land was the portion of the Northwest Territories purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company by the Canadian Government in 1869 for £300,000 out of which was afterward carved the province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta were formed from the additional territory of the Northwest and there is enough land area outside the three provinces to create three more if and when population might warrant it.

W. S.—Q. Where and what is the U. P. Ranch?

A.—The U. P. Ranch is a 6,000 acre area at the foot of the Rocky Mountains in Alberta, owned by the Prince of Wales, which he acquired eight years ago and where he has a heard of pure grade live stock which has won many prizes. His Royal Highness has twice visited his Canadian property. It is understood it is now a paying investment.

GOD'S MINUTE.

As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee.—Matt. 8:13.

Our Father in Heaven, as children come to an earthly parent, so we, Thy children, come to Thee. We acknowledge Thy goodness in keeping us in safety during the night, and in the mercies renewed to us with the return of the day. While we have been locked in slumber, Thou hast not suffered any harm to befall us. We have lain us down in peace and slept because Thou hast sustained us, and the morning of a new day finds us with renewed vigor for its labor and toil.

As the day brings to us fresh obligations, fit us for their discharge. As new temptations make their appeal to us, strengthen us for their resistance. In new battles we may have to fight, lead us to victory. Fortify us against the evil we may have to meet, and make us responsive to every uplifting and helpful influence. May the evil tendencies in our nature constantly grow less insistent. May the spirit of love to Thee and to all become the fixed characteristic of our lives.

Accept our gratitude for daily renewed mercies. Give us pardon for all our sins. Keep us as a family from harm and evil to-day, and when our days on earth are past, bring us to the Heavenly home. We ask it in Christ's name. Amen.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 6. — Cows are moving freely on the morning market. All classes of butchers are selling steady to a good demand. A stronger feeling seems to be near, as purchases are readily taken with little bargaining at unchanged levels.

Choice butchers steers sell at $9 to $9.50, with best quality higher. Choice heifers are $8.50 to $9.50. The run is chiefly made up or common and medium, which sell between $6.50 to $7.50

Canners and cutters are moving first at steady prices, selling from $4 to $5. Choice cows bring $7 to $8.25.

Demand for stockers and feeders shows no decrease. A stronger feeling is in evidence. Prices bid are higher than last week, and it looks as if bottom has been reached. Choice stockers steers $8.50 to $9.25.

Quality of veal is poor, a real good one will touch $14.50, but bulk is turned over at $13.50. Grassers $7 to $9.

Only one small buyer of lambs has as yet placed an offer. Some length of time will elapse before a settlement will be reached. Choice lambs took 50c to 75c lower at $11 to $11.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—Clearing the decks for the election holiday to-day, together with smallness of increase of visible supply figures, did much yesterday to send wheat prices up. Furthermore, complaints were received of rust and of undue moisture in northern Argentine.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, ⅝ to ¾c to 1c net higher. Corn finished at ⅜c decline to a shade advance, oats a shade to ⅛ to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 30 cents.

Evening-up of accounts constituted a large part of the dealings yesterday in wheat future deliveries, and most of the evening-up was in the way of buying on the part of speculators who heretofore had been sellers. The effect of this buying, especially near the close, was emphasized because of simultaneous scarcity of offerings and as a result of the United States wheat visible supply total showing an increase of but 1,025,000 bushels for the week, whereas a good deal larger increase had in most quarters been looked for.

Wheat prices advances yesterday were in the face of the fact that export demand for North American wheat appeared to be virtually at a halt. However, the Liverpool wheat market was showing unexpected relative firmness, despite 7,000,000 bushels increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage. Special significance, too, was attached to Argentine reports of rust and excessive moisture, the northern section of Argentina, where the reports came from, being the territory in which the wheat crop is at a critical stage, with cutting expected to begin about the middle of this month.

Corn values, although at first inclined to advance, turned easier afterward on account of favorable weather for husking and for the movement of new corn. Considerable notice, however, was taken of a statement by Secretary Jardine renewing advocacy of the use of 50,000,000 bushels additional corn this season in the feeding of livestock.

Another steadying factor was an estimate that the 1928 corn crop in Europe is 25 per cent less than last year. Oats trade was narrow.

Provisions reflected an upturn in the value of hogs.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.85 13-16 to ⅞.
Cables $4.85¼ to 5-16.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—The demand from the United Kingdom and the Continent for grain here yesterday was again of a limited character. Only a small trade was done in wheat and barley.

The local cash grain market was without any special feature to note, prices being steady with a moderate demand.

A fair amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat flour, and values were firm.

The millfeed market was active and firm. A good trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats, and prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the egg situation continued firm owing to the good demand and the small supplies available. Receipts were 642 cases.

Some weakness developed in the potato market and values were one to five cents lower. Green Mountains sold at 83c per 90 lb. bag, and at 65c for 90 lbs. in bulk, while Prince Edward Island whites sold at 74c per 90 lb. bag, and Cobblers in bulk sold at 60c per 90 lbs., ex-track.

Choice white grades of imported beans remained firm at 8¾c per lb, or $5.25 per bushel.

Teh undertone to the butter market was stronger and prices scored an advance of ¼c per lb. which was attributed to the continued good demand. Receipts were 467 packages.

A fair amount of business was done with local and foreign buyers in cheese, and values were well maintained. Receipts were 3,261 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—While there was no general increase in activity in the local butter market on the resumption of trading yesterday, the outlook for the week was obscure. In a jobbing way sales were reported at fractionally higher prices than those obtainable at the close of last week. Spot transactions were settled on a basis of from 40c to 40¼c per lb. for fancy stocks, which is an advance of ¼c per lb. on the day's dealings. Whether the recent upward progress in the butter movement is permanent remains to be seen. Increased buying last week helped the market in its upward climb. Inquiry for finest creamery just now does not appear to be any greater than was anticipated, however, and some market quarters were talking of a return to lower prices yesterday, in the face of the firmness which now seems to prevail.

Nothing unusual has yet evoked a greater demand for cheese, and this division of produce drags along slowly, with no quotable change in price reported at the week's opening market. Nominal quotations on spot for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and government-graded range from 21¼c to 22c per lb., delivered basis, steady with the previous week's close. Country cheese boards were not active over the week-end, and demand on spot is limited.

Fresh-egg shipments are growing smaller, and prices for all grades of strictly fresh continue to occupy a firm position in the country produce field. Domestic consumptive demand is good, and the future course of prices will depend on this as a chief factor, and also on the curtailed supply of current production.

A Thought

SOUND ADVICE

A wife should never stand in the way of the life insurance which is her only protection from privation and poverty. On the contrary, she should demand it. She should insist that it be regarded not as an investment, but as a necessity. It must come before luxuries such as super-millinered bonnets for the wife and cigars for the husband. It should come before the savings bank account. In fact, it should arrive with the wedding present. A husband who cannot afford to put a policy of insurance into the hands of his bride is too poor to buy a marriage license or pay the wedding fee.—Collier's Weekly.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND MAZIE'S MIRROR.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

One day, about a week after Curly Twistytail had by mistake chewed on an icicle instead of a carrot he thought he was eating, Uncle Wiggily started to hop over the fields and through the woods to see if he could find an adventure.

"Tra, la, la!" sang the rabbit gentleman as he skipped along. And then he began to notice that there were many animal boys and girls running around, playing tag, riding on roller skates, looking for snow in the shady places to make balls to throw at one another and Mr. Longears said to himself:

"This is very strange! The children should be at school. It is past 9 o'clock and they will be late if they don't hurry."

But none of the animal boys and girls seemed in any hurry to go to the Hollow Stump School to say their lessons to the Lady Mouse Teacher. And even Uncle Wiggily's own little bunnies were playing around with the others.

"Why don't you go to school?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"'Cause there isn't any school!" cried half a dozen at once.

"Why not?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"'Cause this is Election Day and there isn't any school!" said a dozen voices this time.

"Oh, surely enough! So it is!" said Uncle Wiggily. "I had forgotten. And I must myself go and vote for a President before I have fun looking for adventures." So Uncle Wiggily found an old oak tree where Mr. Stubtail, the bear gentleman, had made a ballot box and there Uncle Wiggily voted for a President and then he felt better and knew he would have a good time looking for adventures. The animal boys and girls went on with their play as Uncle Wiggily hopped away.

But pretty soon, as Mr. Longears was getting ready to jump over the little brook which was frozen tight in the ice, he heard a voice calling after him:

"Unkie Wig! Unkie Wig! Wait a minute!"

"That must be Baby Bunty," thought Mr. Longears and he stopped his jump so suddenly that he landed in the middle of the brook. But as it was frozen he didn't fall into the water, just sliding along the ice, which was fun.

When he had reached the end of his slide Uncle Wiggily looked back and saw, running toward him, two funny little creatures whom he knew to be Wogglejigs. They were made of wooden balls and wooden pegs put together. One of the Wogglejigs was a little girl named Mazie and the other was her sister Dazie. They lived in a house called a Bungleump, which was partly a bungalow and partly a stump.

"Oh, hello Mazie and Dazie," said Uncle Wiggily, for he knew the Wogglejigs, having met them in the summer.

"Hello!" said Mazie and Dazie. And Dazie added: "I'm glad you waited for us to catch up to you, 'cause we want to ask you something."

"What do you want to ask me?" inquired Uncle Wiggily as he twinkled his pink nose. "If it's about voting for a President, yes I have."

"Oh, no, it wasn't about that," said Dazie. "I wanted to ask if you had any chocolate candy?"

"No," said Uncle Wiggily, "I am sorry to say I have none."

"Oh, dear!" sighed Dazie.

"Then maybe you have a little mirror, or looking glass," said Mazie.

"No, I haven't a mirror, either," answered Uncle Wiggily. "Why do you want a mirror, Mazie?"

"So I can see if my head is on straight," answered the little Wogglejig girl. And Mr. Longears knew that often the Wogglejigs got put together wrong, or upside down, on account of being made of loose pieces of wooden pegs and balls.

And then, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily happened to think of a candy store not far away.

"Come with me," he called to the Wogglejig girls. "You shall have some chocolate, Dazie," and quickly hopping along the path Mr. Longears, followed by Mazie and Dazie, was soon at the sweets shop as our English cousins call a candy store.

"There you are, Dazie," said Uncle Wiggily, giving the little Wogglejig girl a large chocolate bar. "There's your treat."

"But what about my mirror?" asked Mazie, and Uncle Wiggily said:

"Your mirror and Dazie's candy are there together!" The two little wooden girls looked and looked, but saw no looking glass, and Mr. Longears said: "I'll show you the mirror."

FORMER RESIDENT HAS MADE GOOD

H. A. Johnston, Former Employee of The Examiner, Owns Large Bakery.

The story of how a former employee of The Peterborough Examiner, in the person of H. A. Johnston, has progressed since taking up residence in Rochester, N.Y., is most interestingly told in the Tenth Ward Courier of that city. He has many acquaintances in Peterborough and is known to summer visitors and residents as an annual visitor to his summer home on Loon Lake.

The Courier goes back to the year of 1911 and traces Mr. Johnston's business career from the time when he began a small grocery business, turned to the bakery business and from a humble beginning developed the reputation of the Kleen Bakery to such an extent that several removals to large quarters were made necessary on several occasions.

Finally, it tells of his new Sanitary Bakery, to be formally opened in the near future, with a capacity of 4,000 loaves of bread a day, made possible by the installation of most modern methods and equipment in ideal quarters. Mr. Johnston's affiliation with numerous out-door clubs is mentioned. His success as a citizen of the tenth ward of Rochester has been a gratifying one.

LYRICS OF LIFE

HOW SHALL I LOOK?

Woman is funny, isn't she?—
Saying, "How will this look on me?"
When what she means, if Gram or Mis,
Is really, "How shall I look in this?"
How will this collar look on her—
No, how shall she look in lavendar?
When she takes a gown from a hook or shelf,
How—no, how shall she look herself?

I wish that mirrors would more than show
Flounce and ribbon and sash and bow,
How we look in this, how we look in that,
Green or yellow, or dress or hat.
How do we look, is all we ask,
When we wear a formal, or blouse, or basque;
But now do we look when we wear a frown,
With our nose turned up, or our mouth turned down?

Woman is funny, as strange as man—
It seems it's only the clothes we scan;
But a quiet air and a helpful smile
Are things that never go out of style.
They make our pink and our lavender
Look just a little bit lovelier.
What matters, whatever we stitch or hem,
Is really how we shall look in them.

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC by JACK MULHALL

Featured with Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good," a First National Picture

2.—The Mysterious Pellets. Illustrating method of holding the fourth pellet concealed at base of little finger. This is, of course, held so that it is invisible to spectators.

The conjurer exhibits three small pellets of paper rolled into balls about the size of a pea.

He tosses them carelessly on the table and then with right hand picks them up and places them in left hand. That is, he picks up two of the pellets. The third he apparently tosses behind him, but after he has opened the left fist, three pellets still remain and are thrown on the table. This is repeated as many times as desired.

The secret lies in a fourth pellet of paper which is held concealed in the root of the thumb of right hand. Here is the modus operandi:

The three pellets are tossed on the table. The left hand is held palm open. The right thumb and fingers pick up one pellet and place it in left hand which is at once closed. The performer counts "one." Then he picks up the second pellet and places it in left hand which is opened and closed. He counts "two." However, this time he drops the concealed pellet into left hand with the visible one. Thus he already has three in left hand. Then he apparently throws away the third pellet with right hand but really keeps it concealed in the fingers. Then the three are tossed on table with left hand and the process repeated indefinitely. It is well to stand in a corner so that no one can see whether or not a pellet of paper is thrown away each time. If later an investigation is made, the spectators will still have no idea how it is done, if it has been well done.

WOULD CALL OUT TROOPS

Government Ready To Preserve Order in Tora' Trial.

JURY THREATENS TO QUIT.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 6 (Canadian Press).—With threats made against the jury hearing the case against Jose De Leon Toral, assassin of General Alvaro Obregon, and Mother Concepcion Aceveda De La Lataw, accused of being Toral's accomplice, the Government was ready to-day to call out the troops to preserve order. The jury has threatened to quit. Threats of death were hurled also at one of the defence attorneys when a group of men threw the courtroom into an uproar and shouted epithets, some of which were disparaging to Mother Concepcion.

LODGES ARE ENTERTAINED

Sons of England Are Hosts To Lodges From Lindsay and Port Hope.

BRO. PATCHING PRESENT.

The members of Lansdowne Lodge of the Sons of England had the privilege and pleasure of a visit last night by the supreme Vice-President Bro. R. Patching of Ottawa.

Durham Lodge of Port Hope, was well represented by Bro. Leckie, Worthy District Deputy Supreme Lodge officer and a large number of his fellow members, also a number of the brethren from Westminster Lodge, Lindsay, were present.

The regular lodge business was conducted by Bro W. W. Gray, President of Lodge Lansdowne, after which Bro. Patching was called upon to address the lodge. After conveying the good wishes of the Supreme Council and congratulating the members of the three lodges for their splendid turnout he pointed out in a very able address the fundamentals on which the Sons of England Benefit Society help maintain and preserve the Protestant faith, always keeping the is founded. First it is established to Bible as its rule of faith and conduct. Second, it is established to uphold and maintain British traditions and British connection. Third, to render financial assistance to members who are sick or in need. Around these three principles has grown a society that has a lodge in every city and almost every town in the Dominion of Canada. It is the devotion to these principles that has made Englishmen in Canada true Canadians, loyal to their Motherland and equally loyal to the land of their adoption." Brother Patching after speaking on these points gave many interesting facts concerning the work of the Supreme Council in its efforts to further the best interests of the society. A hearty vote of thanks, moved by Bro. A. Follis, was given to Bro. Patching for his splendid address.

After the lodge meeting had been brought to a close a large number of the members joined with the visiting lodges at the Paragon rooms and a banquet prepared by Bro. Coleman was served in the quiet, efficient manner for which the Paragon rooms are noted. The hour being late the toast list was short and included 'The King,' proposed by W. P. Bro. Gray and responded to by singing the National Anthem. "The Supreme Lodge," by Bro. Leckie of Lodge Durham, Port Hope, responded to by Supreme Vice President Bro. Patching. "The Visiting Brethren," proposed by Bro. E. A. Peck, M.P., and responded to by Bro. Calery of Lodge Westminster, Lindsay.

A vote of thanks to the members of Lansdowne Lodge who had entertained Bro. Patching during the afternoon by a motor ride around the city and vicinity, and a final expression of appreciation from Bro. Patching for the manner in which he had been entertained brought a very fine evening to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

During the regular business meeting messages of condolence were ordered to be sent to Bro. J. J. Turner and to the family of Edward Courtney in their sad bereavement.

ATTEMPT IS MADE TO HELP MARKET

Manitoba Is Taking Great Interest in Proposed Barley Research.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 6.—(By the Canadian Press).—Considerable interest is being manifested in the proposed barley research. The aim of the research is to widen the markets for Manitoba barley, which is now recognized as becoming important as a "cash" crop to the farmers of the province. The Manitoba Barley Research Committee, with C. H. Burnell as its chairman, and Prof. H. C. Grant, of the Manitoba Agricultural College, as its secretary, will soon begin its work in a laboratory designed specially for barley research. The chairman, Mr. Burnell is president of the Manitoba pool.

A careful study will be made of the market quantity and quality requirements of feeders of barley, of maltsters and manufacturers of barley products.

It is hoped that by taking more pains in the selection of seed of approved varieties and greater care in the preparation of the soil and the threshing of the crop, that Old country maltsters may become interested in Manitoba barley, especially in that grown in the Red River Valley, which is unusually low in protein content and therefore of more value for malting purposes.

The first paid "Marconigram" was dispatched by Lord Kelvin, who at the time was visiting Senator Marconi's experimental wireless station at the Needles, Isle of Wight.

The old snuff house in the Haymarket, London, with the sign of the Rasp and Crown, dates back more than 200 years.

CANADIANS' BOOKS READ THIS WEEK

This is Canadian Book Week. Of course, so far as the Library is concerned, every day in the week is Canadian Book Week, for every book written by a Canadian author is as accessible to the reader throughought the year as at this particular time. The object is, however, to make a special effort to bring our Canadian literature before the public in order that they may realize to how great an extent our literature is growing. But there is a greater purpose still and that is to emphasize the importance of reading Canadian books in order to instil a greater degree of patriotism in the hearts of our people. Our Canadian writers are not to be despised, by any means. Many of them have made a mark in the world and it is well that we should recognise this fact. No attempt has been made to place every book in the library on the table. There uathor have been selected and any information desired in regard to other works will be gladly supplied on enquiry.

YOUNG COUPLE ARE HONORED BY CLUB

Otonabee Young People Honor Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mather.

KEENE, Nov. 6 (Examiner Correspondence). — Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mather (nee Hazel Browne) were the guests of honor at a meeting of the Otonabee Young Peoples' Club, when presentations were made to the young couple. Mr. Mather is a splendid worker of the club, while Mrs. Mather, although living in Peterborough during the last two years, was well known in Keene, having lived there before her departure in Peterborough. After dancing had been under way for some time, Mr. and Mrs. Mather were given two presentations; one from the community and the other from the Young People's Club, and were accompanied by suitable addresses. Mr. Mather replied in a few words and thanked all those who had been so kind to them.

OMEMEE W.M.S. HOLDS MEETING

Women Will Hold Bazaar On November 22, Suggestions Received.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Nov. 6.—The Women's Missionary Society, of Trinity United Church held its monthly meeting in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. H. Lamb presided. Following the opening hymn and prayer, reports were given by the secretary, Mrs. E. Bradbury and the treasurer, Mrs. J. Shield. Mrs. G. Haygarth and Mrs. S. D. Vaughan consented to continue as the program committee for the month of December. It was the unanimous decision to send the two quilts on hand to Deaconess Home, Toronto. Suggestions relative to the Bazaar to be held on November 22, were called for. The ladies in charge of the booths requested that all articles be brought to the parsonage not later than Tuesday, November 20. The election of officers will be held next month. Mrs. Blanchard read the Scriptural reading after which the devotional leaflet was read by Miss L. Parsons. Mrs. S. D. Vaughan contributed to the program by giving a splendid synopsis of the new study book, "Drums in the Darkness," which deals with Africa. Rev. J. T. Blanchard, gave a solo, "Lord, Help Me Live for Others." The Misses Helen Johnson and Marion Rea gave a summary of the third chapter of the study book. These were intersepersed with missionary hymns. Mrs. Stalter, of Oshawa, spoke with a few words to the gathering. Rev. Mr. Blanchard closed the meeting with prayer, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. Shield, Mrs. A. Fee and Miss Lila Parsons.

Hallowe'en Pranks

Hollowe'en passed very quietly in Omemee, with no serious damage reported. The usual number of children appeared in costume, calling at the houses for gifts of candy. Constable A. Williamson and Reeve L. A. Southworth patrolled the streets and no doubt checked the removal of many articles which otherwise would have been misplaced.

District Churches

TRINITY CHURCH.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Nov. 6.—Trinity United Church Sunday School and Bible Classes were held on Sunday at 10 o'clock, when the world's temperance lesson was taken by all the classes. Three pledges were signed and two excellent papers on "Temperance" were given by members of the Senior Boys' Class, Benson Kincaid and Bruce Bristol.

Morning Service.

The morning service was taken by Rev. E. Farnworth, of Belleville, in the absence of the pastor. Rev. Mr. Farnworth is not a total stranger in Madoc, and he spoke of his joy in seeing a few of his old friends again. The morning theme was "The Loving Kindnesses of God," and the text was taken from Psalms 103:4, "Who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies." A beautiful duet was sung by Mrs. C. N. Whytock and Mr. Colin Ross, "Let the lower lights be burning", with George Maybee as a very capable organist.

Evening Service.

The evening subject was "The Making of Destiny" from "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." This was a strong plea to the young to consider their ways. He quoted the following: "Sow a thought, reap an act; sow an act, reap a habit; sow a habit, reap a character; sow a character, and reap a destiny."

In St. Peter's Church, the subject for the morning was, "The Angels at Mons." The evening services were begun by a ten minute song service and the theme for the evening was "A Foolish Farmer."

OTONABEE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OTONABEE, Nov. 6—Many local people attended the fowl supper given by the United Church at Keene, on Tuesday evening.

Mr. John O'Brien was again winner at Cavan plowing match, winning first for jointer plows in sod. Mr. McLean of Woodville, who won over Mr. O'Brien at Warsaw, won second place at Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Northey and family, of Mt. Julian, were guests on Sunday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Eason.

Mrs. W. Fife has returned from Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough, and is steadily improving.

Remember all the things people used to do for headaches? Today, the accepted treatment is always Aspirin. It gets action! Quick, complete relief—and no harm done. No after effects; no effect on the heart; nothing in an Aspirin tablet could hurt anyone. (Your doctor will verify this.) For any sort of headache, neuralgic pains, rheumatism, etc., just try Aspirin. Taken soon enough, it can head-off the pain altogether; even those pains many women have thought must be endured. At all druggists.

Pontypool. Capt. G. L. Kerr of the Toronto Regiment. Sergt. Colin Barron, 426 Christie St., now a member of the 48th Highlanders, and H. H. Robson, 21 Douglas Ave."

Enjoy Farming.

"Before the war I had a dairy farm at Los Angeles, but I enjoy farming my 100 acres at Pontypool much more," Rayfield said. "I have tried working inside, but don't like it. I was with a talking machine concern in Chicago for a couple of years after the war, but I got so grumpy my wife told me I had better get back to the farm."

Rayfield met his wife overseas, when she was serving as a V.A.D. at Birmingham. They were married in Toronto in 1921. "I have no complaint at all and I am quite happy," he declared, "and I certainly am glad to be here to-day to meet the boys. I haven't seen them all since that wonderful day at the Canadian Exhibition in 1921, when we met holders of the Victoria Cross from all over Canada."

Rutherford told a similar story of contentment with the workaday world. "A dairy farm at Colborne is the best thing I can think of," he laughed

No Ball Game.

There was no ball game on Friday evening, but the series will be resumed on Tuesday evening when Bridgenorth and the De Laval teams will meet and the High School and Cubs will also meet. Both games should be well worth seeing

All Saints' Day.

Thursday was All Saints' Day and there was a celebration of Holy Communion in St. John's Church at 9.30 a.m. Special masses were held in St. Paul's Church in the morning and Benediction in the evening.

GRANT OF $1,000

Aldermen were in favor of the motion.

Accept Invitation.

An invitation from the Chamber of Commerce to a banquet to be held in the Empress Hotel on Thursday night, when matters referring to the development of the city would be discussed, was accepted.

Eating house licenses were granted to P. Scully, J. J. Duffus and Mrs. J. Bradey.

Alderman Cotton asked permission to have a light installed at the corner of George and Hilliard Streets, near the Canadian National crossing. He said there was a lot of traffic going to and from the Protestant Home, and a light ought to be near this crossing. On motion of Aldermen Cotton and Phelan, a light will be installed at this intersection.

Alderman Green spoke in very fitting terms of the late Mrs. J. J. Turner, wife of a former Mayor of the city, whom he said was highly esteemed in the community; a splendid worker in all community activities, and a woman who took an interest in everything that went to the betterment of the city of Peterborough. He moved, seconded by Alderman Stocker, that a letter of condolence be sent to Mr. Turner at this sad hour.

The gravelling of Douglas Avenue was broached by Alderman Macdonald, and he was told that this avenue would be gravelled the first thing in the spring.

Relay Water Mains.

The Utilities Commission will be asked to relay the water mains in Confederation Square before the park in re-levelled. Alderman Green said that the piping was in very bad condition on account of the heaving in the spring, and to drain the mains this fall they had to cut in several places.

Alderman Phelan asked that a letter of condolence be sent to the family of James Courtney, a long resident in this city, and to John Edgar in their sad bereavement.

The City Engineer was instructed to inquire into the petition of the Bell Telephone Company to erect 16 poles on Ware, Lock and Princess Streets and five on Patterson and Park Streets.

By-law Number 2803 was passed, appointing men to remove the snow and slush from the city streets during the coming winter and spring.

By-law Number 2804 was passed, authorizing the execution of a deed with Samuel Abbott, who has purchased lots on McDonnel Street from the city.

Those present were Mayor Denne, Aldermen Lowe, Green, Macdonald, McIntyre, Huffman, Stocker, Cotton and Phelan.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XXV.

A day or two later he saw a small announcement in a newspaper to the effect that she had gone abroad and would be absent for some time, and that no letters would be forwarded. It was the same night that his mother rang up on the telephone to inform him she was giving a party.

She sounded like a delighted schoolgirl in fact, Giles was grimly sure that no schoolgirl would have been half so excited. It seemed to him that Mrs. Ardron was living her life backwards; as if in middle age she were doing all the things which she should have done five-and-twenty years before.

"When?" he asked, ruthlessly cutting short her voluble explanations.

"Tonight. It's a surprise party! Everyone does it now. You just ring people up on the 'phone at the very last minute and ask them to come."

"Suppose they've got other engagements."

She laughed merrily.

"Oh, but they haven't! You see, Giles, I just dropped a few little careful hints about a week ago, and they all promised to keep tonight free."

"It's not much of a surprise party, then, after all."

"Oh, but it is!" she protested eagerly. "You're surprised, aren't you?"

"Amazed."

"Well, there you are then! You'll come, won't you?"

"What time?"

"If you get here about twelve—"

"Twelve! It's a luncheon party, then."

"Midnight, Giles." Her voice sounded despairingly tolerant. "Really, darling, you're hopelessly out of date! All the fun starts at midnight nowadays."

"Oh, I see! Do we go to bed at all?"

"There'll be ham and eggs and hot coffee about four."

"Good Lord!"

"Don't talk like that. It will be such fun. Everyone's coming!"

"Who is 'everyone'?"

"Doris, of course—she's bringing a party. Mr. Essen—"

"Naturally."

She went on without heeding the interruption:

"And Lawrence Schofield—"

"What made you ask him?"

"To please Miss Farrow, of course. They're always together! I really believe they will make a match of it."

"I thought you didn't like Miss Farrow!"

"Well, just between ourselves, I don't, but I find that one must be broad-minded in these matters. You see, it takes all sorts to make a world."

"It certainly does. Who else?"

"A lot of people you don't know."

Giles chuckled.

"I hope they're the right sort of people! I mean, I hope it's quite correct for me to know them."

"You're laughing at me!"

"On the contrary, I'm glad you're enjoying yourself so much. I'll be there."

She rang off with voluble thanks and Giles turned away from the 'phone with a shrug of his shoulders.

The world was upside down, he thought impatiently, and most of the people in the world were mad, or pretending to be.

Well, if it got beyond him he could always go back to America, and at any rate tonight he would see Julie again.

It was only when he was in his mother's house that he suddenly realized that in all probability Sadie would be there also. For a moment he hesitated, a sudden chill feeling at his heart, then he philosophically pushed the thought aside and went on.

They would have to meet sooner or later—London was an unconscionably small place when one wished to avoid a person—and perhaps it would be as well to get it over. At any rate he would know the worst, and discover what attitude Sadie meant to adopt towards him.

She was almost the first person he saw when he entered Mrs. Ardron's crowded drawing-room, and it seemed to him that her shrill, insistent voice, with its slightly nasal accent, rose above all the deafening clatter, refusing to be silenced.

She was dressed in her usual scanty attire, and she wore her short hair in a babyish cluster of curls that looked very much like a wig.

Once, when he had objected to her style of hairdressing, she had laughed and snapped her fingers in his face.

"It's real cute!" she had informed him. "You'll never see it on any other head."

"I should hope not," Giles had answered fervently.

She was talking to a group of people which included Julie Farrow and several others whom Giles knew slightly, and it was Julie who first caught sight of him and waved an airy hand.

Giles went straight across to her. He did not know in the least what sort of reception to expect from his wife, but after he had greeted Julie and the others whom he knew, it was she who said in her insistent way:

"Present your friend."

It was Julie who obeyed.

"Mr. Chittenham—Miss Barrow."

"Pleased to meet you," Sadie said impudently.

There was a twinkle in her eyes—for which Giles could have shaken her. He wondered if already she had told Julie of their relationship, and if together they had agreed to keep up the game of pretence.

Schofield was with Julie beaming happily upon everyone.

"We haven't met lately, Mr. Chittenham," Julie was saying. "Where have you been hiding? So kind of your mother to ask me here tonight."

"So kind of you to come," Giles answered formally.

He could see that Sadie was manoeuvring to reach his side, and presently they were a little apart from the rest.

"Isn't it a scream?" Sadie demanded. "Fancy meeting you in your own mother's house, and she not knowing that she's entertaining a daughter-in-law unawares?"

"You are at perfect liberty to tell her if you choose," Giles answered coolly, though inwardly he was raging. "I have no doubt that you have told other people already."

Sadie gave a little scream of repudiation.

"Tell anyone? Not me! It would cook my little goose once and for all if it was known that I'd got such highly respectable relations. No, thanks! Freedom for me all the time, and if there's anything left over, freedom again."

"Why have you come to London?"

Her face changed subtly.

"Not to find you my lambkin, so don't worry! I've come to have a good time, and don't you interfere, or it will be the worse for you."

"I never thought of such a thing."

"Well, see that you don't," she answered more cheerfully; "and we shan't quarrel.

"Sadie, the situation is impossible!"

She laughed in his face.

"Rubbish! Don't pretend that you want me to come back to you." Her sharp eyes searched his face: "You were always such a bad liar," she said, with a little sigh of relief. "What's the harm anyway? Nobody's damaged. I'm sure you look happy enough."

"I didn't know I was such a good actor."

"Pooh! You can't pull that heart-broken stuff over my eyes," she retorted. "And don't look so tense! I don't want people coupling your name with mine."

"At one time you were anxious enough for them to do so."

Sadie shrugged her naked shoulders.

"Times change!" she said.

She moved away from him, her slim, scantily-clad body swaying with a little impudent movement.

Giles watched her with hard eyes.

And this was his wife—this common little—he pulled his thoughts up sharply, ashamed of them.

After all he had once thought her good enough to marry.

Lombard spoke beside him.

"Hallo. How did you get on with the fair Julie the other night?"

Giles turned with a frown.

"You here, too!" he said bluntly.

"Yes." Lombard grinned rather nervously. He was a little afraid of Giles, and anxious to be friends with him. "Mrs. Ardron rang me up and asked me to come, so I toddled along."

"I see."

Lombard repeated his first question.

"How did you get on with the fair Julie?"

"Quite well."

"She didn't succeed in clipping the chain on your collar?"

"Don't be such a damned fool!"

Julie caught the angry words and swung round.

"Naughty, naughty!" she admonished Chittenham. "I wouldn't allow you to call me a damned fool."

Giles turned a deliberate back on Lombard.

"What is one supposed to do at this alleged surprise party?" he asked.

Julie laughed.

"Eat, drink and be merry I suppose," she answered lightly. "I suppose we shall dance and generally make fools of ourselves," she added, with a weary note in her voice.

"I wonder you came if that is all you hope to get out of it."

"I came because I was asked," Julie retorted sharply. "Isn't it the only reason anyone ever does anything?"

"Do you always do what you are asked?"

"It depends on the 'asker,'" she scoffed.

Chittenham's face hardened.

"I suppose it would be utterly useless for me to ask you to drop this damnable play acting?"

"My dear man, what on earth do you mean?"

"What I say. You're never natural for a single moment. You hate this sort of—of piffle—as much as I hate it. You—you despise people like—like these people here." His voice had risen in his excitement, and Julie said smoothly:

"My dear man, don't shout! What on earth is the matter? These people here, as you so rudely call them, are your mother's friends, after all, and if they are not good enough for you—"

"They are not her friends. I doubt if she knows half of them by name even. It seems to me that the present fashion is to issue one wholesale invitation: 'Come yourself and bring anyone you like' sort of business."

Julie laughed serenely.

"I had that sort of invitation, so I brought Lawrence and Sadie Barrow. By the way, what do you think of Sadie?"

"Is she a new friend of yours?"

"Oh, an old friend by now!" Julie declared. "We've known one another quite a week and love each other dearly. Bim doesn't approve. She says that Sadie is common and bad form, and a wrong influence for me! Did you ever hear such rubbish?"

"I should think Miss Lennox is right," Giles answered, then stopped, aghast at the admission. His own wife!

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as rather a depressing day making for pessimism on the part of many and causing physical lassitude, as well as mental fatigue.

During the hours of business, when people who hold the assurance of success, there may be discontent among certain classes, but the stars promise them prosperity.

This is not an auspicious rule for the affairs of women who should pursue routine work.

Again the seers forecast for the theatres a season of interest to the public, but fraught with many unusual conditions for managers.

Many interesting experiments in presenting the drama will be made, it is prophesied, and out of them will develop important successes.

Motion pictures are to continue subject to many changeful planetary influences which will be costly and fortunate in the end, if the stars are rightly read.

All the aspects today appear to favor writers who may look forward to 1929 with high hopes.

Newspapers are wonderfully well directed at this time which will be fortunate for new combinations of capital and changes of ownership.

Reactionary planetary influences—which will affect fashions and manners will eliminate sensations from the daily press, or at least subordinate them, it is prognosticated.

Under this sway it is wise to delay important initiative and to be slow in getting in their garden roots.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE VOTE.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.)

The most obvious reason for voting is to help elect a favored candidate or to support one's party ticket. But a surprisingly large number cast their ballot to keep the opposing candidate from getting the place. In other words, we vote out of dislike for one candidate almost as often as we do out of interest in the candidate we support. The situation is analogous to the fan who goes to a wrestling match or a prizefight in the hope of witnessing the downfall of the man he hates more than to see the triumph of the other. Some wrestlers have been known to incur the displeasure of the fans for this very purpose, the object being to draw a large gate irrespective of the motive.

Now and then a man votes out of strong convictions amounting to a principle. He regards the election of his candidate as essential to the welfare of the country. Such strong protagonists usually fear the success of the opposition as a great national calamity. These are the extremists. They are dyed-in-the wool partisans or cranks and fanatics on certain "moral issues."

There are others who vote because the outcome of the election will have a direct bearing on their own personal status. These are the candidates, their personal friends and the office seekers.

Theoretically and ideally there is but one motive for casting a ballot in any election, that of electing the man best qualified for the office. Practically, there are numerous reasons, such as blindly supporting a party, intelligently supporting a party, voting out of hate for the opposing party or its candidate, personally benefitting by getting into office, winning a side bet on the outcome, business advantages, voting as the result of rank bribery, and finally voting out of strong conviction amounting to religious fervor and a moral crusade.

Apart from these considerations the purely human element involved in voting is to have a finger in the pie. We get some satisfaction from participating in the life of the group. We like to have our say in the running of things, especially of things that come so close home as rent and taxes.

THE PUMPKIN OF HALLOW-E'EN

Hallowe'en was originally a day set apart by the church for the vigil of the Feast of All Saints, and the original meaning was "Hallowed Evening." The superstition of the peasants modified the original sense and surrounded Hallowe'en with delightful and mysterious tales of ghosts, witches and hobgoblins, possibly a survival of the ancient Druidic rites when fires were lit to keep away the witches, ghosts and wicked souls called forth that night by Shamen, the lord of death.

The children in Europe celebrated the day by scooping out the interior of large turnips and cutting in eyes, nose and mouth so that when a candle was placed inside the shell, the light shone through in a realistic manner at night. These were the original Jack O'Lanterns, but it was not long before the playful peasantry substituted pumpkins for turnips because they were not only easier to prepare, but presented a more hobgoblin-like appearance.

The demand for pumpkins around Hallowee'n and Thanksgiving has so increased the price that they are now a profitable crop. The pumpkin was cultivated along the fields of corn by the Indians long before the coming of the white man as it still is by American farmers fully five centuries later.

Pumpkins vary in size from one to two pounds to two hundred pounds or more. The fruity part next to the rind is most nourishing and is eaten in many ways, from the pumpkin soups of France and Italy to the pumpkin pie of America. The seeds have long been used as a remedy for tapeworm—in fact, they are regarded as almost a specific.

Pumpkins, although a fall crop, may be kept until spring if stored in a cool dry place and protected from frost.

Quite an industry has recently developed for the purpose of drying and grinding pumpkins into pumpkin flour for the use of bakeries in preparing pumpkin pie. The pies prepared from this flour are equally as well flavored as those prepared from the fresh pumpkin, and have the added advantage that we may now enjoy pumpkin pies the year round. The dried pumpkin is equally as nutritious as the fresh, which is rich in sodium and phosphorus.

Here are a few suggestions for pumpkin recipes:

Pumpkin and Spaghetti Soup.

Use two cups of chopped pumpkin pulp, a quarter of a pound of spaghetti, and six cups of water. Cover these ingredients, and boil slowly until the spaghetti is cooked, then add one cup of hot milk and boil for one minute. Add one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, two tablespoonfuls of butter, and seasoning to taste. (This is a starchy soup and should not be used with acid fruits or at a protein meal.)

Pumpkins and Potatoes.

Two turnips (optional), three cups of chopped pumpkin pulp, four medium-sized potatoes peeled: Boil these ingredients in salted water until soft. Drain and mash. Add one-fourth of a cup of condensed milk or cream, one tablespoonful of butter, mix and serve. The juice that is poured off may be used as the base of a soup.

Baked Pumpkin, Apples, Raisins.

Cut off the stem end of a small pumpkin, scoop out seeds, and fill pumpkin shell with chopped apples, raisins and pulverized walnut meats. Mix ingredients with ground Melba toast, moisten with small amount of milk, and place in baking pan. Bake in moderate oven for fifty minutes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Running Sore.

Question: K. S. P. asks: "Can a running sore from a bone be cured? If so, what is the remedy?"

Answer: Your question is too broad a one to be answered in this column. Many running sores from the bone can be cured if the right treatment is taken in time, but a careful examination of each case must be made to determine the cause. The method of treatment would depend upon the findings of such an examination.

Non-Weight Producing Foods.

Question: Mrs. R. S. writes: "Please advise what foods can be eaten without putting on weight. I walk about four miles a day."

Answer: The non-starchy vegetables and acid fruits are not fattening. All fats, proteins and carbohydrates are fattening to some extent to people who are susceptible. Some protein may be used in the anti-fat diet, but the carbohydrates and fats should be avoided until the weight is normal.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Beige caracul was used for this smart fur set, the muff being worn as a cuff on the right wrist.

"She's the kind of woman that carries a muff," someone said in describing the little known author of a much talked about new book.

I pictured to myself at once a rather prim little person with a fur collar fastened quite precisely under her chin, a hat that sat up high on the back of her head, who carried an umbrella even on bright days in case it might rain. Because the only women I happen to know in my own circle who might carry muffs are like that.

But that wasn't what the commentator meant at all by "the kind of woman that carries a muff." She meant to indicate that this young author followed the last word of the French couturiers and furriers and modistes in choosing her frocks, furs and hats. She carried a muff not because it was her habit to do so fifteen or twenty years ago—she was much too young for that—but because muffs are at present one of the newest of fashionable accessories.

Some of the new muffs are quite small—no larger than the smallest sort of melons—decidedly reminiscent of the ladies of the eighties as we see them portrayed by Du Maurier in old copies of London Punch, reminiscent of bustles and bangs and bonnets tied with strings. Other muffs are larger and some of these are worn rather rakishly as a deep cuff for one arm.

CORRECT MEASUREMENTS

It is wise to write down the measurements of the sweater before washing. Then the sweater can be stretched to the original dimensions when straightened out on towels to dry. Then you will know positively it will fit after its bath.

A little Self Treatment each morning and night, using Elizabeth Arden's Venetian Cleansing Cream, Ardena Skin Tonic and Orange Skin Food—according to the method of an Elizabeth Arden Treatment—will keep your skin clear, firm and smooth.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

It is surprising to find how many housewives there are in Peterborough who think they know more than the person who wrote the directions which they are following in making a cake or in doing something else.

• • • • • • •

Generally, when one does not follow directions given, but goes by her own judgment, disappointment is sure to follow. This was the case where an intelligent housewife, who lives in the west end of the city, was dying a pair of curtains.

• • • • • • •

I do not remember what color she intended the curtains to be; anyway this does not matter. She dyed the curtains and when they were hung up, alas! they were mottled and streaked and in fact were spoiled as far as the color was concerned.

• • • • • • •

The dye was good and not to blame. It was recommended by her druggist, and had given satisfaction to hundreds of other women who had used it. But this woman, intelligent though she was, did not follow directions.

• • • • • • •

I asked her if she read over the directions carefully, and she said she had. Then I asked her if she followed them, as they were given on the package. She had practically followed them except for putting in the few tablespoons of salt. She did not have any in the house and she could see no reason why a little salt could make any difference.

• • • • • • •

This reminds me of the time I gave a recipe to a friend. To make sure she should make no mistake, I wrote it all out for her. The recipe was for making candy, I believe. Among the other instructions was the following, "Use an unbeaten egg white with a tablespoonful of cold water." I had re-read the directions two or three times to make sure I had written the recipe correctly.

• • • • • • •

After she had tried to make the candy, but failed, she came to me saying there must have been some mistake in the recipe. Of course I knew the fault was not in the recipe because I had read it over so carefuly. She said she had taken particular pains and had even beat the egg white.

• • • • • • •

Then there was the clue. The egg should NOT have been beaten. No wonder her candy was not a success. When I asked why she beat the egg white, her answer was that she had always read that it was better to beat it.

• • • • • • •

I think this little incident explains why a great many women in Peterborough have such failures in cooking. They don't have confidence in the cook book and imagine they know more than the person who wrote the recipe, and when it comes to following directions written plainly on the package of dye or some other such preparation, in every case you will find they are worth following.

• • • • • • •

I hope my neighbors haven't forgot my SOS for the Armistice Number. I am still anxiously awaiting contributions to help me fill the two women's pages.

• • • • • • •

If you would like to know how to make the new puff collar used on evening and afternoon wraps, fill in the coupon and send it to me.

• • • • • • •

Of course rumble seats are no longer the topic of discussion among us. You would think a person old-fashioned if you heard him expressing opinion on them now.

• • • • • • •

But now fashion's newest creation is the rumble-seat coat. It is usually made of fur, warmly lined with kasha, and snug fitting, with high collar, tight cuffs and belted to hold the warmth.

• • • • • • •

Colored sheets and bed spreads are no longer a novelty in Peterborough. They are common now as colored handkerchiefs. Of course one may think he can sleep better between pure white sheets, but still a bed made up with sheets, quilts and spreads of harmonizing colors are attractive.

• • • • • • •

The colors, of course, are not vivid, but are of the lighter pastel shades. Pillow slips are chosen to match and often members of the household prefer to have a different color for their bed. Then when the laundry is sorted, one always gets his own sheets.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

By JEANETTE.

"Dazzled by the sun and drugged by space they wait,
These homeless peoples at our prairie gate;
Dumb with the aim of those whom fate has hurled,
Breathless upon the threshold of world."

Just a little extract from "Fires of Driftwood," a collection of verse by the late Mrs. Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, who entitled a vivid little description of arriving immigrants "Calgary Station" and in it pictured graphically the bewildered aspect of the new arrivals to a strange and unknown land.

Peterborough has its quota of these new arrivals. They come here as strangers, seeking employment. Perhaps there are few of them as compared with larger centres, but still they are strangers at our gates. Mrs. G. P. Muldrew, of Ottawa, speaking to the Local Council of Women at their last meeting, mentioned the difficulties confronting many of these people and their inability at first to adjust themselves to changing conditions. Coming from a land where space means little and where one's neighbors "are over the back fence," as she phrased it, they are appalled at first with the immensity of space in this far-flung country. One of the promises made by a man who comes to Canada to farm is to take tuition from a Canadian farmer and this means that the woman is left alone. It takes nerve to stay alone in the "middle of a hundred-acre farm," night after night and day after day. Often the woman weakens and pleads to be taken back to a smaller, more compact country.

In Peterborough, the Young Women's Christian Association does much to assist and aid newcoming citizens, in the clubs maintained at the 'Y' to welcome the young girls. Here they are entertained and made to feel at home.

Pioneer activity among women did not cease with the establishment of a new country on this side of the Atlantic. In northern sections of our own district, the work still goes on and women still help. The little Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Apsley, forty miles from Peterborough, is an example of the manner in which women are helping other women to live under more comfortable conditions. There the nurses come from cities like Toronto and Montreal and Ottawa, to live in an isolated settlement where wolves are seen in the winter time and where water has to be toted and wood cut for stove fires, many months in the year. They work under very unfavorable conditions.

Just now, the Hospital lacks much in the way of small equipment. Imagine a housewife doing without kitchen utensils in these days of cheap materials. But the nurse and her assistant have very little to do with. They possess half a dozen teaspoons, and other silver in like quantity. When there are three patients in the hospital, the three cream pitchers are all in use and the nurses put their own milk in a cup. Less than a dozen china plates are arranged on the neat little blue and cream shelves of the wooden wall cabinet in the kitchen. All through this small frame house, equipment is of a like scanty nature. Boxes are utilized as dressers, with cloth coverings to hide the boards. Almost anything in the way of furniture or kitchen or table equipment would be welcome at this little hospital, which is providing comfort for many a weary and worn mother in that tiny backwoods settlement. Perhaps the housewives of the city would spare a few things for this work, which goes on constantly and faithfully. Lack of means to do with does not mean lack of attention to the sick. The nurses are just as faithful as if they were possessed of the well-stocked linen closets and kitchen cabinets of more fortunate hospitals. A friend is taking a trip to Apsley on Saturday. Any contributions would be thankfully received and conveyed by him. If you have any articles that might be used, please telephone Jeanette at this office.

A chemise-pantalon is the name invented for one of the latest models in combinations in the lingerie world. It is made to cover the corset and brassiere, which are often worn next the skin, in the modern effort to eliminate as much clothing as possible. However, instead of decrying this modern tendency, health experts and others are now united in the opinion that the wearing of fewer clothes means more health. The lady who used to encase herself in heavy undergarments that reached from neck to ankle, don four or five stiffly-starched petticoats and a gown that was lined and whalebone throughout, and had a sidewalk-touching length, may have felt more modest than her 1928 sisters, but she was not as healthy. She swooned on every possible occasion, and no one can blame the poor dear. The weight of her garments and the consciousness of upholding the virtue of the world by her actions and apparel, must have been a heavy burden to tote around. No wonder she subsided under it and had to be revived by the use of sal volatile and aromatic vinegars.

The whimsicality of the neckline is one of the vagaries of the season's modes. It may be a V or round or square, or it may make a desperate to be two things at once and have one square corner that slopes to a V on the other side. Then again it may be square in front and have the bateau or "boat" neckline at the back. An idea that is new is the "cowl" neckline, with an addition something like a monk's hood, either at the front or the back.

If you can wear brown, you should be happy this year. Brown is very good and for those who accommodate their temperaments to its rather subduing atmosphere, it is very likeable. Some of the woodsy browns are rich in the extreme. There is something very cosy and comfortable looking about a pretty brown coat and little brown felt hat or a brown dress that has a touch of brighter color to lighten it.

Although men often wonder at women's fondness for black, there is a good reason for the preference. Black gives a touch of chic and style that no other color can achieve. Sophistication has a permanent attraction for most women. Miladi may realize quite well that she looks innocent in white, peachy and girlish in pink or yellow or pale blue, warm and cosy in brown, but black gives style, that inimitable something that has a stronger drawing power than anything else. At a recent concert in this city, a quartette of pretty girls sang very charmingly. They were one and all dressed in black. It was brightened by touches of silver and cream, in two instances, otherwise the effect would have been rather sombre. And they all looked well. To see a stage performer who inclines to stoutness appear in a gown of grey, for instance, or a thin girl don a slim white frock, is to see an example of bad taste.

Fur has a way all its own this season. It riots in luxurious extravagance all over winter coats of the cloth type and appears also as trimming for dresses. A new idea is to have a half handkerchief of fur to drape the neck and shoulders of the gown. Fur is lovely and very attractive as long as it remains soft, clean and fluffy. Hazel rods are recommended for whipping the softer furs, like beaver, while warm cornmeal is a fine cleanser, and a fine-tooth comb will do wonders in correcting a straggly appearance in fur.

LONG SLEEP MAKES BABY HAPPY AGAIN

"Our baby kept waking us several times a night, until we started giving him a little Castoria after his last nursing," says an Iowa mother. "He slept soundly from the first night and it made him look and feel worlds better." Baby specialists endorse Fletcher's Castoria; and millions of mothers know how this purely-vegetable, harmless preparation helps babies and children with colic, constipation, colds, diarrhea, etc. The Fletcher signature is always on the wrapper of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations.

UNDER COVER

Burned food means a careless cook and if you should by chance spoil something through burning, don't tell everyone about it. We are not allowed to boast about our good points in this world and why should we select our mistakes for broadcasting? Just remove the evidence before anyone returns home for dinner and plan something else. You are not apt to repeat the performance for years to come.

LIGHTEST MEAL CAUSED PAIN

Taniac Completely Relieved Nervous Indigestion

Stomach Trouble causes about as much pain and suffering as any other disease that attacks the human system. It is an extremely dangerous condition, too, because the food is not properly digested, the body is not nourished, the blood becomes thin, and there is constant weakness, nervousness.

Anyone who has Nervous Indigestion "goes through a trying experience," says Mr. Edgar LaMontagne, 320½ Third Ave., Quebec. He knows; for he suffered intensely. "My lightest meal caused pain and bloating. I couldn't properly digest anything. In a short time, I lost 9 pounds in weight. Taniac gave me my first real relief. In a short time after starting Taniac, the pain and gas disappeared and my digestion was fine. I was eating and sleeping well, and had almost forgotten I had a stomach. I have put on ten pounds of firm flesh and am in splendid health."

You can take Taniac with the same confidence. It will surely help you—build up your weight and strength—give you health and keep you in health. Every bottle is sold on the understanding that it must help you or your money refunded. Get a bottle at your druggist's today.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Beige caracul was used for this smart fur set, the muff being worn as a cuff on the right wrist.

"She's the kind of woman that carries a muff," someone said in describing the little known author of a much talked about new book.

I pictured to myself at once a rather prim little person with a fur collar fastened quite precisely under her chin, a hat that sat up high on the back of her head, who carried an umbrella even on bright days in case it might rain. Because the only women I happen to know in my own circle who might carry muffs are like that.

But that wasn't what the commentator meant at all by "the kind of woman that carries a muff." She meant to indicate that this young author followed the last word of the French couturiers and furriers and modistes in choosing her frocks, furs and hats. She carried a muff not because it was her habit to do so fifteen or twenty years ago—she was much too young for that—but because muffs are at present one of the newest of fashionable accessories.

Some of the new muffs are quite small—no larger than the smallest sort of melons—decidedly reminiscent of the ladies of the eighties as we see them portrayed by Du Maurier in old copies of London Punch reminiscent of bustles and bangs and bonnets tied with strings. Other muffs are larger and some of these are worn rather rakishly as a deep cuff for one arm.

CORRECT MEASUREMENTS

It is wise to write down the measurements of the sweater before washing. Then the sweater can be stretched to the original dimensions when straightened out on towels to dry. Then you will know positively it will fit after its bath.

A little Self Treatment each morning and night, using Elizabeth Arden's Venetian Cleansing Cream, Ardena Skin Tonic and Orange Skin Food—according to the method of an Elizabeth Arden Treatment—will keep your skin clear, firm and smooth.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

It is surprising to find how many housewives there are in Peterborough who think they know more than the person who wrote the directions which they are following in making a cake or in doing something else.

• • • • • • •

Generally, when one does not follow directions given, but goes by her own judgment, disappointment is sure to follow. This was the case where an intelligent housewife, who lives in the west end of the city, was dying a pair of curtains.

• • • • • • •

I do not remember what color she intended the curtains to be; anyway this does not matter. She dyed the curtains and when they were hung up, alas! they were mottled and streaked and in fact were spoiled as far as the color was concerned.

• • • • • • •

The dye was good and not to blame. It was recommended by her druggist, and had given satisfaction to hundreds of other women who had used it. But this woman, intelligent though she was, did not follow directions.

• • • • • • •

I asked her if she read over the directions carefully, and she said she had. Then I asked her if she followed them, as they were given on the package. She had practically followed them except for putting in the few tablespoons of salt. She did not have any in the house and she could see no reason why a little salt could make any difference.

• • • • • • •

This reminds me of the time I gave a recipe to a friend. To make sure she should make no mistake, I wrote it all out for her. The recipe was for making candy, I believe. Among the other instructions was the following, "Use an unbeaten egg white with a tablespoonful of cold water." I had re-read the directions two or three times to make sure I had written the recipe correctly.

• • • • • • •

After she had tried to make the candy, but failed, she came to me saying there must have been some mistake in the recipe. Of course I knew the fault was not in the recipe because I had read it over so carefuly. She said she had taken particular pains and had even beat the egg white.

• • • • • • •

Then there was the clue. The egg should NOT have been beaten. No wonder her candy was not a success. When I asked why she beat the egg white, her answer was that she had always read that it was better to beat it.

• • • • • • •

I think this little incident explains why a great many women in Peterborough have such failures in cooking. They don't have confidence in the cook book and imagine they know more than the person who wrote the recipe, and when it comes to following directions written plainly on the package of dye or some other such preparation, in every case you will find they are worth following.

• • • • • • •

I hope my neighbors haven't forgot my SOS for the Armistice Number. I am still anxiously awaiting contributions to help me fill the two women's pages.

• • • • • • •

If you would like to know how to make the new puff collar used on evening and afternoon wraps, fill in the coupon and send it to me.

• • • • • • •

Of course rumble seats are no longer the topic of discussion among us. You would think a person old-fashioned if you heard him expressing opinion on them now.

• • • • • • •

But now fashion's newest creation is the rumble-seat coat. It is usually made of fur, warmly lined with kasha, and snug fitting, with high collar, tight cuffs and belted to hold the warmth.

• • • • • • •

Colored sheets and bed spreads are no longer a novelty in Peterborough. They are common now as colored handkerchiefs. Of course one may think he can sleep better between pure white sheets, but still a bed made up with sheets, quilts and spreads of harmonizing colors are attractive.

• • • • • • •

The colors, of course, are not vivid, but are of the lighter pastel shades. Pillow slips are chosen to match and often members of the household prefer to have a different color for their bed. Then when the laundry is sorted, one always gets his own sheets.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

By JEANETTE.

"Dazzled by the sun and drugged by space they wait,
These homeless peoples at our prairie gate:
Dumb with the aim of those whom fate has hurled,
Breathless upon the threshold of a world."

Just a little extract from "Fires of Driftwood," a collection of verse by the late Mrs. Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, who entitled a vivid little description of arriving immigrants "Calgary Station" and in it pictured graphically the bewildered aspect of the new arrivals to a strange and unknown land.

Peterborough has its quota of these new arrivals. They come here as strangers, seeking employment. Perhaps there are few of them as compared with larger centres, but still they are strangers at our gates. Mrs. G. P. Muldrew, of Ottawa, speaking to the Local Council of Women at their last meeting, mentioned the difficulties confronting many of these people and their inability at first to adjust themselves to changing conditions. Coming from a land where space means little and where one's neighbors "are over the back fence," as she phrased it, they are appalled at first with the immensity of space in this far-flung country. One of the promises made by a man who comes to Canada to farm is to take tuition from a Canadian farmer and this means that the woman is left alone. It takes nerve to stay alone in the "middle of a hundred-acre farm," night after night and day after day. Often the woman weakens and pleads to be taken back to a smaller, more compact country.

In Peterborough, the Young Women's Christian Association does much to assist and aid newcoming citizens, in the clubs maintained at the 'Y' to welcome the young girls. Here they are entertained and made to feel at home.

Pioneer activities among women did not cease with the establishment of a new country on this side of the Atlantic. In northern sections of our own district, the work still goes on and women still help. The little Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Apsley, forty miles from Peterborough, is an example of the manner in which women are helping other women to live under more comfortable conditions. There the nurses come from cities like Toronto and Montreal and Ottawa, to live in an isolated settlement where wolves are seen in the winter time and where water has to be toted and wood cut for stove fires, many months in the year. They work under very unfavorable conditions.

Just now, the Hospital lacks much in the way of small equipment. Imagine a housewife doing without kitchen utensils in these days of cheap materials. But the nurse and her assistant have very little to do with. They possess half a dozen teaspoons, and other silver in like quantity. When there are three patients in the hospital, the three cream pitchers are all in use and the nurses put their own milk in a cup. Less than a dozen china plates are arranged on the neat little blue and cream shelves of the wooden wall cabinet in the kitchen. All through this small frame house, equipment is of a like scanty nature. Boxes are utilized as dressers, with cloth coverings to hide the boards. Almost anything in the way of furniture or kitchen or table equipment would be welcome at this little hospital, which is providing comfort for many a weary and worn mother in that tiny backwoods settlement. Perhaps the housewives of the city would spare a few things for this work, which goes on constantly and faithfully. Lack of means to do with does not mean lack of attention to the sick. The nurses are just as faithful as if they were possessed of the well-stocked linen closets and kitchen cabinets of more fortunate hospitals. A friend is taking a trip to Apsley on Saturday. Any contributions would be thankfully received and conveyed by him. If you have any articles that might be used, please telephone Jeanette at this office.

A chemise-pantalon is the name invented for one of the latest models in combinations in the lingerie world. It is made to cover the corset and brassiere, which are often worn next the skin, in the modern effort to eliminate as much clothing as possible. However, instead of decrying this modern tendency, health experts and others are now united in the opinion that the wearing of fewer clothes means more health. The lady who used to encase herself in heavy undergarments that reached from neck to ankle, don four or five stiffly-starched petticoats and a gown that was lined and whalebone'd throughout, and had a sidewalk-touching length, may have felt more modest than her 1928 sisters, but she was not as healthy. She swooned on every possible occasion, and no one can blame the poor dear. The weight of her garments and the consciousness of upholding the virtue of the world by her actions and apparel, must have been a heavy burden to tote around. No wonder she subsided under it and had to be revived by the use of sal volatile and aromatic vinegars.

The whimsicality of the neckline is one of the vagaries of the season's modes. It may be a V or round or square, or it may make a desperate to be two things at once and have one square corner that slopes to a V at the other side. Then again it may be square in front and have the bateau or "boat" neckline at the back. An idea that is new is the "cowl" neckline, with an addition something like a monk's hood, either at the front or the back.

If you can wear brown, you should be happy this year. Brown is very good and for those who accommodate their temperaments to its rather subduing atmosphere, it is very likeable. Some of the woodsy browns are rich in the extreme. There is something very cosy and comfortable looking about a pretty brown coat and little brown felt hat or a brown dress that has a touch of brighter color to lighten it.

Although men often wonder at women's fondness for black, there is a good reason for the preference. Black gives a touch of chic and style that no other color can achieve. Sophistication has a permanent attraction for most women. Miladi may realize quite well that she looks innocent in white, peachy and girlish in pink or yellow or pale blue, warm and cosy in brown, but black gives style, that inimitable something that has a stronger drawing power than anything else. At a recent concert in this city, a quartette of pretty girls sang very charmingly. They were one and all dressed in black. It was brightened by touches of silver and cream, in two instances, otherwise the effect would have been rather sombre. And they all looked well. To see a stage performer who inclines to stoutness appear in a gown of grey, for instance, or a thin girl don a slim white frock, is to see an example of bad taste.

Fur has a way all its own this season. It riots in luxurious extravagance all over winter coats of the cloth type and appears also as trimming for dresses. A new idea is to have a half handkerchief of fur to drape the neck and shoulders of the gown. Fur is lovely and very attractive as long as it remains soft, clean and fluffy. Hazel rods are recommended for whipping the softer furs, like beaver, while warm cornmeal is a fine cleanser, and a fine-tooth comb will do wonders in correcting a straggly appearance in fur.

LONG SLEEP MAKES BABY HAPPY AGAIN

"Our baby kept waking us several times a night, until we started giving him a little Castoria after his last nursing," says an Iowa mother. "He slept soundly from the first night and it made him look and feel worlds better." Baby specialists endorse Fletcher's Castoria; and millions of mothers know how this purely-vegetable, harmless preparation helps babies and children with colic, constipation, colds, diarrhea, etc. The Fletcher signature is always on the wrapper of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations.

LIGHTEST MEAL CAUSED PAIN

Taniac Completely Relieved Nervous Indigestion

Stomach Trouble causes about as much pain and suffering as any other disease that attacks the human system. It is an extremely dangerous condition, too, because the food is not properly digested, the body is not nourished, the blood becomes thin, and there is constant weakness, nervousness.

Anyone who has Nervous Indigestion "goes through a trying experience," says Mr. Edgar LaMontagne, 320½ Third Ave., Quebec. He knows; for he suffered intensely. "My lightest meal caused pain and bloating. I couldn't properly digest anything. In a short time, I lost 9 pounds in weight. Taniac gave me my first real relief. In a short time after starting Taniac, the pain and gas disappeared and my digestion was fine. I was eating and sleeping well, and had almost forgotten I had a stomach. I have put on ten pounds of firm flesh and am in splendid health."

You can take Taniac with the same confidence. It will surely help you—build up your weight and strength—give you health and keep you in health. Every bottle is sold on the understanding that it must help you or your money refunded. Get a bottle at your druggist's today.

CHEESE CAKE

One pound sugar, ¼ pound butter, 1 cake cottage cheese, put through a sieve, 6 eggs, the rind of 1 lemon and the juice of 2, 1 teaspoon grated nutmeg. Cream sugar and butter and beat in the yolks of the eggs, lemons, nutmeg and last of all the stiffly whipped whites of eggs. Line pie tins with pastry and fill with the above mixture. Strips of pastry across the top add to the attractiveness of the dish. Bake in a fairly hot oven until the pastry is a delicate brown. Serve cold.

ROY RETAINS RING HONORS

Canadian Featherweight Champion Scores Two Knockdowns Over Foley.

FAST AFFAIR.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 6.—Leo ("kid") Roy of Montreal successfully defended his Canadian featherchampionship when he outpointed Vic Foley of this city, persistent challenger, in a 12-round bout here last night. Foley held Roy to a draw in Montreal last summmer, but the Montreal boxer undoubtedly deserved the verdict in last night's engagement.

Opening the bout, both boxers started cautiously, but soon they were exchanging rights and lefts in rapid succession. Then Roy, swinging hard, knocked Foley down, but he was up without a count.

In the second round Foley scored with a right and left to the body, and after an exchange of rights rocked the champion with a hard left to the jaw. The boxing was at close quarters, and the Vancouver boy, in the third, was getting in some sharp left jabs. At the bell Roy grazed Foley's face with a savage swing.

The fourth and fifth rounds were a repetition of the first three, and Foley appeared to have the best of the exchanges, though "The Kid" was landing some hard lefts. In the sixth round Roy showed better form, but missed several hard swings. In the seventh, the Montrealer forced the boxing, and landed several well-timed punches.

In the eighth and ninth rounds Roy continued to set a fast pace, and was rushing in on Foley at terriffic speed. In the tenth, Foley's right eye was closing, with the French boy landing sharp lefts to the head and face. Roy apologized for a low one as the bell rang.

Just after the last round got under way Roy floored Foley with a hard left for a count of three. He was punishing the Vancouverite with solid lefts to the face and jaw. Foley was weakening fast, with Roy putting in a fast barrage of lefts at the bell.

BEACH AND BORDEN BATTLE WEDNESDAY

Canoeists Can Win Group By Beating Fliers—Secure Former Stars.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—Balmy Beach, Canadian champions, face their first major task of the 1928 campaign tomorrow afternoon on the sand dunes of Camp Borden, where they meet Dave Harding's Airmen in the fight for group honors. With a victory the canoeists will take the section and earn the right to enter the O.R.F.U. senior finals, but the win will not be as easy as it sounds, for the Airmen, although well beaten in the last game with Balmy, put up a bitter fight and promise an even harder one on Wednesday afternoon. The Aviators have greatly improved since their last game with the Beachers, while Carr-Harris and Brown, two stars of last season, are back in camp to take their old positions. Both have been marooned in the north country, but they flew safely to civilization and have been practising with the Bordens for the last week

Balmy Beach realizes what the win means and will take no chances on defeat, for they still have memories of their only beating last year, administered by the Airmen, and also of the hard grapple this year, in which open fights and swinging fists played an important part. The feud is sure to be renewed at Borden and although the Canoeists are favored to win, it will be a hard battle

AT THE CAPITOL.

"A CERTAIN YOUNG MAN."

The handsome young Ramon Novarro is the hero of the feature picture, "A Certain Young Man," playing at the Capitol Theatre during the first three days of this week.

The opening title, with his two valets reading a report in a tabloid newspaper, gives the key to the production, in the sentence: "A certain young man who bears a very old title has again taken unto himself another man's wife."

The picture delineates in some detail the amorous adventures of a young Don Juan, Lord Gerald Brinsley, who finally becomes disgusted after discovering that his latest inamorata, Henriette (Renee Adoree), is really the wife of his butler. He goes off with Hubert Sweet-Escott, a typical Englishman of the "Archie" type, on a fishing trip to Biarritz. On the train he meets Phyllis Hammond, (Marcelline Day), an American girl, with her father, and immediately falls madly in love with her.

Matters appear to be progressing favorably when Mrs. Crutchley (Marmel Myers) appears on the scene, having pursued him to Biarritz. She is conversing with him in his room when her wrathful husband arrives and makes a furious scene. However, Phyllis, overhearing the angry talk, saves the situation by claiming as her own the bag owned by Mrs. Crutchley. Later, also, she forgives her lover, after reading the detailed report of his past life which her father has received from a London agency.

The Butterfly Kiddies, an act featuring five clever little girls, with a star performer in the five-year old Baby Rita, are an added attraction on the program. They sing very pleasingly and dance and perform in a manner that would do credit to much older people.

The Capitol had a large crowd last night for the snappy bill.

AT THE REGENT.

"OH, KAY!" IS O.K.! VERDICT ON COLLEEN MOORE'S HILARIOUS NEW COMEDY AT THE REGENT.

"Oh Kay!" is O.K.!

Mirth that fairly shook the Regent Theatre at the first local showing of this latest Colleen Moore picture last night provided ample evidence that "Oh Kay!" is one of the funniest comedies to reach the screen in months, and after watching six reels of hilarious humor, the audience went home still chuckling.

"Oh Kay!" is frankly a farce, having been adapted for motion picture purposes from the musical comedy of the same name. It has been made all the more laughable in the transition, and the presence of Colleen's part personality in the stellar role is responsible for the majority of the humor. Although Colleen has probably had more successful comedies than any other feminine star, "Oh Kay!" has topped them all, and takes its place with the best humor the screen has produced.

POLICEMEN MUST USE DISCRETION

Chief Newhall Defends Carrying of Firearms By Police Officers.

DANGEROUS TIMES.

City Policemen Are All Efficient Handlers of Firearms, Use Discretion.

When interviewed by The Examiner, and his attention drawn to an article appearing in a Toronto newspaper, Chief of Police Samuel Newhall, who has had thirty-four years' experience with police forces in London and Liverpool, England, as well as Cuba, before coming to Peterborough, said regarding indiscriminate shooting at fleeing suspects:

A judge, a magistrate, or a lawyer may deliberate for days or weeks, resorting to every authority, before reaching a decision but a police officer is often called upon to make his decision in a second as to whether he has the right or wrong man—in the morning he must justify his action before the man whom he has taken in—and woe betide him if he has made a mistake. The incident—a shooting, may have taken place at one, two, three or four o'clock in the morning, in utter or partial darkness—place the officer's critics under similar circumstances and chances are, the result will be a lot more disastrous."

Men Are Efficient.

"Every man on my staff is an efficient handler of firearms and I have never had any trouble," continued the chief. Not one of them would think of firing at a man without complete justification and even then they must use great discretion. At the same time, it would be absurd to place hard and fast restrictions upon policemen in their use of firearms and they are entitled to mighty sympathetic naideration when accused of shooting too hastily, as doing police duty these days is not so comfortable as talking from upholstered chairs, banquet or political platforms!

"Take for instance a police officer patrolling his beat. A man rushes out of a dark alleyway or attacks him as the officer enters an unlighted yard. In these days of rapid transportation and escape an officer does not know that a serious offense has not been committed, he does not know how many are hiding nearby to assist his first attacker, yet some people would have him make the arrest with the minimum of force and allow the suspected man to escape rather than shoot at him. Place the officer's critics in his place for a week or so and they will talk in a different manner when their week of patrolling is over, especially if it has been at night!

"I could quote you many such instances. Life is sacred and the policemen are humanly intelligent enough, as a rule, to realize this and the seriousness of using firearms in bringing the fugitive to justice. As I have said before, there is no excuse for shooting at a fugitive who has committed a petty offense. There must be discretion used by the officers in employing firearms and by those who would criticize them for their actions.

HEAR THE REGENT SEVEN-PIECE ORCHESTA IN THIS ONE

During the past couple of weeks there has come into the sporting firmament a star that is causing considerable comment. Everyone in the east is asking if the old Argo machine has discovered another Lionel Conacher.

Well, even if it is too early to say whether they have or not, it is evident that they have a mighty promising man. He is Frank Turville of Western University, formerly of Port Arthur. In the early season workouts he displayed great form and the Argo coaches praised him highly But when he appeared on the field in an exhibition game against University of Toronto he looked like a "dud."

In the opening game of the Big Four against the Hamilton Tigers he lasted for three periods. A week later in Montreal he showed the first signs of brilliancy when he tore down the field for large gains against the Winged Wheelers. Finally he seemed to find his feet and in the game against the Ottawa Rough Riders he broke loose and displayed a brand of rugby that had not been seen before this year. Of the 20 points the Argos scored, Turville captured 18 of them himself—two touchdowns and the remainder by kicking.

During the game his broken field running was faultless, his ball carrying and catching perfect and his judgment caused favorable comment from both fans and critics.

If Turville keeps up the class of rugby he played against the Senators he will prove to be undoubtedly the season's most sensational find in Eastern rugby.

UNITED CHURCH WEEK OPENS

phasized the value of friendly environment in discussing the relationship of an organism to its environment. It reminded me of a book by Drummond which I read some time ago and which declared that we live by fitting our lives into our surroundings. Air, bread, sunshine were all elements, the assimilation of which meant life. Perfect correspondence with them and with environment meant perfect life, and perfect life was synonymous with eternal life."

The speaker went on to show how this was true not only in plant and animal life but in human life as well and forthwith, took up the matter of a man's relations and obligations to his community. In so doing he distinguished between the constructive and the parasitical member of a community, and then brought the church in as that institution which serves most unselfishly the man who puts most into it of his worldly goods but more importantly of himself.

A Studen't Mistake

The criticism of a student who gave much to the life of his Alma Mater, in athletics, for instance was touched upon in comparison with the criticism, quite as justified, of the student who gave all his time to his own subject. In so doing it was said, the latter individual had taken away from that which most benefited him and had given nothing in return. And so with communities and men, for no community could succeed without making provision for the spiritual life of its members and no man could succeed merely by observing business ethics—if he refused to join his church, he was hurting that greatest of influences in the welfare of the community from which he derived a living. "The church is that factor which increases man's ability for pleasure and service, for it alone develops the worthiest inclinations of an individual or a community," said Mr. Pidgeon.

The influence of the Great War in teaching this principle was enlarged upon with many illustrations.

A Happy Service

Previous to the meeting Mr. Leslie, who is well known as a member of Hyde Park United Church, Toronto led in song service as well as contributing a splendid vocal solo. There was a bible reading by the Rev. W. McDonald and prayer by J. H. Dudgeon while the combined choirs rendered an anthem in which solo parts were taken by Messrs. Park and Downey and Miss Alma Blanchard and Mrs. Hohner.

4,000 BULBS PUT IN PARKS

City's Parks Are Ready For Winter, Leaves Are Raked Off.

WELL CARED FOR.

Peterborough parks are being dressed up for the winter. At Confederation Square and Victoria Park the flower beds have been planted with over 4,000 Darwin tulips bulbs which are in five different colors. C. Williamson of the Peterborough Floral Company has also donated some Darwin tulips for the shrub beds so that in early spring there will not be that bare look about these beds as in former years. It has not been definitely decided as to what will take the place of the tulips in the summertime. After the planting of the bulbs the beds were covered with some good fertilizer and carefully packed down for the winter. All leaves in the parks have been raked up and will be all burned within the next few days. The water connections have been closed off and the pipes drained.

Through the park committee having placed signs throughout the parks referring to the waste paper baskets the parks have been kept cleaner. Trees have been pruned and the parks this year are cleaner and in better condition than in previous years. A tourist from Rochester asked if Victoria Park was a private park, saying that it was one of the prettiest he had seen in his travels. Many of the citizens have also comented on the appearance of the park.

Because of the kindly comments received from the citizens, the Mayor and council, D. Hayward, caretaker of the parks, would like to thank them all for the appreciation they have shown him in his work.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Toronto Woman and Daughter Buried in Home When House Collapsed.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. —(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Fanny Finklestein and her thirteen year old daughter narrowly escaped death to-day when part of their home collapsed, burying the mother to the neck in bricks and mortar. She was rescued by firemen. The daughter was in another part of the house and was untouched.

Indigestion

Immediate Relief!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drug store.

WHAT A RESPONSE CAME TO THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF

Greene's Xmas Radio Club

Evidently a lot of people were just waiting for our big annual Christmas offer—at anyrate, applications and reservations kept us on the jump. And here's a tip to others who have not yet become members. The Rogers factory inform us that they are 2,000 behind on only one type of set. While we have arranged for a certain number, we can only get delivery in our turn, so have just this to say—

FIRST APPLICANTS WILL BE THE FIRST SERVED.

In previous Club events we have been confined to one line of Radio, but this time there is a choice to Club members of two makes, and many styles, all available on the easy Club plan and terms.

Rogers Batteryless Set

The Rogers Batteryless Set has given four years of eminently satisfactory performance. Many fine sets are in constant use in Peterboro and vicinity. It is not an untried, new thing, but a proven first quality receiving set. Club terms are $2.00 down and $2.50 a week, with delivery when only $12 to $15 has been paid.

DAY-FAN

Hundreds of Day-Fan owners in the city and country are enthusiastic Day-Fan boosters. The Day-Fans have made an enviable record with those who operate them, and the friends who drop in for the entertainment. Our Club prices on Day-Fans are lower than we have ever sold them, and the terms, $2.00 down and $2.00 a week, are very easy, and special for Club members.

CLASS HOLDS MASQUERADE

Gilmour Members of B.Y.P.U. Meet at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Blewett.

PRIZES GIVEN.

(Examiner Correspondence).

A very jolly masquerade was held on the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Blewett on Friday evening, under the auspices of the B.Y.P.U. of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church.

The guests were received on the lawn by a ghost (Miss Marion Blewett), and led along a winding path, lit by pumpkin lanterns. The house was prettily decorated with Hallowe'en colors—streamers and cut-out black cats and yellow candles. After the guests had all assembled, a promenade was held. The judges then gave their decision, which was as follows: Best dressed lady—Miss Beryl Cheyne, dressed as the Night and Stars; best dressed gentleman—Orville Rome, dressed as a Knight; best dressed comic lady—Miss Gladys Blewett, dressed as a comic musician; best comic man, Fred Mann, as an overgrown girl.

Miss Jean Scott presented the prizes The remainder of the evening was spent in fortune-telling and singing. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

HAVE NEW SCHEME TO SECURE GYPSUM

Canada Cement Company Consolidates Quarry Operations With Atlantic Concern.

HALIFAX, Nov. 6. — (Canadian Press.) — An arrangement has just been made between the Canada Cement Company, Limited, and the Atlantic Gypsum Products Company involving a consolidation of gypsum quarry operations, effective Nov. 1, 1928. All the Nova Scotia crude gypsum rock used by the two companies will henceforth be produced by the Atlantic Gypsum Products Company, which will furnish the cement company with its requirements of gypsum rock for Eastern Canadian plants.

The consolidation marks the retirement of the Canada Cement Company as a manufacturer of gysum products in the United States, its subsidiary plant, that of the Pennsylvania Gypsum Company, at Chester, Pa., having been sold to the Atlantic Gypsum Products Company, whose quaries are situated at Walton, N.S., and Cheticamp, N.S.

The Canada Cement Company has up to this time met its gypsum requirements from its quarry at Ingonish. Under a long term contract Atlantic will henceforth ship from the Cheticamp quarry all of the cement company's Eastern Canadian requirements, while several deposits will be held in reserve.

Imperial Oil Creates New Record On List

TORONTO, November 6 (Canadian Press). — Oils featured the market and gave it a marked buoyancy with insistent buying on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. A new all-time record was established by the Canadian oil issues, while general trading was in unlisted stocks.

Imperial Oil led the oils and created a new record when it reached 102½ for a net gain of four. International Petroleum also advanced four to 55½. Canadian Oil was up 4½ at 65. Super-Petroleum went up 1¾. British-American Oil continued its steady upward movement and rose 1⅞ to 54¼, while Service Station was unchanged and McColl-Frontenac Preferred dropped one at 90. Liquor issues were easier, Seagrams was down a half at 21, Carlings ¾ at 33½, Hiram Walker a half at 81¼, while Canada Malting was up ¾ at 35¾. Canadian Dredge was up 1½ at 57½. News From the Mines

Through

Solloway, Mills & Company

Malartic.

After interviewing Mr. H. F. Kennedy, one of the directors of Malartic Mines, the "Mail and Empire" states that Mr. Kennedy, who was in disagreement with official reports which had been published on the condition of Malartic Mines, has since the recent meeting of the directors, altered his opinion. As a result of this meeting, Mr. Kennedy is glad to say to those interested in Malartic that the property is being developed aggressively and efficiently, and that shareholders can be assured that theier interests are being safeguarded in every possible way. The directors are a unit in their desire to promote and portect the interests of the property.

Barry Hollinger.

By far the most important development that has taken place at this property in recent months is the decision of the management to carry on diamond drilling to depth from the 1,200 foot level. The first drilling is to be done from the 1,250 foot level on the west shaft. It is to obtain information as to the geology and structure at depth and to pick up if possible the downward extension of the ore body recently developed on the 1,250 foot level. The drift to the west on the 1,250 foot level has apparently passed the ore lense and is again in material below commercial grade. The mill at present is treating approximately 45 tons of ore per day. It is thought that it will be necessary for Barry Hollinger to refinance before very long.

Sylvanite.

Diamond drilling is now getting under way. The first holes are to be put down in the north-western section of the property north of the Wright-Hargreaves boundary. This is to be followed by further extensive and carefully planned diamond drilling in various other sections. The north vein has now been cut in the crosscut on the 1,375 and 1,500 foot levels. On the former level the vein showed a width of 5 feet and where cut averaged $12 a ton. On the 1,500 foot level, a similar width was shown with values between $8 and $10 a ton. On the 1,375 foot level the south vein has been located by crosscutting and shows a width of 6 to 7 feet with values of between $9 and $10 per ton.

The management have laid out an extensive exploration and development campaign which they have been following for the past two years. It has yielded excellent results and has not only enabled the company to maintain production and build up a material surplus, but has given strong indications of unexpected ore deposition lying to the north and south of the present main workings.

Amity Copper.

Drifting on the 375 foot level has been discontinued for the present. Shaft sinking has again been resumed and it is proposed to continue immediately to a depth of 600 feet. At this horizon, further extensive lateral work will be carried on. The last shipment of copper to the Noranda smelter will probably show a copper content of around 25 per cent. This is due to the encountering of bornite in the winze and to the work on the 375 foot level. The work so far done on this property shows it to be one of decided merit, and one that well warrants the deep exploration now planned for it.

News from the mines

Consolidated Smelters.

Our Vancouver office reports that the Saturday night issue of the Province paper of Vancouver stated that Consolidated Smelters were negotiating for a block of Sherritt-Gordon stock. This is indeed news to eastern mining interests, who profess to be ignorant of any such deal being under way. If this report is authentic, the acquiring of Sherritt-Gordon stock by Smelters will indeed be a boomerang of no mean force.

Bidgood.

News has been scarce on results to date on Bidgood Mines. Probably the softness of the present market is a reflection of the scarcity of news. One rumor on the street is to the effect that Bidgood's new find is of considerable importance, and that a new shaft is to be sunk immediately. Another report states that the new find does not merit serious consideration as assay values are low. Be this as it may, Bidgood will have to show something tangible in the way of ore reserves in the next six months as the treasury by that time will be pretty well depleted.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A report from Timmins is to the effect that the drift on the 600-foot level of the Vipond Consolidated has opened up 25 feet of $100 ore to date. This would be one of the most important developments in the mine's history. The vein on the 700-foot level is now said to be opened up for a length of about 600 feet with an average width of 8 feet.

Advices from Amos state that the diamond drill hole being put down from the 375-foot level of the Malartic has cut good ore at about 512 feet. The core is said to show about 16 feet of mineralization with values running about $8.00 per ton.

It is reported from Rouyn that Gilbec have made an additional new discovery of some importance parallel to the discovery made six weeks ago. The company has employed an electrical prospecting firm to make a survey of the northern section of their property, taking in the section in which their latest discoveries are in. A plant has been ordered and it is expected to arrive at the property any day now. It is the intention of the company to sink to 100 feet and to establish a level at that point, after which lateral work will be carried out. Gilbec adjoins the Newbec Mines in Rouyn.

E. J. McMillan, superintendent of the McMillan Gold Mines, is quoted as saying that new and favorable developments are "threatening" on the 500-foot level of the mine. It is said that more than 300 feet of values of a commercial grade has been developed in driving east on the 300-foot level of the mine. The face of the drift is approximately 700 feet east of the shaft. Good progress is also being made with the drift west of the shaft on the 300-foot level, the vein being said to have held continuously for 200 feet. While not as rich as values on the 500-foot level, it is thought that the ore from the 300-foot horizon can be mined at a profit, especially when "sweetened" with the higher grade stuff from the lower level. It is proposed to do some diamond drilling both east and west of the present shaft to determine the best location for their new shaft. This shaft should be under way early in 1929, at which time the initial unit of a mill should be installed. Mr. J. Errington is said to have been added to the board of directors.

Nickel Earnings Expected to Increase

Sudbury — It is stated that a meeting of the directors of the International Nickel Company will be held to-day at which the company's quarterly statement for the period ending September 30 will be presented and discused. This statement is expected to reveal substantial increases in earnings.

Never before in the history of the company has such progress and prosperity been noted as during the current year. Total earnings in 1927 applicable to common stock of the company amounted to $3 36 a share. Profits for the first quarter of 1928 amounted to $2,107,920, which, after allowing for preferred dividends, represented $1.18 a share, or about a 50 per cent. increase over the profits for the corresponding period for the preceding year. The report for the second quarter of 1928 showed a corresponding increase, with profits applicable to common stock at $1.70 a share, making profits for the first six months equal to $2.88 per share of common.

HOSPITAL FILLS LARGE POSITION

whose rude framework rocks under stormy winds and where the cold strikes in frostily when the winter comes around. Often, the small living-room cannot be used, because the door lets in so much draft, but the big iron stove in the rear portion keeps the two hospital rooms, or wards, as they are called, in comfortable condition for the patients.

New Room Fitted Up

Recently, another room for patients has been fitted up, in the top storey, the dietician giving up her own bedroom for this purpose, and moving her bed in with the nurse.

Miss Taylor, who has been in charge at Apsley Hospital, is away for a short time. Her place is being taken by Miss Harriet Wilson and Miss Agnes Byers is the dietician. They are kept busy all the year round and, as Dr. Moore of Lakefield remarked to the visitor, "They have fitted in wonderfully with the life of the community." Coming from cities like Toronto and Ottawa and Montreal, they have adjusted themselves to conditions in such a manner as to make them wonderfully popular with the people of Apsley.

Praises Hospital

Dr. Moore comes over from Lakefield on many trips to the village, when the resident doctor, Dr. Shepherd is absent. He is loud in his praises of the Outpost Hospital. "Before we had this place to come to," he remarks, "it was a mighty hard job at times to look after them in their own homes."

A friend who is going to the Apsley district on Saturday on a hunting trip would be willing to take along any small articles donated for the use of the Hospital. However, donations at any other time would be equally aceptable and anything from a measuring-spoon to a bureau would be very welcome and do much to add to the comfort of the energetic nurses and their patients in that isolated place where the wolves come down in the winter time and where bears are frequent visitors.

Looking out from the little Hospital, one faces a ring of dark evergreen trees, not very far away. The outlook is in keeping with the landscape contour of that northern settlement which is picturesque but not very hospitable, as far as Nature is concerned.

Anyone wishing to donate articles is asked to telephone Jeanette, at The Examiner office.

FIFTEEN PASS EXAMINATION

Rev. J. D. Paterson Conducts Royal Life Saving Society Tests

AT Y.W.C.A. POOL.

Examinations of the Royal Life Saving Society of London, England, were conducted at the Y.W.C.A. Pool by the Rev. J. D. Paterson on Saturday evening. Fifteen members of the "Y" class successfully passed the tests for Elementary, Proficiency, or Bronze Medallion. A second class will try the examinations next week.

The elementary test consists of swimming 50 yards breast stroke and 25 yards back stroke, also second and fourth methods of rescue in deep water and towing subject 10 yards, diving for heavy object in 5 feet of water, also the rescue and release drill on land.

The Proficiency test requires the rescue and release drill on land. The Schafer method of resuscitation and promotion of warmth and circulation. Each candidate must perform four methods of rescue and then of release in the water, the drowning subject carried in the rescue methods ten yards. Each candidate swim 100 yards breast stroke and 50 yards back stroke, the latter without use of hands, also dive to depth of five feet from the surface of water and bring up a weighted object.

Bronze Medallion Test

The test for the Bronze Medallion requires the contestant to be 14 years of age or over and to pass a difficult written examination based on the text book of the society as well as the practical work which includes swimming 100 yards breast stroke and 50 yards back stroke, three methods of release and four of rescue in the water, towing the victim 20 yards and applying artificial resuscitation, also diving to a depth of five feet for a five pound object and bringing it to shore.

Mr. Paterson complimented the girls on the splendid showing they had made in their work; several of the pupils being very young for the difficult examinations. Little Dolly Boyle, the youngest, was only eight years of age. Several of the contestants were members of the Kiwanis playground swimming classes.

A short exhibition of diving, including high dives from the balcony, was put on by the girls at the close of the tests. Refreshments were then served to all the swimmers.

Those who tried the examinations and successfully passed were:—

Elementary—Dorothy Boyle.

Miss Littlefield announced at the close of the examinations that all Life Saving members of the present class and the next life saving examination class will meet Wednesday at 7.00 p.m. in connection with the coming exhibition and life saving examinatons.

IN MEMORIAM

CHATTEN.—In loving memory of my dear father, John Chatten, who passed away Nov. 6, 1927.
The years may wipe out many things
But this they'll wipe out never:
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
—Ever remembered by his daughter, Mrs. E. York.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of my dear father, Mr. J. W. Chatten, who passed away Nov. 6, 1927:
One year has passed, our hearts still sore,
As time flies by we miss him more,
His loving smile, his welcome face,
No one can fill his vacant place.

Forget him, no—we never will,
We loved him then, we love him still.
His memory is as fresh to-day
As in the hour he passed away.

We think of him in silence
And his name we oft recall,
For there's nothing left to answer
But his photo on the wall.
—Sadly Missed By His Daughter, Mrs. Harold Drury and Brother, Mr. F. W. Chatten.

UNITED STATES ELECTS HERBERT HOOVER

War Is Declared on Jury Tampering

ATTORNEY GENERAL DECLARES FERGUSON GOVERNMENT WILL PROECUTE ALL TAMPERERS

Same Warning Is Given As Was To Gunmen of United States.

COBOURG CASE.

Juryman at Cobourg Assizes Is Asked To Aid a Prisoner.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7 (Special to The Examiner)—Attorney General W. H. Price declared to-day that the Provincial Government will give "no quarter" to anyone tampering with juries in Ontario, such as is reported in a Cobourg case.

The same warning that was given to the gunmen of the United States, to "keep out of Ontario" is given to lawyers and individuals who might try to affect the course of justice by tampering with or "fixing" the jury.

Extreme measures to keep this pratice out of Ontario will be used if necessary, Col. Price states. He points out that some sections of the United States are having trouble with jury tampering, and declares that his department is going to keep this practice out of Canada.

"Say a Good Word"

"Say a good word for the young man you know (with a wink)—and I'll see you again."

These words, made to one of the jurymen in the panel of the Fall Assizes being held before Justice W. E. Raney, were reported to His Lordship late yesterday by one of the Crown officers, and was discussed seriously by the Judge in his address to the jury on dismissing them last evening.

Arrests Expected

Arrests are anticipated in connection with the attempted corruption, but neither Crown Prosecutor nor the Crown Attorney would say what action would be taken, or when. Police made efforts to locate the man who made the proposition to the juryman, but it is uncertain whether or not there will be any further developments.

The statement is alleged to have been made by a friend of one of the parties concerned in one of the criminal cases, in both of which true bills have been returned by the Grand Jury, when a party whom the juryman did not know, but who is said to have known the juryman, buttonholded him. The juryman reported the matter to the Crown Attorney, W. F. Kerr, K.C., and Charles M. Garvey, K.C., of Toronto, Crown Prosecutor, was also informed.

"It has been brought to my attention that since this court opened on Monday, an attempt has been made to approach jurymen for the purpose of influencing them in reaching their decision," the Judge declared. "What I am saying does not refer to the case at present before the court, but I am satisfied from information that has come to me that some one is acting in that direction. That kind of thing is a very serious offence under the Code and anyone who attempts to influence justice in that way, must, I am sure, appreciate he is doing a wrong thing. I am going to ask if any juryman present in this case has been approached, that he signalize his condemnation of this kind of thing by going to Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr during the afternoon and telling him what has happened."

Justice Raney quoted from the Criminal Code, pointing out that the penalty for interference with justice was two years' imprisonment.

W. H. DICKIN IS LEAVING CITY

Has Accepted Position With Robert Simpson Company, Toronto.

ENERGETIC FIGURE.

Having accepted a position of responsibility with the Robert Simpson company, Toronto W. Harry Dickin, for the past four years, exclusive Peterborough representative of the House of Hobberlin Ltd., energetic figure in the life of the Peterborough Kiwanis club and St. Andrew's United church, leaves within a short time to assume his new duties. As this city gained by his arrivalhere a few years ago, so she loses by his advancement to a wider field of endeavor, yet to Mr. and Mrs. Dickin and young daughter is extended the best wishes of the business and social life of the community.

Began in Owen Sound

Recognized as a clothing authority, Mr. Dickin began his business career with the firm of W. J. Morgan and company of Owen Sound and at the age of 22 years assumed the management of that firm's store, and subsequently of stores owned by outside interests. Later, on recommendation of his former employer, he became manager of the G. B. Ryan Men's clothing store in Guelph.

He held office in the Masonic order, there, and was one of the first members of the Guelph Kiwanis club. Soon after coming to Peterborough, he assumed the exclusive agency of the House of Hobberlin, Ltd., and continued his connection with Kiwanis. Incidentally, and to his credit, it may be mentioned that the Kiwanis Made-in-Canada fair grew from a suggestion of his and in recognition of the fact Mr. Dickin was elected the first manager of that exhibition. He has had the pleasure of helping and seeing it grow to its present status.

Another recent institution growing from his fertile mind has been the great United Church Week which began on Monday night last and which is being continued in the United churches of the city. He, as president of the St. Andrew's Men's Association has put that organization in the fore while in earlier days the Peterborough Health Association and other public bodies felt the force of his assistance.

Throughout his activities he has been ably supported by Mrs. Dickin who will leave a host of friends in Peterborough.

LEGION PLANS SERVICES FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Armistice Anniversary To Be Fittingly Observed in Peterborough.

MANY ASSIST.

Male Voice Choir and All Saints' Church Choir To Be Present.

That the tenth anniversary of Armistice Day will be adequately honored in Peterborough was assured at a meeting of the executive of the local branch of the Canadian Legion last night when plans were made for the parade and service.

So far as is possible, the Peterborough observance will follow the order of service adopted for the Ottawa ceremony, at Parliament Hill, at the same hour. Splendid support is being given by local organizations, such as the Male Voice Choir and All Saints' Church Choir, and it is confidently expected by the Legion officers that this tenth anniversary will be long remembered. The arrangements have been delayed, awaiting definite decision by the Memorial Committee as to whether the city's memorial would be unveiled on Armistice Sunday. In such event, of course, the Legion service would have given place to the community service.

The parade will form up at Legion headquarters, Murray Street, at two o'clock. During the salute to the Cenotaph, citizens may place wreaths on the monument, and the band of the Peterborough Rangers will play an appropriate selection. There will be an address by Rev. Captain P. Costello, and the Caledonian Pipe Band will play Lord Lovat's Lament. As a fitting close to this part of the day's ceremonies, buglers of the Peterborough Rangers will sound Last Post and Reveille.

Parade to Capitol.

The parade will then move off to the Capitol, where the main events will take place. The following will be the order of march: Standard Bearer; Rangers' Band; Fourth Field Battery, Canadian Artillery; Third Prince of Wales' Dragoons; the Peterborough Rangers; No. 3 Company, Fourth Battalion, Canadian Machine Gun Corps; Veterans of 1866; the Mayor, City Council, Board of Education, and other civic bodies; the Police Force; the Fire Department; Caledonian Pipe Band; Canadian Legion and all ex-service men; Fraternal Organizations.

Splendid Program.

A splendid program has been arranged for the service at the Capitol, intended to give expression to the gratitude of those who remember the sacrifices of a decade and more ago and to call to mind once again the memories of the Peterborough men who fell in active service.

The following will be the program:
Singing: "O Canada!"
Last Post.
Two minutes' silence.
Band selection: Dead March from "Saul."
Short address: Captain J. Abraham, President Canadian Legion.
Hymn: "Abide With Me."
Short addresses by the Mayor, E. A. Peck, M.P., and W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.
Band selection: "Land of Hope and Glory."
Address: His Honor Judge Huycke.
Anthem: "O Valiant Hearts," All Saints' Church Choir.
Reveille.
God Save the King.

Public Invited

The public is cordially invited by the Canadian Legion to be present at and take part in both the ceremony at the Cenotaph and the service at the Capitol. Seats will be reserved for all Militia units, the choirs and the bands, but the seating capacity of the hall is equal to accommodating many hundreds more citizens who wish to take this opportunity of observing in so fitting a manner the momentous event of ten years ago.

It has been truly said that no other anniversary can take the place of this, the tenth, and the service planned by the Canadian Legion is fully worthy the outstanding event.

DEMOCRAT CANDIDATE WINS GOVERNORSHIP OF NEW YORK

Roosevelt Carries New York State Over Albert Ottinger.

CONGRESS REPUBLICAN.

Hoover's Electoral College Vote Will Probably Be 444 Out of 531.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Democrats found a bright spot in the New York returns in election of Franklin D. Roosevelt to Governor over Albert Ottinger.

Democratic crusade into the farm country showed no signs of netting Smith a single electoral vote. The farm states steadily piling up Republican majorities Wisconsin, where it was thought a coalition of Democratic and Lafollette elements would materialize, swung to the Republicans after giving Smith an early edge.

In the south, Virginia deserted the Democrats for the first time since reconstruction days. Two other states of the solid south, Texas and North Carolina also showed Republican majorities.

The Republicans increased their frail plurality of one in the Senate and added to their comfortable working majority in the House on basis of the Congressional election returns trickling slowly behind the sweep of Herbert Hoover.

Upsets in Delaware and Maryland gave the Republicans the first blood in Senate control. The Democratic incumbents in these states, Senators Thomas F. Bayard and William Cabell Bruce, respectively were counted out early last night.

All of the thirteen Republicans seats involved in the Senate race appeared to be in victory column but the Democrats, with twenty seats on the election block were having their troubles in several states.

Six in Kentucky

Riding the rolling Hoover tide in Kentucky, the Republicans picked up half a dozen members in the House from that state and held their own in the other normally Republican districts.

Solid in South

However, the Democrats kept most of their solid representations in the House from the deep south and from New York City despite switches on the presidential contests.

As figures stood at nine o'clock to-day with many votes still to be counted, about four-fifths of States, carrying nearly the same proportion of electoral votes had either toppled to the Republican column or gave evidence of doing so.

By irony of fate it was Governor Smith's own State, New York which first wrote his doom. Hoover might have lost New York's 45 electoral votes and still won the presidency. Smith had to win New York to be elected.

If Smith captures Massachussetts and holds the Southern States in which he has good leads, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, Hoover's electoral College vote will be 444 out of total of 531, a high mark for all time.

Assured of Rhode Island

Governor Smith was assured of Rhode Island this morning when 194 of States, 196 precincts gave him lead of 118,323 to 115,596 over Hoover.

PRESIDENT ELECT.

Herbert Hoover, who was yesterday elected by citizens of United States to be their thirty-second president.

PROTECTION INADEQUATE

Grand Jury Reports Fire Protection Poor in Cobourg Institutions.

VISITS HOSPITALS.

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—The inadequacy of fire protection provided at the House of Refuge and Ontario Hospital at Cobourg were the outstanding items on the Grand Jury presentment to Mr. Justice Raney at the Fall Assizes at Cobourg to-day. The Grand Jury visited the gaol, court house, and Cobourg Hospital in addition to the institutions mentioned. On all the public buildings, so inspected the jury reported most favorably, except for the facilities for fire protection at the House of Refuge and the Ontario Hospital.

The House of Refuge is now harboring 73 inmates, and after praising the accommodation and treatment, the presentment says: "Minor repairs are required to ceilings in two rooms, and hoped adequate fire protection is supplied in the near future." The Ontario Hospital which the jury sought fit to criticize in this connection is a much larger institution, some 400 patients suffering from various mental afflictions are confined in the Ontario Hospital together with a large staff. In commenting on conditions here the jury, over the signature of A. J. Russell, foreman, says, "We also recommend that better fire protection be provided at this hospital."

NAVIGATION RESUMED.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Navigation on the Welland Canal was resumed at three o'clock this morning with the moderation of the strong wind which held it up since early yesterday.

Uniform Dress For Collegiate Girls Advocated By Members Of Board Of Education Last Night

The meeting proper of the Board of Education had just about concluded last night when Frank Dawson started some lively discussion of an unusual, though not new, subject—uniform costume or dress for Collegiate girls.

In introducing the matter, Mr. Dawson stated that he had been approached by at least two prominent men regarding the advisability of such regulation, because, for one reason, the present cost of equipping a Peterborough school girl's wardrobe is almost prohibitive. "Why not a middy and skirt costume? Has it ever been tried?" asked Mr. Dawson.

Principal Kenner: "You'll run into trouble if you try to tell the girls how to dress. Here is what the College and Vocational School Announcement for 1928-1929 says regarding a school costume: The girls of the Institute wear a distinctive school costume. This is recommended both for economic reasons and because of the fact that it tends to develop a school spirit. The school costume must be worn at all the social functions held during the school year."

Mr. Strickland: "The parents are willing to co-operate, but the children—not always."

Mr. Kenner (after further discussion of the matter): "This discussion—reported as I suppose it will—should be helpful, and I might have a talk with the girls regarding a uniform dress."

On the motion of Mr. Strickland, Mr. Kenner was instructed to do what he could to encourage the idea of the girl's wearing the costume suggested in the announcement.

Smith Congratulates President-Elect Hoover

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—Shortly after midnight Governor Smith sent the following telegram to Herbert Hoover:

"I congratulate you heartily on your victory, and extend to you my sincere good wishes for your health and happiness, and for the success of your Administration.

(Signed) Alfred E. Smith."

740 PERSONS ENROLLED AT NIGHT SCHOOL

Board of Education Meets in Library Room at Collegiate Institute.

RESPECT WAR MEMORIAL.

Thirteen New Canadians Are Learning English at Night School.

The new Library and Board Room of the Collegiate Institute was used for the first time as a meeting place for the Board of Education, and to Dr. H. M. Yelland fell the honor of presiding as chairman, pro tem, over this first meeting.

A large number of communications was responsible for much of the helpful discussion which occurred during the meeting while the reception of reports proved equally as interesting.

Serve Broad Purpose

That the Collegiate Institute and the new Vocational School are serving a broad purpose, was shown in a report received from H. R. H. Kenner, Principal, who stated that the total enrolment of the latter is 417 with an average attendance of 408, while 719 of the 740 persons enrolled in the various courses offered by the Vocation night school, are in attendance. The percentage is 97 per cent.

The vocational school night classes are divided as follows:

Automobile mechanics—enrolment 93.

Dressmaking—9 classes, enrolment 190. Eight of these classes are held at night and one is held from 2 o'clock to 4 o'clock on Monday afternoons.

Draughting — 3 classes, enrolment 64.

Machine shop practice—2 classes, enrolment 41.

Commercial subjects—6 classes, enrolment 156.

Millinery—1 class, enfolment 14.

Artistic Design—1 class, enrolment 19.

Cooking—3 classes, enrolment 60.

Woodworking—1 class, enrolment 22.

Workshop Mathematics—2 classes, enrolment 41.

Electricity—1 class, enrolment 21.

Electrical Switchboard—1 class, enrolment 26.

English for new Canadians — 1 class, enrolment 13; including 4 from Lithuania, 7 from Hungary, 1 from Finland, and 1 from Holland.

There are approximately 1,650 children in the city who know the letters of the alphabet, and 66 of these are wearing glasses, according to the unusual information supplied the Board by the School Medical Officer, Dr. A. W. McPherson, who went on to state that 148 defect slips had been sent out last year, calling attention to defective vision.

Teachers Resign

The resignations of a woman member of the Public School staff, as well as of H. H. Langford, were accepted, and the chairman of the committee on appointments and the Inspector were instructed to fill the resulting vacancies.

The Local Council of Women requested that some action be taken to promote greater respect among school children for the War Memorial and the soldier dead of Peterborough. At the meeting, the information was volunteered that the teachers are taking this matter up at the present time.

Treatment of Other Communications

Treatment of numerous other communications may be summarized as follows:

From J. J. Turner and Sons, re a new flag set—Received.

From the secretary of the Teachers' Institute, requesting use of the Collegiate Hall for a regular day session, not a public meeting—request granted.

From the National Sanitarium Association regarding sale of Christmas seals in the schools.—In view of demands upon pupils and parents it was decided to adhere to last year's ruling against sale of such, in the schools.

From Mrs. L. C. Deyell of the Home and School Association, asking improved lighting for the Kindergarten in Queen Alexandra School.—Referred to the property committee.

Republicans Win In Big Landslide; Break Solid South

EXPECT AT LEAST 405 ELECTORAL VOTES; NEW ENGLAND STAND BY PRESIDENT ELECT

Democrats Make No Headway in Great Lakes States, "Farm Bloc" Voters Swing to the Republican Standard.

NEW YORK, November 7 (Canadian Press). — Herbert Hoover was yesterday elected President of the United States, with Charles Curtis as Vice-President. Returns, so far, are incomplete, but constantly increasing majorities in state after state leave little doubt of a Republican sweep. Democratic hopes of capturing New York State with its 45 Electoral College votes, faded as Hoover pluralities from up-state precincts began to roll in.

Governor Smith had hoped to make New York State the nucleus of an inroad into the normally Republican states of New England and along the Atlantic coast. The endeavor failed, as Democrats failed to secure the LaFollette vote of the Middle-West. Only in states south of Mason and Dixon's line—the states of the solid Democratic South—did Governor Smith's position seem to be secure. Early this morning, Hoover was leading not only in border states which four years ago went Republican, he was leading also in Oklahoma and Tennessee, two border states which in the last Presidential election recorder Democratic majorities.

And not only did Republicans win the fight for President and Vice-President, indications are that they will obtain a firmer grip in Congress. At present they have no clear majority in the Senate. Incomplete returns indicate a Republican gain of several seats.

Having listened to the returns at his home in Palo Alto, Cal., through the earlier hours of the evening, Mr. Hoover had retired satisfied that he had been elected by one of the largest Electoral College pluralities ever given a Presidential nominee. The New York Times and the New York World, supporters of Smith, had conceded the defeat of their candidate.

Not only did Hoover overtake Smith's earlier lead in New York State as the tabulation continued, but he was leading likewise in Massachusetts and all of the other normally Republican states of the East: he was ahead in all of the border states of Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma, and Missouri; and he was climbing away from Smith in the West and North-West, even Wisconsin, which at first had favored the Democratic nominee, swinging over on later returns.

LEADS IN EIGHT.

Smith as ahead at midnight only in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina. These states have a total of but 96 votes out of the 531 in the Electoral College. In Texas the race still was extremely close, while in North Carolina Hoover was gaining. Impressive margins had been established by the Republican ticket in Virginia and in Florida of the Southern states which have been Democratic since the Civil War. In none of these states was the tabulation nearly complete and changes still were entirely possible.

In Massachusetts Smith was cutting into the Hoover lead as the returns from Boston began to balance off the out-state vote. In some of the border states there likewise was a tendency toward see-sawing during the night.

A good part of the Far West remained to be heard from, but most of it has been counted Republican, even by the Democratic leaders. Early returns from the farm belt disclosed no definite tendency in the farm belt to turn Democratic. Hoover even was leading in Nebraska where the defection of Senator Norris had been counted on by the Democrats to swing eight electoral votes to Smith.

At midnight the returns from the Congressional elections were far from complete, but they showed a number of Democratic Senators trailing and the Republicans holding their own generally in the contests for both Senate and House.

Hoover Maintains Lead

With each hour swelling the total vote cast, Herbert Hoover was maintaining leads of varying proportions over Alfred E. Smith in a majority of the States represented in incomplete election returns tabulated before 9 p.m.

The Republican candidate's advantage was scattered through the east, the mid-west, the border states and in a part of the south. Florida, Texas, and Virginia pushing him ahead in New York and had a small lead in Wisconsin. Otherwise his leads were confined to the south. He forged steadily ahead in disputed North Carolina and held a two-to-one advantage in Alabama and leads or greater leads in South Carolina, Georgia, and Arkansas.

Hoover was expanding his margin

Bethel Church Organized In 1828

ONE HUNDRED YEARS SINCE FIRST SERVICE WAS HELD IN TOWNSHIP OF OTONABEE

Mission Had Previously Been Established in Hiawatha Village.

LARGE CIRCUIT.

First Methodist Minister in the Township Was Rev. S. Armour —Service in Homes.

It was in the year 1828 that the first Christian service among the white settlers of Otonabee was held in the home of John Fife, on Lot 22, Concession 4, on the property now owned by William Elmhurst. One hundred years later, the congregation of Bethel United Church marked the anniversary of that brave little service with special music by the choir from Keene United Church, and fitting sermons by the Reverends E. F. Swayne of Fraserville, and William McDonald, B.A., B.D., of Peterborough.. Strangely appropriate it is, then, that a descendant of John Fife, Miss Elizabeth Fife, should join with Mrs. George Patterson (they are both residing in Peterborough at present), and Mrs. C. H. Edwards,, in preparing a centenary record of the coming of Methodism to Bethel—a history that contains a wealth of accurate information regarding its growth in a century.

While a mission had previously been established at Hiawatha, where the Indian village had just been built, the Rev. S. Armour preached the first sermon of Methodism in Otonabee. and he, in turn, was followed by the Rev. Mr. Evans of the Rice Lake Indian Mission and the Rev. D. McMullen of Cobourg, who preached once a month at the home of John Fife, Jr., and subsequently, at those of John Stewart and George Howson.

Circuit Started in 1826

One authority has set the date of the Rice Lake circuit's establishment at 1825-26. At that time there were 110 members throughout Otonabee, Monaghan, Cavan, Smith and Emily. It was called the Cavan circuit in 1826 and to it a Mr. Bissel came fortnightly. The Rev. Wellington Jeffers has written of travelling the Cavan circuit in 1831-32 in connection with the Rev. C. Vandusen, staying in the mission house on Rice Lake. The visits lasted two weeks during which they travelled through Monaghan, Cavan, Smith, Ops, Douro, Dummer, Otonabee, the village of Peterborough and Mud Lake Mission. Jeffers and Vandusen preached on this route twenty-one times and while at the mission to prevent ennui, they preached at Fife's, Gilchrist's Mills (now Keene) and Howson's.

Parents Are Converted

That religion was taken very seriously in those days was evidenced by the fact that in 1828, Mrs. John Fife, on hearing of the preaching at Hiawatha, decided to hear the minister there, and forthwith set out, with her baby on her back, one Sabbath morning. Her husband accompanied her as far as the Indian River which they crossed by means of a fallen tree at Weir's Creek. (There was only one dam, it being at Gilchrist's Mills). On she travelled alone through forest and over rough hills, following the trail to Hiawatha, undaunted by dangers she might encounter.

So enthusiastic was her description of the service on returning, that the following Sabbath witnessed her return to the Mission, this time accompanied by her husband and baby, William. Mr. Fife was converted at that service and the minister was prevailed upon, successfully to return with Mr. and Mrs. Fife. Unsummoned by telephone or telegraph, Anglicans, Presbyterians, and representatives of all denominations came together at the Fife home, not once, but regularly throughout the next fifteen years. The children of the Fife's, Shearer's, Nelson's, Carter's, Eason's were baptized and it all inspired William Telford to write in one of his poems:—

No church to edify the old
Or school to teach the young,
The Praises of assembled throngs,
They seldom heard them sung.
No doubt, within those wild-woods homes
Some did love God and fear;
In course of time His servant came
And preached twelve times a year.

The First School House

It was in the year 1831 that a school house was built on Lot 20, 4th concession of Otonabee. It was called Spiers' School, and was on the farm of James Nelson. In 1843 services were held in it and for ten years afterward. It is interesting to know that Isaac Fife of Peterborough, and William Spier, of Lang, can recall attending church there, though they were very young. The Rev. Mr. Slater baptized eGorge Fife, while Hugh Fife was baptized by the Rev. Mr. Slater baptized George Fife.

Boys Are Chosen For Judging Team To Represent Peterbrough County.

NO IDLE MOMENTS.

Trip Through Parliament Buildings and Stock Yards Planned For Boys.

If any of the five hundred Ontario farm boys who are to visit the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto this month have any time on their hands on which to be homesick, it will not be the fault of those who have arranged the programme for their visit. Starting off with a bang-up dinner at Hart House, the famous social centre of the University of Toronto, on the night of their arrival, the boys will have three days crowded with interest, entertainment and instruction. Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, will be the chairman at the banquet, and the boys will hear addresses by Premier Howard Ferguson and Dr. H. J. Cody, the chairman of the Board of Governors of the University.

Members of Team

The boys of Peterborough vicinity who have won the trip are:—

Ernest C. Wilson, R.R. 2, Keene.
Elwood Dunford, R.R. 2, Lakefield.
Hugh Buchanan, Havelock.
Gordon Hancock, R.R. 2, Peterborough.

In the afternoon of the same day they will be taken through the huge manufacturing plant of the Massey-Harris Company Limited and will see the different factory processes in the production of farm implements. They will be guests of the Massey-Harris Company at supper. In the evening they will attend the Royal Winter Fair Horse Show as guests of the Fair.

SEVENTY YEARS OF ACTIVITY REVIEWED BY H. H. POLLOCK

Trent River Man Best Known As Builder of Fine Canoes.

IS STILL ACTIVE.

Father Was School Teacher, Minister and Surgeon—Led Adventurous Life.

(By J. S. Dickson.)

Campbellford, Nov. 7.—Many and interesting are the accounts of the olden days which may be heard for the asking from H. H. Pollock, resident of Trent River for the past forty-four years. Henry Hugh Pollock will celebrate his seventieth birthday on Wednesday, November 7th. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hugh Pollock and was born near Cobourg on the property known as the John R. Clarke farm. November 7th will mark the completion of three score and ten years of a most interesting life lived in a quiet unassuming manner.

As a boy of sixteen he came to the vicinity of Trent River, but it was not till forty-eight years ago that he actually took up residence in the village. Forty-three years ago he started in business as a general merchant and was in business for some thirty-five years. During this time he was for various terms, the village postmaster. His first appointment was about 1911.

As a master workman, H. H. Pollock is known throughout a wide district. Whether it be a boat or a hammer-handle that he makes, it is a safe bet that it will be the best that is possible. His first efforts as a boat-builder were directed toward the shaping of log-canoes. The first craft that came into being under his hand is still in his own possession. It is made of pine and is fifteen feet long with a beam of twenty-five inches and is eleven inches in depth. It might be expected that such a craft, with its sentimental value recalling the earlier days on the river, would not be for sale, but its owner and builder hesitated only a few moments before saying that it would be for sale. He would not set a definite or final figure but intimated that he would not refuse twenty-five dollars for it. There are other "dug-outs" of his design still in service.

Builds Board-canoes.

But the days of log-canoes passed and the lighter forms, built of boards, came into being and were in demand. H. H. turned his attention and skill in that direction and the result was a design that an official of the Peterborough Canoe Company, a firm whose boats are known the world over, expressed his opinion on the model as the best in the world for the size of the boat. Just a few weeks more than thirty-seven years ago, H. H. took his first board-canoe off the mould. Since that time the canoe has been in service every year and is still in good condition. H. H. says he saw the boat this summer and that it is in first-class condition with the exception of one deck which needs some repairs.

The boat has not been used as a pleasure craft only. Every trapping season it is sent along the shores and marshes of the river and during the summer it is constantly on fishing trips. In the later autumn, it is used for duck and deer hunting, and, as a rule, it is not put into winter storage till the ice forms.

The Pollock canoes have lines that make them good cruisers and yet there is a difference in their profile as seen from the water that at once identifies them. While it is only reasonable to note that the first canoes were rather heavier than some of the most recent products, it is also of interest to note that Mr. Pollock has built some of the lightest craft that have ever been made of wood and metal nails according to their size. All his canoes are cruising models but vary in size.

About the year 1914, a canoe was taken from his workshop that weighed exactly thirty-seven pounds. He carried it in one hand from his workshop to the water's edge. The canoe was the lightest craft on the river and much was expected of it in the regatta that was dated about three days later. The first person to be handed the paddle and allowed to take this canoe out on the river and over the race-course was Jim Dickson from Campbellford. H. H. had promised him that he might use the canoe in the boys' race.

Another canoe built to replace the first one weighed forty-two pounds. The first one came to its end when it was run on a rock during the deer season. Both canoes were built on cruising lines and were sixteen feet long. On one occasion, while discussing the boats, Mr. Pollock was known to have said that the nails in the thirty-seven pound boat weighed more than the wood.

Trappers Move Up.

"There was a time," said Mr. Pollock this afternoon, "when a trapper was looked down upon. He wasn't considered up to much. But now look at them! Every farmer that has a pond big enough for half a dozen rats is trapping them. Frog-catchers were not considered very high up the social scale either. But I bought and paid for this house with 'frog money'."

It was learned that in one season Mr. Pollock had sold to dealers and consumers in New York City 8,460 pounds of frogs' legs. This means more than four tons, and the average price paid him was fifty cents a pound. He pos-

CHEESE SHOWS IMPROVEMENT IN ONTARIO

District Dairymen Hold Meeting in Campbellford Yesterday.

COMMISSION SPEAKS.

George H. Barr is Proud of Improvement in Ontario in Past Year.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Although the attendance at the dairy mens district meeting was not large the results of the years work was very satisfying to the members of the association. The meeting was held in the council chambers of the Public Library at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. J. A. Murray district cheese instructor was the first to address the meeting and outlined the year's work. He expressed the opinion that the grades were not too high, but could not furnish any definite information for the present season since the reports were not yet issued.

James Irwin, chief dairy instructor for the district showed that Ontario cheese had graded 96.4 percent first grade. There had been 161,848 boxes graded at Belleville during the past season and this was an increase of more than fifty thousand over 1927. The season was one week longer this year. All the figures quoted by Irwin for the past four years showed a general upward trend for this period with a slight falling off for 1927. There was one item in the manufacturing process which had caused a little trouble, rancidity. One maker whose name was not mentioned had turned out whole lots of second grade cheese. It was found that the farmers were not sending their milk to the factories daily. This was changed and when the milk began to arrive every day, the condition was eliminated. Some cheese had been a little too salty. Some had been a little poorly colored on account of old colouring material having been used. This year there had been more evidence of gas than usual and this was believed due to the rank growth of pasture and not the fault of the makers or factories. Generally speaking, Mr. Irwin claimed that the improvement had been remarkable and he hoped that the good work would continue another year.

Cheese Boxes Poor

There was not complete satisfaction where the cheese boxes were concerned. But it is expected that there would be better boxes for next season. The present boxes were causing a great deal of trouble with shipments to England. In some cases the cheese and boxes had been waxed and this aided considerably in removing the cheese from the box without damaging the container. Green heading had also caused trouble during the past year and in all this district Peterborough alone was free from this trouble.

Regarding the special grading of cheese which would make the product sell at a slightly advanced price. Mr. Irwin expressed himself as not approving of the method since it would, he thought, tend to lower the price and standard of the cheese generally. In closing, he reminded those present of the convention to be held in Belleville on December 5th and 6th and that they were all expected to be present if at all possible.

Appointed Director

George H. Lebarr, Dairy Commissioner for Ontario, was the principal speaker for the afternoon. Before beginning his remarks, he presided at the nomination proceeding which resulted in Alfred Merrill being appointed director for this county to the Eastern Ontarion Dairymen's association in 1929.

For the past three years, Mr. Barr said, he had been in the habit of saying things to the Ontario dairy men and those of this county which were not as complimentary as might have been desired. But after seeing the remarkable progress which had been made this year he did not feel inclined to take anything back anything that he had said. But he thought that any person who was

MUCH FEED GRAIN IS USED FOR SEED

Amount of Weed Seed Sown Deplorable, Says Advisory Board Member.

It was deplorable the amount of weed-seeds sown in seed grain last spring, M. P. Mountain, of Solsgirth, Manitoba, told the members of the Seed Advisory Board at the annual meeting of that body in Ottawa recently. A neighbor of Mr. Hountain's, it was asserted, had his farm practically ruined through sowing weedy oats shipped into Manitoba this spring.

Under the present system of grain distribution there is little to prevent feed grain being used as seed. Cars of ungraded oats, for instance, can be purchased in one province, moved into another, and without cleaning or grading can be sold without mentioning the word seed. Undoubtedly this condition is responsible for the steady spread of weeds in many districts of the country, according to observers in close touch with the seed situation.

Methods of preventing this sort of thing were discussed at the Ottawa meeting and it was suggested that in the case of grain not consigned to the terminal ports for export as grain, some control should be exercised by the authorities. One member outlined a plan whereby it would be made compulsory for the shipper of such grain to send along a certificate stating that the same was for use as feed only and the government inspectors would be given a record of such shipments.

Members of the Advisory Board expressed themselves in full sympathy with any method which would give the proper authorities control over interior grain shipments, Mr. Mountain stating that he would gladly support anything that could be done to prevent the distribution of uncleaned and weedy grain in the West. His statement was also endorsed by D. H. Galbraith of Vulcan, Alberta, another member of the Advisory Board.

Snapshots in natural colors may be possible if a new type of roll film shortly to be put on the market comes up to its inventor's claims.

Marmora

(Examiner Correspondent.)

MARMORA, Nov. 7.—The monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee, held at the Hub on Monday evening, was again well attended. R. A. Elliott presided. W. Williams read out eleven suggestions which had been received during the past month. In his report for the Competitive committee, H. F. Berry mentioned that four of these had merited prizes. He also announced that the flag again went to the silver plant and that the general retain the star. W. J. Cottrell touched on the findings of the Inspection committee. The chairman appointed J. A. Rice to act as floating member for November. Prone method practices were reported as having been carried out in the silver plant and at the repair shop. H. F. Berry will carry out similar practices at the nickel plant during the current month. C. H. Buskard had another creditable statement to make regarding the funds of the Benevolent Relief Board. W. R. Reynolds, in touching upon the activities of the Publicity committee, referred to the recent slogan contest. Prize winners and slogans are appended:

First prize, Crawford Bergevin; slogan, safe and sound, homeward bound.

Second prize, Ralph Neal; slogan, safety first, second, third and always is safety first.

Third prize, Sidney Burnett; slogan, the bridge of safety should span every industry.

Forty-eight entries were received.

Messrs. Reynolds and Elliott then spoke on the matter of the safety mass meeting to be held on Nov. 21st, when the chief speaker will be Mr. Dixon, master mechanic of the Dunlop Company. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1928

OLD HOME WEEK.

The City Council has put the seal of its approval upon the proposal to hold an old home week in Peterborough next year, and has voted $1,000 to meet the preliminary expenses involved.

The success of the undertaking will depend upon the co-operation accorded by local organizations and by individual citizens.

If the interest and enthusiasm that distinguished Peterborough's celebration of the Diamond Jubilee are displayed in connection with the old home week there need not be the slightest worry as to the result.

Mayor Denne proposes to call a public meeting shortly for organization purposes, and The Examiner urges a hearty response on the part of the public.

Peterborough's old home week should be a red-letter event in the city's history.

FOR CANADIAN UNITY.

The movement launched by the Canadian Advisory Committee of Rotary International in an attempt to mobilize the Rotary Clubs of this country, now nearly one hundred in number, with a selected membership of nearly six thousand in the principal communities of Canada, in support of a practical program for the promotion of Canadian unity, deserves warm commendation and encouragement.

It is recognized that there are physical and racial difficulties to delay such a development in Canada, but their existence is all the more reason why a determined effort should be made to overcome the obstacles and bring about an intelligent national spirit in this country.

The program adopted by the Canadian Advisory Committee and approved by Rotary International calls for the promotion of Canadian citizenship and national unity, through a better acquaintance and understanding among the Provinces of Canada, the races in Canada, and the urban and rural citizens of Canada, by the propagation of the spirit of Rotary in the Dominion, through the proper observance of Dominion Day, the use of a standard version of "O Canada," and due respect for the national flag and anthem.

In all these things the Rotarians should have general support.

The success of such a campaign would mean much to the whole country.

THE DEER SUPPLY.

The St. Catharines Standard disagrees with The Examiner's views in regard to the high license fee charged United States hunters. Arguing instead for an open-door policy in this respect, the Standard says:

"It is not quite so plain that a snap judgment on this question is right. Is the supply of big game really dwindling as claimed? And if it is dwindling, are the hunters to blame? There is reason to believe that wolves do more damage to deer than the vast army of sportsmen who invade the bush for a short time each autumn. And most of these parties come out with their full quota of deer. Forest fires also raise havoc with game life. But Northern Ontario is a vast preserve, and with Algonquin Park where shooting is prohibited there is not much danger of extermination. Corrective measures to keep the deer are in order at all times. There are many States of the Union where conservation has been carried on to great public benefit. Study should be given the problem from this angle. And at the same time, every encouragement given to American sportsmen to come over into Canada. The Canadian deer and moose season is a wonderful asset to the country, and every measure should be taken to keep this season perpetually in vogue."

This opinion notwithstanding, The Examiner is convinced that it is right in its contention that the advent of rapid motor transportation, aided by road improvements, has completely changed the situation, and that unless the fee for non-residents is made high enough to keep out the pot-hunters from the northern States the hunting grounds in the Province would be rapidly cleaned out, just as the northern lakes are being fished out by American visitors. For the United States sportsman who wants to come to Ontario for a couple of weeks' holidays in the hunting season there should be a warm welcome, but the non-resident whose only ambition is to make a flying visit to the north, secure a deer and motor home again as quickly as possible, would soon kill off the supply of deer if the license fee were lowered.

A HOOVER TRIUMPH.

While the returns from many States were far from incomplete at the early hour this morning when this article was being written, there were enough figures of the United States election available to show a smashing victory for Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee, over Governor Al. Smith, the Democratic standard-bearer.

Hoover not only won the electoral votes of those States usually found in the Republican column, defeating Smith in his home State of New York, but he showed unexpected strength in States that had been claimed by Democratic managers and placed by independent observers in the doubtful list, and even broke into the solid South and has apparently captured Democratic strongholds there.

Various reasons will be assigned for the result, and all of them probably had some bearing on the vote. The sudden shift of the Democratic candidate away from the traditional lower tariff policy of his party, the recognition of Hoover's unusual qualities, the dry attitude of the rural voters and their objection to Smith's views on prohibition—all these had their effect on the situation, as undoubtedly had the religious issue, the later probably cutting in as deeply as any other factor.

So far as administrative ability and experience of national and international problems are concerned, Mr. Hoover goes to the White House with greater assets than almost any other President has possessed. His handling of the food relief situation during the war made him a world figure, and his service in the Cabinet of the last two Presidents has given him a close acquaintance with government problems and responsibilities.

Thus armed he should make a good President, unless the very richness of his talents prove a handicap. There is always the danger of a leader being so endowed with ability that he loses sight of the need of surrounding himself with strong men and attempts to take too much upon his own shoulders, and, on the other hand, there has been good government and able administration under Presidents whose statesmanship and knowledge of the science of government were to say the least mediocre.

Mr. Hoover in his various important posts has, however, shown tact and judgment in selecting his assistants, and his record gives reason to believe that as chief executive he will call to the service of the people of the United States a truly capable and able Cabinet.

As for the loser, it is difficult to find anything but admiration, even among those Canadians who did not see eye to eye with him on his attitude toward prohibition. The world loves a fighter, and Governor Smith has indeed proved to be during the campaign the Happy Warrior. His has been the dominating figure in the battle, his rapid-fire speeches and radio addresses have been responsible for the unusual interest shown in the result. Without him the campaign would have been a dreary, colorless affair, and although Governor Smith has found that he was attempting to carry an impossible handicap, he has the satisfaction of knowing that he fought until the last ditch and made a better showing than any other Democratic candidate could possibly have done under the same conditions.

And in his recollections of the reception that was given him by the people of his native city of New York last Saturday the redoubtable "Al." has a mental picture that will stay with him all his life. Few men have been tendered such an ovation, and the memory of it will help to make Governor Smith forget his defeat of yesterday, his second in twenty-one appeals to the electors.

From a Canadian viewpoint, the election of Hoover will be regarded as especially important by reason of his higher-tariff-on-farm-products pledge made in his last big speech of the campaign, which if carried out will undoubtedly make it correspondingly difficult for Canadian farmers to find an American market for their products.

WHEAT VALUES HOLD WELL.

While prices of wheat for weeks past have been at a level considerably lower than that which prevailed previously, the return to the farmers is understood to have been substantial, and the Western grain-growers will be in a considerably improved position as a result of the crop. Recently, in fact, there has been a tendency shown for prices to move upward rather than down, and it is hoped that the low levels seen early in September will not again be approached during this crop year.

The decline which has taken place is not out of the way when the size of the crop on this Continent is considered. It is evident that consumption so far this season has been heavier than was anticipated some time ago. The exports from Canada during September and August were much larger than those for the same two months in 1927, and while statistics for October are not yet available, it is believed that they will also make a favorable showing. Moreover, the Canadian milling companies are said to be well booked up with orders, which will mean that considerable wheat will be taken off the market for milling purposes.

During the past week a flurry in prices occurred when one of the candidates for the presidency of the United States promised to make efforts for the relief of the farmers if he were elected. Both candidates are ready, no doubt, to offer inducements of this kind. It will probably take more than this, however, to maintain wheat markets at a higher level. Millers and regular grain men from this time on will regard the progress of the crop in Australia and the Argentine as a more powerful market factor than any pre-election promises by candidates for the United States presidency.—Monetary Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now the people of the United States can settle down to business again.

Incidentally, Canadian radio fans will be able to listen to something besides political propaganda.

A new battle of the century looms up in the Sifton-Ferguson clash.

One trouble with United States politics is that there are too many people who have the same ambition as the golfer—trying to make a hole in one.

Mr. Hoover forgot to mention whether or not his higher tariff will include professional hockey players from Canada.

The Windsor hockey team will be called the Bulldogs, probably, according to the theory, that every dog has his day.

If you are not mentioned in the first volumes of "Great Men of Canada," there's always a chance of another book being issued.

A British airman has flown at the rate of 319.57 miles per hour. That should make some of our motor speed fiends give up in despair.

Joliette, Que., is to have a December by-election as the result of the elevation of the sitting member to the bench. And the Conservative candidate will probably decide when it is all over that there is no Santa Claus.

The Attorney-General discussed the enforcement of the Liquor Control Act in an address the other night, but if he said anything about the Brien charges the press reports fail to carry it.

GOD'S MINUTE.

This is His commandment, that we believe.—I John 3:23.

Our Father, Who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. We thank Thee for the day that is before us, with its opportunities, its privileges, its unexpected pleasures, and its disappointment, as well. We rejoice in the opportunity to serve Thee, to witness for Thee in our intercourse with men. May we be ever ready to display a sympathetic interest in the welfare of those with whom we mingle in the home, the train, the busy street, the office and the shop. As we look back over the life of our Lord, we find that wherever He moved among men they were conscious of a rising hope within them, their spirits were quickened, and they faced life's tasks with new courage and hopefulness. Grant, our Father, that we, too, may be used this day, through the Holy Spirit, in making Christ very real to someone. May we find keen enjoyment in the work which we have been called upon to do, and may we seek to know Thy will in the commonplace duties which in Thy providence have been assigned to us. When discouragement confronts us and when obstacles are placed in our paths—yes, even when perhaps we may not have any tangible evidence on which to base our hope—maybe then trust Thee fully and completely, for Thou art our Father and our God. Amen.

TORONTO, Nov. 7—Four hundred cattle were left unsold from Monday, making around one thousand for sale yesterday.

Trade is developing slowly, as seems to be the usual thing for a Tuesday market.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 7 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was fair and sales of No. 3 Northern were made at two cents per bushel under the Winnipeg November option, c.i.f. Bay ports. There was also an improved demand from local buyers for American corn and sales of two cargoes were made for shipment from Chicago. The trade in other lines of grain for domestic account was rather quiet, but the undertone was steady.

A fair trade was done in Spring and Winter wheat flour and values were unchanged.

The milifeed trade continued active and prices for all lines were firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady and prices were unchanged.

The supply of fresh eggs continued scarce and dealers were forced to turn their attention to United States sources in order to keep up with the good demand. Prices were very firm. On account of the scarcity of fresh eggs there was a good demand for storage grades. Receipts were 804 cases.

The potato trade was fair and the tone was about steady. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick Green Mountains were made at 83c per bag of 90 lbs., and in bulk of 65c per 90 lbs., with Prince Edward Island Cobblers at 74c per bag of 90 lbs., and 60c per 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

Imported beans were in good demand at $5.25 per bushel for choice white hand-picked grades.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter and values were steady. Receipts were 166 packages.

A feature of the cheese trade was the improved demand from spot buyers, but values were slightly lower. Receipts were 6,140 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—Yesterday's quotations on No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids ranged from 40 to 40¼ cts. per pound, and for No. 2 pasteurized and No. 1 unpasteurized, from 39 to 39½ cents per pound. The market was quieter than on Monday, and steady, but undertone was stronger on the Curb Market. Recent advances are attributed to good demand prevailing at principal markets. The jobbing price of highest quality creamery prints, without cartons, at the close of last week averaged 43.11 cts. per pound, as compared with 42.77 cts. per pound at the close of the previous week. The market gain for the week to date is a full cent a pound above those recorded on Tuesday a week ago.

New York advices are to the effect that the steamship Devon left New Zealand on Tuesday last with 14,500 boxes of butter for New York on optional bill of lading, and the disposition of this consignment will undoubtedly depend on the condition of the New York market on arrival there.

Following the weakness in evidence on country boards at the week-end, the cheese market opened steady and dull on Monday, with very little business passing. There was a limited amount of buying again yesterday on the spot market and prices were mostly unchanged. Dealers were quoting a nominal range of from 21½ to 22 cents per pound for No. 1 large colored, paraffined and government graded, delivered Toronto.

A Thought

A TRUE CITIZEN.

The true Christian is the true citizen, lofty of purpose, resolute in endeavor, ready for a hero's deeds, but never looking down on his task because it is cast in the day of small things; scornful of baseness, awake to his own duties as well as to his rights, following the higher law with reverence and in this world doing all that in his lies, so that when death comes he may feel that mankind is in some degree better because he has lived.—Theodore Roosevelt.

DISTRICT CHURCHES HOLD ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

Rev. Charles W. Bishop Conducts Services in Marmora United Church.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

Rev. M. R. Brown is Speaker at Roseneath Anniversary Services.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Nov. 7.—Rev. Charles W. Bishop, M.A., D.D., principal of Albert College, Belleville, was the special preacher at the anniversary services on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. in Marmora United Church, which was prettily decorated with dahlias and ferns. In the morning the choir sang very effectively the anthems, "I Lay My Sins on Jesus" by William Baines, and "Praise My Soul, the King of Heaven" by Sir John Goss. An inspiring message was given, based on Acts II, 1.

Evening Service.

Dr. Bishop chose for his text John VI, 68: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." During this service the choir, augumented by Deloro choir composed of twenty-two voices, sang two anthems, "Lift Up Your Heads" by John L. Hopkins, and "More Love to Thee, O Christ", by Cyrus S. Mallard. Commencing what proved to be a forceful discourse, Dr. Bishop said, "We are attracted to this text in this particular stage in our Christian cause because the situation suggested by it has a striking correspondence to the situation abroad in the Chirstian cause to-day. These words of Peter came as a bright ray of hope across a situation dark and discouraging." The preacher then referred to the situation which made the answer to Peter so significant. "The time had come when the popular tide was turning against Jesus. The backs of people were turned towards Him because He had disappointed their political hopes. He had applied a test to His followers which they found difficult to cope with. He had been teaching what to them were mysteries." 'These are hard sayings, who can follow them?' Heed their remark. "The great secession", said the preacher, "occurred when the outer tide seemed likely to affect the inner circle of Christ's followers. Just at that moment there flashed out of the intuitive mind of the impulsive apostle, the thought, 'Lord, to whom shall we go?' The apostles caught the severity of the test and applied it. They said within themselves, 'If Jesus does not understand this situation with regard to Christ, the striking correspondence of the situation with regard to Christ, then as now, Dr. Bishop continued, "For a generation or so past there has been relatively a turning away from Jesus Christ. It had been so in the great realm of national relationship, else how could the events of 1914 have occurred? Then was the Prince of Peace brushed aside as being impractical. The prince with clanking sword took the forefront of the stage and plunged nations into war. The same thing occurred in the fields of business and industry. In a broad and general sense, it can be truly stated that business and industry pronounced Jesus as impractical. In their business aspects, many followers of Jesus Christ turned from Him at the same time there have come out attitudes and pronouncements which have shot across the horizon as Peter's outburst did. The late Henry Waterson said shortly before his death, 'Surely the future looks black enough, yet it holds a hope, a single hope. One power only can rescue and save us. That is the Christian religion. Democracy is a side issue. The paramount thing underlying Christianity is Jesus Christ and Him crucified.' George Bernard Shaw has also said, 'There are more people to-day who feel that in Christ is the only hope of the world, than from Time's beginning.'" Dr. Bishop next dealt with two causes of the present turning of the mind towards the things of Jesus Christ. The effect of the Great War in the things it revealed, serving as a great headlight whose searching rays flashed along the pathway of civilization, was one cause elaborated on. The other cause is the wonderful development of science whereby great secrets of nature are unlocked. "So much as science done," declared the preacher, "that many following it, thought religion was unnecessary. But a change has come. They began to see that while science could answer that simple word 'What?' in revealing wonderful facts, it could not answer 'Why' and declare the purpose of such things. Science must be accompanied by equal moral purposes and spiritual control." The test which comes to the Christian Church to-day was touched upon in conclusion. "Men and women looking earnestly and desperately for Christ, come to the church. Will they find Christ in the message and in the fellowship—Christ in His human eminence and Divine power?" The sermon ended with words of a noted rationalist which included this appeal, "Jesus Christ, come back. Bring the love which binds all hearts as one." At the close of the service, the announcement was made that over Four Hundred Dollars had been received at the two services in response to an appeal for a free-will offering.

HAVELOCK UNITED.

The Rev. A. B. Going, B.A., of Peterborough, was the special speaker at the Havelock United Church on Sunday on the occasion of the re-opening services and celebration of the thirty-second anniversary of the church. Large congregations were in attendance and inspiring sermons were delivered at both services.

The pastor, the Rev. W. R. Archer, introduced Mr. Going, as a friend whom he had known for years. He also extended greetings to the members of the congregation on the occasion of their anniversary and welcomed the visitors from other congregations. Mr. Going, before announcing his text, said he regarded it as a privilege to attend anniversary services on this ocasion. He had attended a good many in the last forty-five years and he knew what an aniversary meant to a congregation. He was also pleased to renew friendship with the members of Bay of Quinte Conference. At present he was a member of the Hamilton Conference but he intends making a transfer.
